ABOUT THE COMMISSIONER

Deane R. Beman

Born: April 22, 1938

Birthplace: Washington, DC

Family: Wife, Judy; five children

Entering his 12th year as Commissioner of the PGA TOUR, Deane R. Beman has overseen the most explosive period of growth in the TOUR's history, since succeeding Joseph C. Dey, Jr., on March 1, 1974.

During the Beman administration, the "business side" of the PGA TOUR has shown dramatic growth and now includes many heretofore uncharted paths, each designed to help encourage continued prosperity and to ensure the future of the game.

PGA TOUR Investments, Inc., though still in its relative infancy after just three years, has already grown to include 13 "Stadium Golf" facilities nationally. In addition to providing state-of-the-art tournament golf arenas, Tournament Players Clubs have been instrumental in the growth of PGA TOUR assets, which have climbed from $730,000 to more than $24 million during the Beman era.

PGA TOUR Properties, the joint marketing venture of the TOUR and PGA of America, continues to make steady progress in its quest to open new opportunities in golf for commercial sponsors and the TOUR's members.

PGA TOUR Productions, being introduced this year, is the TOUR's first-ever in-house TV/audio-visual production entity, the creative possibilities of which are nearly limitless. The long-range goals of Productions include the ability to produce the TOUR's non-network, live golf telecasts, though a prudent step-at-a-time approach is being followed in the start-up years.

Other important innovations introduced during the Beman administration include a professional Agronomy department, the Official Statistics program, electronic Vantage Scoreboards, and the Diversified Products physical conditioning facility.

Competitively, the Beman era has witnessed the birth of the Senior PGA TOUR and Tournament Players Series, which have increased playing opportunities for professional golfers from 45 events to more than 80. Prize money has increased from $8.2 million in 1974 to nearly $30 million this year.

The Player Retirement Plan, inaugurated in 1983, has already contributed $2 million toward the future benefit of active Plan participants, and larger contributions are expected in future years.

Charity, easily the TOUR's leading money winner during the Beman era, continues to benefit at a yearly record pace. Contributions by American Golf Sponsors to charitable organizations rose to another unprecedented total of $9.4 million in 1984, up more than 20 percent from the previous year alone.

During his active years as a player, Beman established an enviable slate of accomplishments, compiling one of the great amateur records of all time. He won United States Amateur titles in 1960 and 1963 and the British Amateur championship in 1959. As an amateur, Beman was a member of four Walker Cup teams, four World Amateur Cup teams and three U.S. Americas Cup squads.

At the age of 29, in 1967, he left a prosperous insurance brokerage firm in Bethesda, MD, to join the PGA TOUR as a full-time player. During his six-year professional career, he won the 1969 Texas Open, 1970 Greater Milwaukee Open, 1972 Quad Cities Open and 1973 Shrine-Robinson Classic.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE PGA TOUR

The precise start of the PGA TOUR defies documentation. We know, for example, that professionals competed against each other from the earliest days of the game in this country. We know, too, that the first United States Open, held in 1895 at Newport, R.I., attracted a field of 10 professionals and one amateur. A second professional tournament, the Western Open, was first held in 1899. It has now observed its 80th anniversary and continues to thrive on the PGA TOUR with a youthful spirit.

However, it would be stretching history beyond reason to say the PGA TOUR started with the Western Open in 1899 because there was not a "tour" at that time. Tournaments continued to spring up across the country during the first decade of this century but they lacked continuity. American-born professionals were rapidly improving and, in 1911, John McDermott became the first home-bred to win the U.S. Open.

In 1913 a commercially-backed "tour" by Englishmen Harry Vardon and Ted Ray helped to popularize the game in this country as the pair attracted "record" crowds everywhere they played. That September a 20-year-old "local boy," Francis Ouimet, defeated both of the visitors in a playoff for the United States Open Championship at Brookline, Mass., and his victory became a golf benchmark. Suddenly, golf became Page One news and a game for everyone.

The forerunner of today's PGA TOUR is traced to the early Twenties when, in the winter, tournaments were held on the West Coast, Texas, and Florida. Golfers played their way into the East and up to Pinehurst in the spring. Those years have been recalled by Johnny Farrell, one of the most active players of that decade and the next, as well as the 1928 U.S. Open champion: "Those tournaments gave the boys some activity in the off-season because most were busy at their clubs in the summer. The summer was when the golf associations would hold regional and national title events."

Resorts, hotels, and Chambers of Commerce realized the publicity value that professional golf brought to their facilities and more tournaments sprang up. Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, and Bobby Jones became folk heroes and the Tour was taking shape.

By the Thirties the Tour was growing, and with the PGA of America providing leadership, it attracted throngs despite the financially depressed years at the beginning of the decade. One statistic from those days stands out now with economic poignancy: Paul Runyan was the leading money winner of 1934 with $6,767. Late in the decade the name of Sam Snead started to appear in headlines with regularity. Then, as the Forties started, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson, and a host of others gained fame.

After World War II, the Tour became more structured than ever before and continued to grow in popularity until it exploded as the Fifties were turning into the Sixties. (Elsewhere in this TOUR Book, our records such as leading money winner, growth of our purses, etc., reflect this growth.)

About this time television began playing a dual role. Telecasts of PGA TOUR events inspired millions to try the game, and, at the same time, the TV rights fees sent purses rolling upward. The bulk of rights fees, which are distributed by the PGA TOUR to all co-sponsors, have gone back into purses, accounting for the doubling of prize money in the last decade.

It was late in 1968 when the touring professionals picked up the reins of control of the Tour. Joseph C. Dey was the first Commissioner of what was then called the Tournament Players Division. He served from early 1969 through February 28, 1974, and was succeeded by Deane R. Beman, who took office on March 1, 1974.

During the Beman administration, the value of tournament purses has escalated at an unprecedented rate, PGA TOUR assets have grown from $730,000 in 1974 to more than $24 million today, and total revenues have increased from $3.9 million to nearly $20 million in the same time span.

The competitive scope of the PGA TOUR is much broader than a decade ago, due to the introduction of the Senior PGA TOUR and Tournament Players Series in recent years.

In October of 1980, the PGA TOUR moved to its present National Headquarters Building in Ponte Vedra, FL, and just three weeks later, the Tournament Players Club at Sawgrass (owned and operated by the TOUR) beckoned in the era of Stadium Golf.

The Tournament Players Club concept has since been expanded to other cities, and a burgeoning family of such facilities is already a reality.

ALL EXEMPT TOUR PRIORITY RANKINGS

The 1983 PGA TOUR season represented one of major format change with the introduction of the All Exempt TOUR. For the first time in nearly 20 years, there was no regular ritual of Monday Qualifying for TOUR events; every PGA TOUR member carried exempt status into EVERY open tournament on the circuit.

The result is a PGA TOUR which frees its members of the unnecessary expense and inconvenience of traveling to a tournament site where a single competitive round (Monday Qualifying) determined whether or not they would be able to compete. The very players who normally could least afford such a financial "gamble" were the ones most penalized by Monday Qualifying.

PGA TOUR membership, under provisions of the All Exempt format, includes a sizeable group of players with "special exemptions", those who finished in the top 150 on the final 1984 Official Money List, the low 50 scorers from the Fall Qualifying Tournament, and past champion members.

Each PGA TOUR player has earned a rung on the priority ranking system that will be used in selecting tournament fields. The complete ranking system, in order of priority, is as follows:

I. SPECIAL EXEMPTIONS

1. Winners of PGA Championship or U.S. Open prior to 1970 or in the last 10 calendar years.
2. Winners of the TOURNAMENT PLAYERS CHAMPIONSHIP in the last 10 calendar years, beginning in 1976.
3. Winners of the WORLD SERIES OF GOLF in the last 10 calendar years.
4. Winners of The Masters in the last 10 calendar years.
5. The leader in PGA TOUR official earnings in each of the last five calendar years.
6. Winners of PGA TOUR co-sponsored or approved events (except Team events) within the last two calendar years, or during the current year. (Note: Former tournament winners who previously were exempt from performance review under previous Tournament Regulations will be exempt for open events as follows: 1981 winners exempt for 1985. Winners of tournaments since 1983 and thereafter are exempt for two years following the end of the calendar year in which they won the events.)
7. Members of the last-named U.S. Ryder Cup team.
8. Leaders in official PGA TOUR career earnings, as follows:
 - a. Players among the Top 50 in career earnings as of the end of the preceding calendar year may elect to use a one-time, one-year exemption for the next year, provided such player has not previously used (under previous versions of these regulations) one or more years of career money list exemption.
 - b. Players among the Top 25 in career earnings as of the end of the preceding calendar year may elect to use this special exemption for a second year, provided that the player has not previously used both years of this exemption and that the player remains among the Top 25 on the career money list.
9. Sponsor exemptions (a maximum of eight, which may include amateurs with handicaps of two or less), on the following basis:
 - a. Not less than two sponsor invitees shall be PGA TOUR Regular, Life or Past Champion members not otherwise exempt.
 - b. Not less than two of the top 50 finishers from the last Qualifying Tournament, if not all of them can otherwise be accommodated.(Note: PGA TOUR members may receive unlimited number of sponsor invitations. Non-TOUR members may receive maximum of five per year.)
10. Two foreign players designated by the Commissioner.

The All Exempt TOUR: (cont'd)

11. The current PGA Club Professional Champion for a maximum of three open events, in addition to any sponsor selections.
12. PGA Section Champion of the Section in which the tournament is played.
13. Four members of the PGA Section in which the tournament is played, who qualify through Sectional qualifying competitions.
14. Four low scorers at Open Qualifying, which shall normally be held on Monday of tournament week.
15. Past champions of the particular event being contested that week, if co-sponsored by the PGA TOUR and the same tournament sponsor (except for Team events), as follows:
 - Winners prior to July 28, 1970 — unlimited exemptions for such events.
 - Winners after July 28, 1970 — ten years of exemptions for such events.
- II. TOP 125, PREVIOUS YEAR'S OFFICIAL MONEY LIST — If not exempt under "Special Exemptions", the top 125 finishers on the previous year's Official Money List, in order of their positions on the list.
- III TPS LEADING MONEY WINNER — The leader of the Tournament Players Series Official Money List for the previous calendar year (Charles Bolling in 1985).
- IV. QUALIFYING TOURNAMENT — The low 50 scorers and ties from the previous year's PGA TOUR Qualifying Tournament, in order of their finish in the tournament.
- V. 126-150, PREVIOUS YEAR'S OFFICIAL MONEY LIST — If needed to fill the field, finishers from 126th through 150th on the previous year's Official Money List, in order of their positions on the list.
- VI. SPECIAL MEMBERS/MEDICAL — If granted by the Commissioner, if not otherwise eligible, and if needed to fill the field, Special Members/Medical.
- VII. PAST CHAMPION MEMBERS — If not otherwise eligible and if needed to fill the field, Past Champion Members, in order of the total number of co-sponsored or approved events won, excluding Team events. If two or more players are tied, the player who is higher on the PGA TOUR Career Money List shall be eligible.
- V II. SPECIAL TEMPORARY — If during the course of a PGA TOUR season, a non-member of the PGA TOUR wins an amount of official money (e.g., by playing in PGA TOUR events through sponsor exemptions, Open Qualifying, etc.) equal to the amount won in the preceding year by the 150th finisher on the official money winning list will be eligible for the remainder of the year.
- X. TEAM CHAMPIONSHIP WINNERS — If not otherwise eligible and if needed to fill the field, winners of cosponsored team championships, in order of the total number of team championship tournaments won. If two or more players are tied based on the number of such tournaments won, the player who is higher on the official PGA TOUR career money list shall be eligible.
- X. VETERAN MEMBERS — If not otherwise eligible and if needed to fill the field, Veteran Members (players who have made a minimum of 150 cuts during their career), in order of their standing on the PGA TOUR career money list.

"STADIUM GOLF" . . . GROWING BY LEAPS AND BOUNDS

Born in 1980 with the opening of the Tournament Players Club at Sawgrass, a bold new concept in golf course design has swept the country, as the PGA TOUR's Tournament Players Club network had grown to 13 members by late 1984, with several others in negotiation stages.

While all of the courses vary in design, and though a number of architects are being utilized, the one common thread which binds them and makes them unique from anything seen previously is the concept of "Stadium Golf", as conceived by PGA TOUR Commissioner Deane Beman and demonstrated by the design of Pete Dye, who created the TPC at Sawgrass.

The TPC at Sawgrass was designed to be the site of the annual Tournament Players Championship and as a home course for the members of the PGA TOUR. It was also intended, however, for the course to serve as a prototype for future "Stadium Golf" facilities the TOUR might develop.

The success of the original course, because of its revolutionary design and its Stadium effects, has spawned a flurry of demand across the nation for courses which embody the elements that made the TPC at Sawgrass unique.

The most prominent feature of the courses is the attention paid to making the sites a most enjoyable experience for the galleries. Large spectator mounds and amphitheaters abound, affording fans the best possible vantage points for viewing golf tournaments.

In fact, Tournament Players Clubs are developed only in places where such courses will substantially improve tournament sites. In short, they are built with the guidance and expertise of the PGA TOUR and financed by the local real estate developers, to provide fans with the best possible atmosphere in which to enjoy tournament golf, and to offer a challenging and rewarding golf experience for members. Only in cases where local tournament sponsoring organizations whole-heartedly endorse such deals are Tournament Players Clubs practical or prudent.

Indeed, the first three "offspring" of the Players Club at Sawgrass, the TPC at Plum Creek at Castle Rock, CO, the TPC at Eagle Trace at Coral Springs, FL, and the TPC of Connecticut at Cromwell, CT, have all hosted a PGA TOUR or Senior PGA TOUR event already.

Not only do the Players Clubs provide for the fans' comfort and enjoyment, the courses are also designed so as to be cost-efficient in terms of maintenance for member play.

Future Tournament Players Clubs either under construction or in the planning stages as of late 1984 include the layouts at PGA West (Palm Springs, CA), at Avenel (Potomac, MD), at The Woodlands (Houston, TX), Prestancia (Sarasota, FL), Monte Carlo (Ft. Pierce, FL), at Canyon Springs Ranch (San Antonio, TX), Star Pass (Tucson, AZ), Scottsdale, AZ, and at Las Colinas (Irving, TX).

In keeping with the already established Players Clubs, all of the new courses are destined to host a PGA TOUR cosponsored event upon completion.

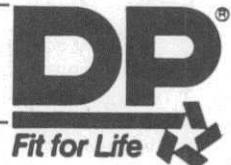

While there is ultimately no definitive number of Tournament Players Clubs planned, the PGA TOUR will always judge a potential site's merits with the concerns of the fans, the developer and the local tournament sponsors in mind.

Suffice it to say, though, the concept of "Stadium Golf" and Tournament Players Clubs will have a significant impact on the golf world for years to come.

The gallery surrounds the 18th green at the Tournament Players Club at Eagle Trace.

DIVERSIFIED PRODUCTS FITNESS TRAINING CENTER

In 1985, the PGA TOUR Marketing Department, in conjunction with Diversified Products, Centinela Hospital Medical Center and Dr. Frank Jobe of the National Athletic Health Institute introduced a program to assist PGA TOUR players in the areas of injury prevention, physical conditioning and rehabilitation.

This newest member of the PGA TOUR "traveling family," the Diversified Products Fitness Training Center, will accompany the TOUR to over 32 events in 1985.

Diversified Products (DP) will provide a mobile Fitness Center that will include: a training room housing a whirlpool and massage table; an exercise room housing state of the art exercise equipment and a players' lounge featuring a television, stereo, wet bar and a full line of vitamins and nutritional products.

In addition, DP will also provide each TOUR player with a personal physical conditioning program based on that individual's current level of physical conditioning and/or that individual's desires.

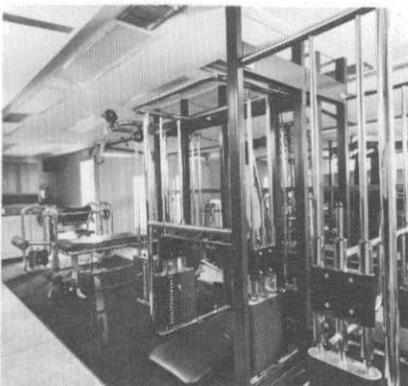

The facility will be staffed by TOUR employees with expertise in the area of athletic training, physical therapy and injuries. In addition, a licensed physician will be available at most TOUR events to diagnose and treat player injuries.

The mobile Fitness Training Center will be housed in a 45' trailer (expandable to 24' wide when parked) and will provide the player with the opportunity to maintain his peak level of performance through good health at absolutely no charge to the individual player.

As is the case with the Vantage Scoreboards, International Harvester is providing the trucks at no charge to the TOUR to power the Fitness Training Center trailer around the country.

Dr. Jobe, a noted Orthopedic Surgeon, will serve as a Medical Consultant for the facility and will assist in the implementation and guidance of this landmark program.

One goal of the PGA TOUR is to provide its players with the best possible atmosphere in which to compete. The Diversified Products Fitness Training Center is a worthy step in that direction and should benefit the TOUR immeasurably in 1985.

The new 45' DP Fitness Training Center contains a complete exercise room featuring state of the art equipment.

CENTINELA HOSPITAL MEDICAL CENTER

To protect the health and fitness of its players, the PGA TOUR has named Centinela Hospital Medical Center as "Official Hospital of the PGA TOUR." Working in conjunction with the PGA TOUR and Diversified Products, the Centinela Hospital team is headed by the internationally recognized orthopedist, Dr. Frank Jobe.

Dr. Jobe, an expert on sports medicine and team physician for several major league teams, will visit a minimum of four TOUR events in 1985 for personal consultations with the players regarding their physical problems and fitness programs.

Chosen as an "Official Hospital of the 1984 Olympic Games", Centinela Hospital has long enjoyed a reputation as a leader in the medical industry. This reputation is so well acknowledged that both the White House and the State Department have chosen the facility as its treatment center whenever the President or other major dignitaries are in the area.

A major aspect of Centinela Hospital's reputation is its expertise in sports medicine. Centinela staff orthopedists are the team physicians for most of the Los Angeles professional teams, as well as many teams and individual athletes in all sports throughout the United States and Canada. In addition to sports medicine, Centinela Hospital is dedicated to injury prevention, performance testing, research, and education.

Housing the National Athletic Health Institute at its Inglewood, California complex, Centinela Hospital stands at the forefront of treatment and research into athletic related health problems. With all that in mind, it was an easy choice for TOUR officials to name Centinela as the "Official Hospital of the PGA TOUR."

Starting early in the 1985 season, Centinela Hospital will provide health examinations and physical fitness testing for PGA TOUR players, and then will develop physical fitness programs for each participant.

Additionally, they will assist in the development of a computer program for the monitoring of the activities associated with the Fitness Training Center provided by Diversified Products.

Finally, Centinela Hospital will conduct research and develop data to use as a foundation for the continued good health of the participating PGA TOUR members.

A combination of two leaders in their fields, Centinela Hospital and Diversified Products should prove to be a winning one for PGA TOUR professionals in 1985 with increased fitness, improved performances, and injury prevention as the end result.

VANTAGE SCOREBOARDS

Despite the many advances made for the spectator at PGA TOUR events over the years, one area was always sadly lagging behind. While new concepts such as "Stadium Golf" made the event more enjoyable for the fan, up-to-the-minute information about action on the course was difficult to obtain. However, that was before the advent of the Vantage Scoreboards.

The electronic Vantage Scoreboard systems that travel the PGA TOUR are indeed a phenomenon. Not only do they bring status reports, current scores, biographical and statistical information, special reports and messages to players and fans spread out over many acres, but they also survive a gamut of weather conditions as well as the vagaries of travel as the two systems leapfrog around the nation.

International Harvester, the number one name in trucks, has provided the PGA TOUR with two diesel engine tractors to power the Vantage trailers around the country.

The trailers will need all the pulling power that the powerful International Harvester tractors can provide as each of the self-contained units contain 20 scoreboards, one "big board" for the 18th green, two Digital PDP computers, scoring terminals for each green, a 1,000-pound capacity crane, 30,000 feet of cable and the rest of the lesser hardware necessary for the system to function.

Since introduced to the TOUR in 1981 through the sponsorship of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, the Vantage Scoreboards have amazed millions of spectators with the speed and accuracy of the information provided, and more is planned in 1984. As the Vantage Scoreboard computers are made compatible with the TOUR's on-site statistical computer and the main computer system at TOUR headquarters, the scoreboards will be providing more up-to-date information on players' statistical standings, how particular holes are playing in relation to par, and a wealth of other information that will add to the enjoyment of attending a PGA TOUR event.

As part of its ongoing commitment to golf, R.J. Reynolds will also continue to bring the Vantage World of Golf display to tournament cities prior to TOUR events and on-site during the event itself. This modern exhibit includes information and displays on the origin of golf, leading players and tournaments, a film on the PGA TOUR, details on the manufacture of modern golf equipment, a putting green for public use and much more.

The Vantage Scoreboards and the Vantage World of Golf are major components of the PGA TOUR's commitment to attract new interest in the game and to make professional golf the world's greatest spectator sport.

Helping to make tournament golf a more enjoyable experience for the fans are the Vantage Scoreboard systems. The two complete systems race around the country powered by International Harvester tractors.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 10—eagles (10).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1975 Arizona State amateur.

John Adams really doesn't remember how old he was when he started to play golf. Smiling, he says, "All I know is I was as young as I could be and still hold a club."

In those days, he does know he played crosshanded and putted the same way. "When I was about three-years old, I finally gave up playing crosshanded, but all my life, I've putted cross-handed."

His father was a golf professional in the Midland, TX, area, but retired when John still was a youngster. However, his father was the man who coached him through the years.

He played in junior events around Texas, although he admits he never won anything. He headed for Brevard Junior College and then off to Arizona State University, and while there, he won the 1975 Arizona State amateur championship.

His success on the PGA TOUR was anything but immediate, but says "I finally found a course I could play, and now we're not playing it any longer."

He was referring to Pinehurst No. 2. In the fall of 1982, he tied with Jay Haas in the Hall of Fame Classic, but lost in the playoff when he bogeyed the second extra hole. However, his check for $27,000 was more than he had won in any single season. It boosted his season earnings to $54,014, and that's more than he had won through his first four years on TOUR combined.

"I was so calm all week," he said, "but after the tournament was over, I became real hyper. I will admit that during the tournament, I was playing so well that I didn't want to quit."

On the second extra hole, Haas made a routine par, but Adams missed the green. He chipped to within 10 feet and his par putt lipped out of the cup.

Although it was his closest brush with victory in his seven years on the TOUR, he has shown steady improvement. Last year, he developed a higher level of consistency and the result was his best money year — by far.

At one stretch early in the year, he made the cut in nine straight tournaments, highlighted by a tie for third place in the USF&G Classic in New Orleans. It was a final-round 67 that boosted him into that position.

"I know if I can develop more consistency," the big, friendly fellow said, "the opportunities to win will be there."

Isao Aoki

EXEMPT STATUS: 1983 tournament winner.

FULL NAME: Isao Aoki

BIRTH DATE: Aug. 31, 1942 BIRTHPLACE: Abiko, Chiba, Japan

RESIDENCE: Tokyo, Japan

FAMILY: Wife, Chie; Joanne (4/17/67)

SPECIAL INTERESTS: Fishing

TURNED PROFESSIONAL: 1964 JOINED TOUR: March, 1981

TOUR VICTORIES: 1983 Hawaiian Open
(TOTAL: 1)

MONEY & POSITION:	1981—$46,420—88	1983—$146,467—34	1984—$64,499—90

BEST 1984 FINISHES: T4—Buick Open; T13—Hawaiian Open.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—15; in money—12; top ten finishes—1; stroke avg.—71.44.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 11—sand saves (.569).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner of 44 tournaments, 41 of them in Japan, plus 1978 World Match Play and 1983 European Open in England . . . Winner 1983 Japan Open. Winner of five Japan PGA Match Play Titles. Played for Japan in 1982, 1983 and 1984 USA vs. Japan Team Matches. Leading money winner five times on Japan PGA Tour.

Isao Aoki hit the shot that was heard around the golfing world in 1983, and Jack Renner still shakes his head in disbelief whenever someone mentions it.

The stage was the Waialae Country Club at the Hawaiian Open and the set was the 18th hole. Renner was in the scoring tent behind the green, carefully going over his card. He was finished with a 19-under par total of 269.

The final group of the day was walking down the 18th fairway, and Isao Aoki was in it. At this point, as he headed for his golf ball in the left rough, some 128 yards from the flagstick on the par five hole, he was one-stroke behind Renner. He needed a birdie to tie, but it would not be easy to get, coming from the tall grass with his third shot.

As Renner studied his card, he heard a roar from the crowd that would shake the palm trees. He assumed Isao had hit the ball close.

Instead, Japan's greatest player had holed out with a pitching wedge for an eagle three and the victory. "This is the greatest thrill of my career," he was to say later. He thus became the first player from Japan ever to win on the PGA TOUR.

He came close to winning again in the Buick Open, but Wayne Levi came from well back to win by one over Aoki and Calvin Peete.

Isao was introduced to golf as a caddy at the Abiko Golf Club while attending Abiko Junior High School. During that time, he was known as the "Tower," after the Tokyo Tower, which resembles the Eiffel Tower, for he was the tallest among the caddies.

He practiced early in the mornings and every evening when there were no members playing the course. Even at that time, it was said he was a good putter and short-game player. Today, if you ask him what is the strongest part of his game, without hesitation, he would say, "putting."

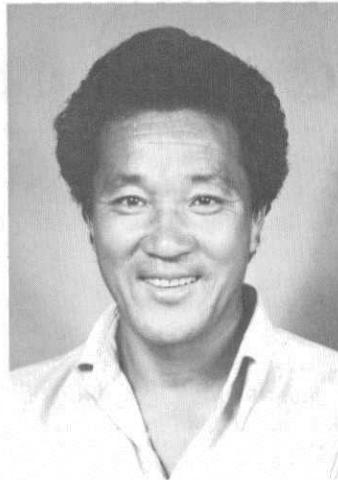

The 1983 Tour statistics support his claim. He was No. 1 in sand saves, No. 2 in putting and No. 3 in driving accuracy.

He turned professional in 1964 but it took him seven long years to win his first tournament, the Kanto PGA. In his 20-year professional career, he has won 41 tournaments in Japan — including five PGA Match Play titles. Twice, he has won in England — the 1978 World Match Play Championship and the 1983 European Open. Five times, he has been Japan's leading money winner.

He has won most of the important events in his homeland, but his most cherished victory came in the Fall of 1983 when he won the Japan Open for the first time. He had been a runner-up on four previous occasions.

Although he had played in the United States for several years at such selected events as the Masters Tournament and the World Series of Golf, he first received prominent national attention when he was paired with Jack Nicklaus for four rounds in the 1980 U.S. Open at Baltusrol. He finished second, only two strokes back.

In 1981, he tied for third in the World Series of Golf and tied for fourth in the PGA Championship, while in 1982, he had another third-place finish in the World Series of Golf, two strokes out of the Craig Stadler-Raymond Floyd playoff.

George Archer will tell you that these days, it's nice to be able to enjoy the scenery and play golf. "I try not to let anything bother me," he has said. "I'm just delighted to be out here playing decently."

So, you can imagine how delighted he was to win again, at age 44, in the Bank of Boston Classic. He was only one stroke behind Joey Sindelar entering the last round at Pleasant Valley Country Club, and then he fired a six-under par 65 and won by six strokes.

He credits his great year - he won $207,543 — to the strict exercise program his wife devised for him. "I get up early every morning," he says, "and exercise for at least 45 minutes. If it wasn't for that program, I couldn't have done as well as I did."

George has been one of the TOUR's finest players for a number of years — when health permitted — but one has to wonder how great he could have been if he had been able to remain healthy. He grins and says, "I'd like to thank my wife publicly for putting up with me and my ailments for the 20-plus years I've been on TOUR."

Twice in the last eight years, George has had major surgery. In 1975, he underwent the knife to repair a torn tendon in his left wrist and his effectiveness in 1974, 1975 and part of 1976 was seriously affected.

He had an excellent 1977, winning $113,944, but he then encountered a back problem that required surgery in early 1979. He had two discs fused and it wasn't until July of that year that he was able to return to the front line. Because of the problem, though, he only won a total of $16,941 in 1978 and 1979.

He came back in 1980 and managed to slip into the 60th position on the money list, and thus assure himself of exempt status.

Over his lengthy career, which started in 1964, George has been known for his putting stroke, so it seems appropriate that he owns the all-time TOUR record for fewest puts in a tournament. In the 1980 Sea Pines Heritage Classic, he only needed 94.

Archer began playing golf at age 12 around his native San Francisco and he gathered an exceptional amateur record before he turned pro 13 years later. In 1963 alone he won the Trans-Mississippi Amateur, the Northern California Open and the San Francisco City title, reached the semifinals of the U.S. Amateur and was low amateur for the third straight year in the Lucky International in his home town.

As a pro he has won 13 events, including three in 1968, but the year following was his most memorable when he captured the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am and his one major championship when he beat out Billy Casper, George Knudson and Tom Weiskopf to take The Masters.

Three-time leader of European PGA Tour Order of Merit, 1976, 1977, 1978.

It was several years ago after Seve Ballesteros made a strong run for his first Masters Tournament title that Jack Nicklaus commented:

"Don't you worry about Seve. He will win several of them before he's through."

The very next Spring, in 1980, Seve did win his first Masters and he won impressively, to say the least. He led by seven strokes after three rounds, and finally won by four. At age 23, he became the youngest ever to win this coveted crown.

Without question, the handsome Spaniard was starting to leave his mark. As they say in the business, this man can play. In fact, most agree that today, there are none better.

He has come a long way in so many ways since he first appeared in a professional golf tournament. The son of a farmer, whose home bordered a golf course, Seve used to caddy and tag along with older brother Manuel.

When Seve was 17, Peter Oosterhuis won the Italian Open, but Seve finished in the top 10. Now, people started to take notice. Two years later, he won his first significant championship, the Dutch Open and gained world-wide attention when he finished second to Johnny Miller in the British Open at Royal Birkdale.

So much has happened since then. He left his mark for the first time in the United States when he came from 10-strokes behind after two rounds to win the 1978 Greater Greensboro Open.

The next year, he won the British Open at Royal Lytham and in 1980 he captured his first Masters Tournament. All along the way, he was winning such events as the French Open, Swiss Open, Japan Open, German Open, the Spanish Open, the World Match play and three times was the No. 1 money winner on the European circuit.

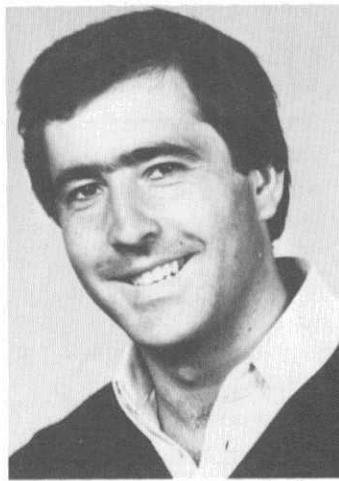

In 1983, he only made eight appearances on the PGA TOUR and won a handsome sum of $210,933. He captured another Masters jacket. Trailing Craig Stadler and Raymond Floyd by one stroke after three rounds, he went on to win by four over Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite.

In June of 1983, he entered the Manufacturers-Hanover Westchester Classic as a warm-up for the United States Open, which was to be played the following week. So, what does he do? He eagled the par five 18th hole the last afternoon to win by two over Stadler and Andy Bean.

This past year, he won the British Open for a second time, shooting a splendid 69 the last day at St. Andrews. He birdied the final hole to win by two over Tom Watson and Bernhard Langer. He also won the World Match Play title again, but two third-place finishes was the best he could do in 15 U.S. appearances.

It is interesting to note that the first time Seve saw the U.S. shores was as an 18-year old in the fall of 1975. He tagged along with brother Manuel and they competed in the Walt Disney World Team Championship, and then he entered the TOUR's Qualifying School. Unfortunately, he didn't make it.

While he has made frequent appearances on the PGA TOUR in recent years, he is playing the Tour this year as a regular member. He joined for the start of 1984.

It has taken a few years, but Dave Barr has emerged as a solid PGA TOUR player. It hasn't been easy for the big fellow from Canada, but he has learned to manage his game well. The result was a $100,000-plus year in 1984.

"I'm scheduling myself a lot better," he said. "I used to be out six-and-seven weeks at a time. Now, I try to limit myself to no more than four straight tournaments, and then take a rest."

A big hitter off the tee, he also cut back on his yardage last year and discovered there was a dramatic improvement in the number of fairways and greens he was able to hit. As a result, he was able to score better.

Dave was highly successful playing his native Canadian Tour before finally earning his PGA TOUR card in the Fall of 1977. He has represented his homeland in four World Cup competitions, and in 1983, he won individual honors.

During his first three years on the TOUR, Dave had his problems. "I used to believe I was a pretty good player," he says, "but during the tough years, you begin to wonder about that. I've had to take a back seat to Dan Halldorson and Jim Nelford among the Canadian players."

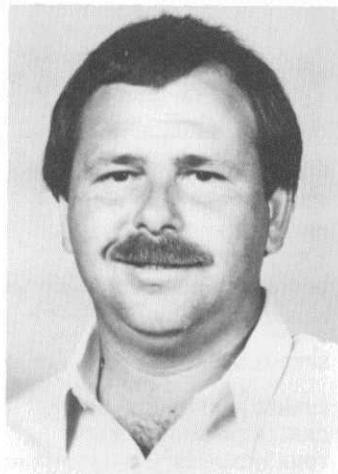

"It did make a difference when Dan won at Pensacola (in the fall of 1980). He suddenly was the one Canadian everyone recognized, but what it also did was make everyone realize there were Canadians who could play and win on the TOUR," he added.

When the final round started at the 1981 Quad Cities Open, Dave was five strokes behind Victor Regalado. A closing 66 shot him into a tie at the end of regulation play with Halldorson, Woody Blackburn, Frank Conner and Regalado.

It was eight holes later (only one playoff in TOUR history has been longer), that Dave managed a par and that was all he needed to gain his elusive triumph.

It was worth $36,000 and that nearly equaled his entire career earnings to that point, and nearly doubled the amount he won in 1980.

"This is great," he said. "It's what we all play for out here. When things are not going well, you sometimes wonder if you made the right decision. Winning makes it all worth it."

Andy Bean has all the tools necessary to be one of the truly great players in the game, and he came close to being the very best in the business in 1984.

You can't look back and think about what might have been, but his followers know he won the Greater Greensboro Open for the ninth victory of his fine career, but they also know he came within a stroke of winning two others. He lost the Honda Classic in a playoff to Bruce Lietzke and the Memorial Tournament in a playoff to Jack Nicklaus.

In addition, he was in the heart of the battle in the Panasonic-Las Vegas Invitational to the final hole before bowing to Denis Watson.

He still enjoyed his most successful money year with well over $400,000 and he had a total of nine top 10 finishes.

Although he has played well the last few years, a wrist injury in 1981 slowed his progress. He only played about one-third of the campaign that year because of a slight fracture near the base of the left thumb.

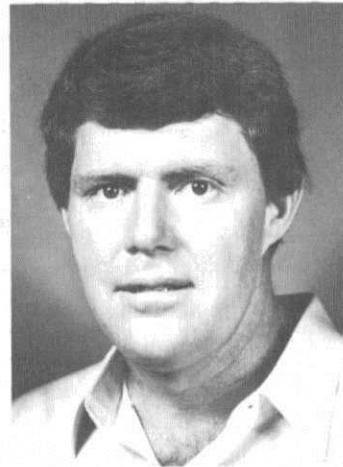

Even though he was able to cash some healthy checks, Andy revealed in the Fall of 1983, "for the first time since I hurt my wrist, I feel I can play the way I want to play. About midway through the year, I could feel the shots coming back. I just have to work on my putting."

In his first TOUR victory at Doral, Andy led all four days on the Blue Monster course, shooting 67-67-71-72—277. The win became a birthday present; he turned 24 on the final day, March 13. He also won the Doral-Eastern Open in 1982.

During his rookie year of 1976, Bean's play was disappointing, especially to himself. "It was mainly temperament," he says. "I knew I had the game to play out here, but when I'd make a mistake I'd get hot at myself, and that would make everything worse. I wasn't able to manage my game."

Andy certainly had the background to become a professional golfer. As a youngster, he lived on Jekyll Island, Ga., where his father was associated with a golf course. When he was 15, the family moved to Lakeland, Fla., where his father bought a course.

"I've been lucky," says Bean, "because my parents never made me do much work around the course. They let me go play." And play he did.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Named Senior Athlete of Year at University of Georgia, 1978. Winner of six college tournaments, including Southern Intercollegiate three years and 1976 All-America Tournament. Three-time All-America. Twice winner Carolinas Junior title and Carolinas Amateur championship.

When Chip Beck first came on the PGA TOUR, those who knew him well from his college days, put out the good word. "Watch this young man. He's a winner."

Each year, he has been getting better and on two occasions in 1983 he came close to getting the elusive first victory, as he tied for second twice. He won nearly $150,000 and it is interesting to note that he led the TOUR in eagles, making 15 of them, and was second in scoring birdies, with 394, just five fewer than leader Hal Sutton.

He followed a similar pattern in 1984 and enjoyed his best money year. He had four third-place finishes in the Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open, where he was one stroke out of the Gary Koch-Gary Hallberg playoff; in the Hawaiian Open; in the Memorial Tournament and also in the Walt Disney World Classic.

His week in Hawaii was highlighted by a 65 the second day and a superb eight-under par 64 in the final round.

One of his bigger disappointments came in the Memorial. He led by one stroke over Jack Nicklaus entering the final round, but a 74 on Sunday dashed his dreams.

"I'm learning all the time," the always smiling Beck related. "I had a great year and I hope I'm learning to be more patient."

He considers driving the ball and chipping as two of the stronger parts of his game and when everything is right, he prefers to play with a slight draw.

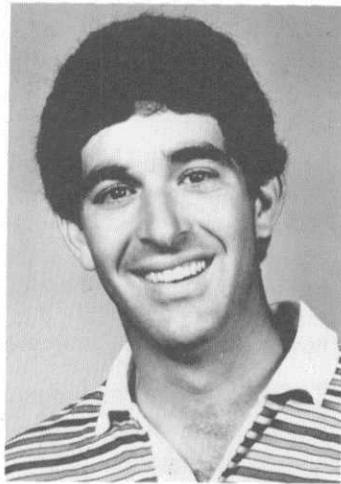

Chip well remembers the day he was introduced to golf. He was only 10-years old at the time, and his mother was going to the Highland Golf Club in Fayetteville, NC, to attend a clinic that was to be given by the head professional.

"I really didn't want to go," Chip says with a laugh, "but she woke me up at 7 a.m. so that we could go together. It was being given on the course where Ray Floyd played as a boy."

Once he started to hit balls, he was hooked. He played all summer and the golf career of Chip Beck was well underway. By the end of the summer, he won the Pee Wee division at the club.

A journalism major at the University of Georgia, he enjoyed considerable success on the Bulldog golf team before setting his sights on the TOUR. As a senior, he was named the Athlete of the Year, and that's the first time a golfer had ever been honored at Georgia. He won six collegiate events, such as the Southern Intercollegiate three times and the All-America championship hosted by the University of Houston. He also won the Dixie Intercollegiate and was an All-America choice three years, twice being on the first team.

Incidentally, in 1973 he was nosed out of the North Carolina State interscholastic title by Scott Hoch. Twice he won the Carolinas Junior title and followed with two victories in the Carolinas Amateur championship.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1976 and 1977 New Mexico State high school titles. Winner 1981 Southland Collegiate Conference.

A few days before he headed for the Southern Open in Columbus, GA, in the Fall of 1983, Ronnie Black confided: "I know I belong on the TOUR after the year I've had. I'm not satisfied, but I know I've played even better than what the money list shows."

At that point, he had quietly accumulated more than $40,000 and was assured of exempt status for 1984. The finest was yet to come.

He was at his career best on the Green Island course and, when most people were cheering Sam Torrance, the flamboyant Scot who stopped off on his way to the Ryder Cup matches, Ronnie came from three-strokes behind the last day to tie Sam at nine-under par 271. Then, Black gained the victory with a six-foot putt for a birdie on the fourth extra hole.

It was just a warm up for the 1984 campaign. His biggest day came on the Kingsmill course in the Anheuser-Busch Classic. He trailed Willie Wood by seven strokes entering the last round, but he shot an eight-under par 63 to edge Wood by a stroke.

He had some other super weeks, such as a tie for third in the Sea Pines Heritage Classic; and, in his first visit to the Masters Tournament, he shot 69-68 the last two days and tied for sixth place.

"I made a considerable step upward," he said. "I didn't putt as well last year, but I drove the ball better."

Ronnie was nine-years old when he first picked up a golf club. His father was the basketball coach at Lovington (NM) High School, so he grew up in a sports atmosphere. "Dad told me then that I couldn't go to the course until I was able to hit the ball from our front yard, across the road and over a fence on the other side. It was a shot of about 75 yards."

His older brother, James, became the head professional at Pinewood Country Club in Beaumont, TX, and as Ronnie became of age, he took him under his wing. "He recruited me for Lamar University and I worked in his shop for awhile," Ronnie said. "Mostly, though, he let me play and practice."

Until he went to Lamar, he had never played on a course with bunkers or one of championship caliber, but he always dreamed of someday playing on the PGA TOUR.

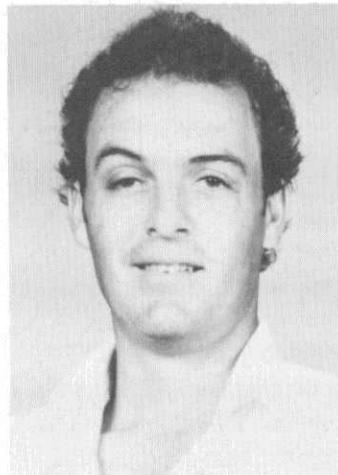

He went to the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1981 and made it. His first stop was the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open in January of 1982 and he recalls, "That was the very first TOUR tournament I had ever seen in person. I was low qualifier at Randolph Park with a 66 and thought I was going to knock everyone dead. I have to admit, I had a rude awakening coming."

"I did a lot of watching the first year," he said, "and I definitely was intimidated. I had never seen talent like that and I had to be the greenest person ever to come on TOUR in recent years."

He only won $6,329 for the year, so it was back to the Qualifying School in the Fall. He finished 39th in his class and headed back out for the 1983 campaign.

When he is playing at his best, he fades the ball "just a hair. I stay away from the draw, because it tends to get away from me," he said.

Most important, though, when he steps on the first tee now, he has no doubts about his ability to play on the PGA TOUR. He knows this is where he belongs.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—5; in money—1; top ten finishes—0; stroke average—74.00.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner of two 1984 Tournament Players Series events, Everett (WA) Open and Victoria (BC) Open. No. 1 money winner on TPS in 1984 with $79,506. Winner, 1983 South African Open, 1980 Pennsylvania State Amateur and five collegiate events. Named second-team All-American in 1981.

There were three events left on the 1984 Tournament Players Series when Charlie Bolling headed for the Everett (WA) Open late in August.

"My goal was to play well in the three tournaments and gain some confidence," he said. "I was hopeful that confidence would carry over into the TOUR's Qualifying School. I had no aspirations about winning any of the three."

Nevertheless, using a new putting grip, he went on to win in Everett and then headed across the border to the Victoria Open in British Columbia. "I wanted to play respectable," he continued, "to show people my win in Everett was not a fluke."

The result was he played exceptionally well and won again. Suddenly, he was the No. 1 money winner on the TPS circuit. The next stop was Sacramento and his goal "was to protect my money lead and earn the exemption for the TOUR in 1985."

He did that. He finished in a tie for third place, only one stroke out of the Pat McGowan-Steve Hart playoff. The final tally gave him $79,506 for the year.

Charlie started to swing golf clubs at the age of 10. He smiles and recalls, "my father bought a set of clubs for my older sister. I suppose I was a little jealous, and I'd take them out in the back yard and swing them. It was a thrill when I realized I could get the ball airborn."

In those days, though, baseball was his sport. He lettered in baseball, soccer and ice hockey in high school, but when he was about 15-years old, he knew golf would be his sport.

Willie Scholl, the head pro at Gulph Mills (PA) Golf Club took him under his wing and "taught me how to play. My folks were members there, but I'd caddy in the morning and then play 36 holes in the afternoon and evening."

When he went on to Duke University, he concentrated on golf. He played reasonably well through his first three years, but not exceptional.

The next year, he dropped out of school and went to Florida. He obtained a job in Lew Worsham's pro shop at Coral Ridge in Fort Lauderdale. "That period was important to my progress," he said. "I made some critical swing changes."

He went back to Duke to complete his studies and during his senior year, he won five events and was named to the second All-American team.

Three times he tried to make it through the PGA TOUR Qualifying School, 1981, 1982 and 1983, and didn't make it. Yet, 1984 was an important year. He won the South African Open early in the year and finished third on the Order of Merit. That earned him an exemption on the European Tour. He played in the first four TPS events in 1984 and then headed for Europe.

"I played marginally in Europe," he said, "but made enough to be exempt for 1985. That was the alternative if something happened and I didn't make it through the 1984 Qualifying School."

Victories in Everett and Victoria settled the issue. They gave him the exemption he needed for this year.

The Texas Open in San Antonio turned out to be a special week for Mark Brooks in 1984. He tied for 17th place and won $5,075. It assured him of a position among the leading 125 money winners for the year and his exempt status.

"I played even par the last round and it got me over the hump," he said. "It definitely was the highlight of the year."

With a smile, he added, "I played Tour School golf. That means I was conservative and nervous. In fact, I was that way for the last two months of the year. I wasn't able to relax."

He qualified for the TOUR in the Fall of 1983, finishing in a tie for seventh place in the six-day test at the Tournament Players Club. He said he encountered no unusual surprises in his first year except "for the amount of golf I played. I never had a real good stretch of golf that would let me go home. I felt I had to stay out and keep playing."

As a result, he was one of the ironmen 1984, competing in 35 events. During the last half of the year, he played in 20 of 22 events. "The last two months, I felt I had to play everything to win enough to be exempt."

"If there was one thing I learned," he continued, "it was scheduling. I'm going to take more time off and I think I'll be more relaxed."

His only top 10 finish in 1984 was a tie for 10th place in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic and he believes he can improve significantly in that area this year.

Mark started to play golf at age eight while visiting his grandfather in Oklahoma. "And, I started on sand greens," he said. He entered tournaments on the local level around his home territory of Fort Worth, TX when he was 11-years old and moved on to the state scene at age 14.

Doug Higgins, the head professional at Diamond Oaks Country Club has been his main teacher all these years. Since Mark has a home on the course, it's easy for them to get together.

He played basketball and golf through high school and then went on to the University of Texas where he gained All-American honors twice. He toured the country on the amateur circuit in the summers and was successful, winning such events as the Trans-Mississippi and Southern Amateurs, plus two Texas State Amateurs.

"Along about my sophomore year in college," he said, "I started to think about playing on the TOUR. I knew I had to give it a try." He completed four years at Texas, however, before he turned professional in the fall of 1983.

When everything is working well with his game, he prefers to play with a slight draw.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—15; in money—11; top ten finishes—1; stroke average—71.51.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 19—sand saves (.544)

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Member 1977, 1979 and 1983 European Ryder Cup team. Member Scotland's 1977, 1978, 1979, 1983 World Cup team. Winner 1978 Irish Open; 1983 Dutch Open and Kenya Open; 1984 Glasgow Classic.

A couple of years ago, Ken Brown made an important decision about his future. He decided that if he wanted to become an even better golfer, he would have to leave the friendly confines of the European Tour and head for the United States.

He was becoming more successful in Europe, to be sure, winning such events as the Dutch Open in 1983 and qualifying for a position on the Ryder Cup team. He also won the 1983 Kenya Open on the Safari tour.

"When the new system (All-Exempt TOUR) came in," he said, "I felt it was time for me to give it a try."

He finished in a tie for 20th place in the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1983, but unfortunately, had little opportunity to play until the Spring.

Once he started, his game rounded into form. However, while he was becoming more consistent, the strong finishes were not there. Finally, he headed for the Pensacola Open, the last stop of the year, resting uncomfortably in 151st place with $21,225.

"I had made the cut in my last nine tournaments," he said, "so I felt I was getting closer-and-closer. Two-or-three bad holes would hurt me, so I had to work on eliminating those mistakes."

When he opened with a five-under par 66 at the Perdido Bay Club, his hopes rose sharply. He added a 68 the second day and his third-round 69 for a 10-under par 203 put him in the lead by one stroke.

While Bill Kratzert was the man who came on to win, Ken held on to finish in a tie for second place with John Mahaffey, two strokes behind. He won $26,400, and leaped into 112th place on the 1984 list.

Ken started in the game at age 12. There was a golf course nearby his home, and he said, "It was a natural thing to go over there and caddy and play."

When he was 15-years old, he thought he'd like to play on the professional tour, and did turn pro when he was 16. He worked in a golf shop for a year, and then headed out on the British/European circuit.

He advanced rapidly, and as a 20-year old in 1977, found himself on the Ryder Cup team for the matches against the U. S. at Royal Lytham in England. He won the Irish Open in 1978 and again played in the Ryder Cup competition in 1979.

During his first six years, he only had the one victory but a lot of good finishes. "I was putting too much pressure on myself, especially the last day," he explained. "Once I learned to relax, I played much better."

This past year, in a break from his play in the U. S., he went back home and won the Glasgow Classic.

As George Burns thought about his performance in 1984, he had a good reason to be pleased. A higher level of consistency returned to his game and he was confident it would stay with him for awhile.

"I'm really feeling a lot better about my game," the big, friendly fellow said. "I made some swing changes and they started to pay off last year. Generally, I feel good about my game."

George rebounded from a frustrating 1983 to have the third best money year of his nine-year career. The highlight was the Bay Hill Classic, when he had rounds of 67, 69, 69 and 67 for a 12-under par 272. It appeared as if he would collect his third victory, but Gary Koch shot a blistering 63 to tie him and then won it in a playoff.

He went to Jim Flick for help and through 1983, they tore George's swing apart and started over again. "I really didn't know how to play with the swing I had," he said.

A high point of the 1983 campaign came at the Kemper Open when he shot a course record 64 on the demanding Congressional Country Club course.

George's first victory came in 1979 at the Walt Disney World National Team Play event and he had Ben Crenshaw for a partner. At the time, he said Ben gave him the boost he needed, and was certain it would pay off, confidence-wise.

Early the next year, it did just that as he won the Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur and soared on to a $219,928 year.

Burns was too busy playing all sports in high school on Long Island to concentrate on golf. He lettered in football and basketball and entered the University of Maryland with the primary purpose of playing football, in addition to earning a degree.

He was a defensive end for the Terps, but recalls, "I realized I wasn't going to go anywhere in football." He concentrated on golf from his freshman year forward.

However, it was a full year after his graduation before he blossomed as a force in amateur golf. While working for two years in the New York City area in sales and promotion, he had a chance to play often, and in 1973 he won the Canadian Amateur. The following year Burns won the Porter Cup, North-South Amateur and the New York State Amateur.

Burns was selected to play on the Walker Cup team in 1975 and also on the U.S. side in the World Amateur team championship. "Playing for my country on those teams always will be among the biggest enjoyments I've had in sports," he says.

Rex Caldwell was tied for the lead after three rounds of the Las Vegas Pro-Celebrity Classic, and he made it very clear what he wanted to do.

"I want to win," he said. "I've been on the TOUR for nine years now, and I think I'm the only guy out here who hasn't won. Just one week, I would like to be able to say I was the best; I beat them all. I don't care about the money. They can give me just $10 if they want. I want to win."

He didn't have to wait long. He finished second for the fourth time in the year at Vegas; but the very next week, he won in his new home town of Abilene, TX, in the LaJet Golf Classic.

Rex simply went out and won it. He was six-strokes behind Lee Trevino going into the windy final day, and proceeded to shoot a nifty little six-under par 66 for a six-under par total of 282. He put his number on the board early and no one could catch him. Trevino finished second, one-shot behind.

"It's the thrill of a lifetime," he said. "I'm kind of speechless, and as you know, that's unusual for me." He said of the 66, "Yes, under the circumstances, it was the best round of my life."

Earlier in 1983, Rex gained national attention for finishing second three straight weeks, twice losing in playoffs. Keith Fergus bumped him on the first extra hole in the Bob Hope Classic. Bob Gilder needed eight extra holes to beat him in the Phoenix Open, and then he tied for second in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

Incidentally, when he did win LaJet, he accepted his check for $63,000. Interestingly enough, the biggest check of his career came the week before when he was second to Fuzzy Zoeller in Las Vegas, $81,000.

In December of 1983, he joined with John Cook to represent Uncle Sam in the World Cup competition, and they combined to win the team title.

Last year, Rex went over the $100,000 mark, but his driving cost him more. "I broke the driver I had been using for six years," he said, "and couldn't find a replacement." He came on strong toward the end of the year and made it his second most profitable.

After he joined the TOUR for the start of 1975, he experienced three slow years and blamed most of it on his putting. After-three-putting himself out of the 1978 Hawaiian Open, he went home and spent an entire week practicing his putting, from dawn to dusk, as he said. He went to the Bob Hope Desert Classic the next week and finished fourth, and has been cruising ever since.

Rex started to play the game at age 14. He was convinced that this was his game after a few trips to the club with his father. He made the Lompoc (CA) High School team as a sophomore.

After two years at junior college, he earned a golf scholarship to San Fernando Valley State and began to take his game seriously. He had dreams of playing on the PGA TOUR, but it wasn't until after he worked one summer at the Arnold Palmer Golf Academy at Stratton, VT, and then spent two years on the mini-tours that he felt his game was ready.

He entered the 1974 Fall Qualifying School and made it.

There have been so many highlights in the brilliant career of Billy Casper that it is difficult to know where to begin. One thing is for certain; he has found a new life on the Senior PGA TOUR.

Two of his great victories came in the 1959 and 1966 United States Open Championships, and to help make his record complete, he won the U.S. Seniors' Open in 1983.

One of the great players of all time, Billy won 51 tournaments on the regular TOUR from 1956 through 1975. He played on eight straight Ryder Cup teams and, in 1979, was honored to serve as the Captain of the U.S. team. Twice he has been the Player-of-the-Year.

Arnold Palmer was the first man to pass the $1 million mark in TOUR earnings, and Billy was the second, reaching the figure in 1970.

There have been few in the game any better than this Hall of Famer.

Tze-Chung Chen didn't start to play the game in his native Taiwan until he was 17-years old, but eight years later, he was playing with the best golfers in the world.

T. C., as he generally is known, finished fifth in the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1982 and went on to have a very successful first year in 1983. In fact, the only player who did better from that particular class was Ronnie Black.

"The TOUR is very hard," he said, "and a difficult way to make money. For me, travel and transportation was the biggest problem my first year because I had to go pretty much on my own."

He made a strong impression in his third start as a rookie when he shot a final-round 64 at the La Quinta Country Club and tied for seventh in the Bob Hope Classic.

Later in the year, he came close to winning. He was in a playoff for the Kemper Open title against Fred Couples, Gil Morgan, Scott Simpson and Barry Jaekel. Couples was the survivor.

Last year, his best finish was a sixth place in the Western Open. He was tied with D. A. Weibring for the 36-hole lead, but his two finishing rounds were costly.

His older brother, Tze-Ming Chen, started him in the game, and he still does very well on the Asian/Japan Tours. In the fall of 1983, Tze-Ming won the Dunlop Phoenix tournament in Japan by defeating Tom Watson in a playoff. Tze-Ming qualified for the 1984 World Series of Golf, and during the week at Firestone Country Club, T. C. caddied for his brother.

"I would like it if he came to the United States to play," T. C. said. "I think he will someday and I think he will do very well."

The Chens lived near a golf course in Taipei, and he said, "everyday, I would watch people play golf, and then I would caddy for my brother."

He progressed so rapidly, that in 1980, he was selected to play on Taiwan's World Amateur Cup team and competition was held in Pinehurst. "I finished second to Hal Sutton," he said proudly.

He turned professional just after that, and played on the Asian Tour for two years, "I thought it would be good for me to come over here and try for the experience," he said. Driving the ball is his strong point. "I'm not very long, but I can hit it straight," he said.

When he needs help, he goes to his brother, but it is difficult since he is so far away. "It takes 15 hours from Los Angeles," he pointed out.

Few players have come on the PGA TOUR with the fanfare that greeted Bobby Clampett back in the summer of 1980. During the next two years, he proceeded to demonstrate how genuine his credentials really were.

In 1981, he finished second four times, twice losing in playoffs. His first victory came near the end of 1982 in the Southern Open. It seemed likely that his star would shine brightly for many years.

His consistency level slipped considerably in 1983 and he referred to it as a "rather disappointing year from a playing standpoint." Last year, the slide continued, but he made no excuses.

He simply said, "I probably learned more about golf and my game this past year than during any previous year of my career." He has always been one of the keenest students of the game, and it appears to be just a matter of time until he rises to the top again.

Bobby joined the TOUR in August of 1980. His big check came in the Buick Open, when he won $7,250 and that, added to his previous winnings, provided more than enough to meet the minimum money guideline of $8,000 that was needed to become a member without going through the rigors of the Qualifying School.

Bobby started to play golf at age 10, using his father's old clubs. Lee Martin, who was the pro at the Carmel Valley Ranch at the time, gave him his first lessons. "I worked at the club, doing odd jobs," he recalls, "and my pay was playing privileges. Mainly, I picked up range balls."

When he was 13, Ben Doyle assumed duties at the club, and he became Bobby's tutor — and he still is.

He started playing tournament golf at age 11, and the next summer, he made a big decision. "I gave up a chance to be a starting pitcher on a Little League team to concentrate on golf," he recalls.

He was successful in California Junior golf, and in 1976 and 1977, he was the state's leading point getter. In 1977, he won the California State junior title.

He moved on to Brigham Young University, where, for three years, he worked on his golfing skills and his education. "I wanted that balance," he said, "and that is why I chose BYU."

He received an associates degree in French in 1980, and speaks the language fluently.

Since he played in six tournaments in 1980, he was not eligible for rookie-of-the-year honors in 1981. However, Bobby Clampett is destined to win many other honors in golf before he leaves the tournament trail.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 6-eagles (11).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner of two Tournament Players Series events in 1983, Magnolia Classic and Greater Baltimore open. He won $100,863 in eight events to be the leading money winner. Winner 1975 Kentucky State High School Championship.

It is safe to say Russ Cochran is the finest lefthanded golfer on the PGA TOUR and probably is the best since Bob Charles of New Zealand was winning TOUR events in the 60s and early 70s.

The Tournament Players Series in 1983 gave him the break he needed for 1984, and he certainly made the most of his opportunity. He won $133,342 with a tie for second place in the B. C. Open his best.

"The success I had in the Tournament Players Series in 1983," he explained, "proved to be a big confidence factor last year. Besides I was more accustomed to everything, such as travel and the whole environment."

When the TPS was inaugurated in 1983, it gave Russ the opportunity he needed. He qualified for the TOUR by successfully going through the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1982.

During the early weeks of 1983, he was not enjoying much success. "I was sponsoring myself," he said, "but after the first three months, I was running out of money." He had won only $3,500.

"The Magnolia Classic (opposite the Masters Tournament) was the first of the Tournament Players Series. I wanted to go there to see how I would do, but if I didn't do well, I would have to go home and try to find a sponsor for the rest of the year. I was hoping to get a sponsor's exemption at Magnolia, and I did."

The result was a victory and a check for $27,000, setting him up for the rest of the year.

He only won $7,968 in 18 regular TOUR events, but he added another victory in the Greater Baltimore Open on the TPS circuit and won $100,863 in eight starts. He was the leading money winner and thus gained exempt status on the regular TOUR for 1984. Each year, the leading money winner on the TPS will follow the 125th money winner on the priority list.

Russ started in golf when he was about 10-years old. He used to go to a neighboring course with his elder brother. A couple of years later, when he won a state age-group tournament, he truly was hooked. He played junior golf in the area and then through high school, winning the state scholastic title in 1975. He went to the university of Kentucky and played for three more years.

"I had friends who were playing the mini-tours, so I decided to give it a try," he recalls. "I went to the TOUR school but didn't make it until my third try in the Fall of 1982."

Oh, yes he does play lefthanded. "When I was younger, I used ladies' clubs because they were the only lefthanded ones I could find. Several people told me I should switch around and try to play right-handed, but no one made a real effort to change me, so I stayed with it. I do everything left-handed, anyway."

Including, as it turned out, accepting healthy checks on the PGA TOUR.

Jim Colbert set a couple of goals when 1983 started and for a fellow heading for his 42nd birthday and 18th year on the PGA TOUR, they seemed rather lofty. He wanted to win at least two tournaments during the year and also $200,000.

"They were not pipe dreams," he said, even though he had never accomplished either one before during his career. He even went so far as to promise his secretary that if he achieved them, he would give her an all-expense paid vacation to Hawaii.

Well, she got her trip because Jim did have the greatest year of his life, winning the Colonial National Invitation after a playoff with Fuzzy Zoeller, and then the Texas Open in San Antonio. He also raked in $223,810.

He knew that sooner or later he would win in San Antonio. It has a special place in his heart. It was there in 1966 that he won his first check as a member of the TOUR, and it was there in the 1982 Texas Open that he went over the $1 million mark in career earnings.

Even though 1984 was a good year financially for Jim, he said, "It was a mediocre year for me at the professional player's level. I played enough, but when I was away from the TOUR, I didn't work on my game as much as I should have. I plan to spend more time on golf in 1985."

Nevertheless, he did enjoy going over the $100,000 mark in earnings for the fourth time in the last five years.

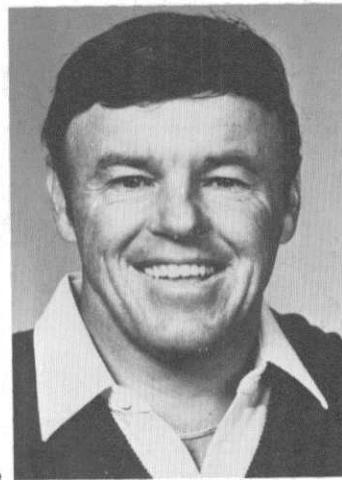

Jim was an all-state football player in Kansas and went to Kansas State University on a scholarship, but he switched to golf full-time when he lost his desire for combat after his freshman year.

He won the Kansas State junior golf title at age 11, so he knew at an early age he could play this game, too. He was second in the 1964 NCAA tournament and won the 1965 Kansas Amateur. That fall, he went to the TOUR's Qualifying School and made it.

The first victory was a long time coming, in the 1969 Monsanto Open in Pensacola. His most memorable victory might have been in the 1974 American Golf Classic at Firestone Country Club in Akron. He had to defeat Raymond Floyd, Gay Brewer and Forrest Fezler in the playoff.

The next few years, Jim suffered with knee and back problems, but he continued to work hard at his game, grinding out whatever he could. His perseverance finally paid off in 1979 and he has been playing well since.

He currently is serving his third term as a member of the TOUR's Policy Board. He was a Player Director in 1974-to-1976; again in 1981-to-1983; and was re-elected in the fall of 1983.

There are only two men in sports who can claim they have played in United States Open Championships in golf and tennis. Frank Conner is one of them and Ellsworth Vines is the other.

While Frank started to play tennis as a 10-year old in Belleville, Ill., he didn't begin to swing the clubs until 1970, when he was 24 years old.

"When I decided to switch to golf," he says, "I did so with the intention of being a professional. I felt I wasn't going anywhere in tennis, beyond what I had already done."

As a sophomore and junior at Trinity University, he was an All-American choice in tennis. He won the National Junior tennis title at age 17 and played in three Opens at Forest Hills.

During the transition period, he would teach tennis at Northern Hills Country Club in San Antonio five days a week, and play the mini-tour golf series that was in San Antonio the other two. When that series was completed, he moved on to the mini-tours in the Phoenix area, and was quite successful.

"I knew then that I could earn money playing golf, but not that much playing tennis," he admits.

Four times he attempted to earn his TOUR card, but missed in the Qualifying Schools. Finally, in the Fall of 1974, he made it. In recent years, he has played numerous practice rounds with Lee Trevino, and says, "That has helped me tremendously, just watching how he plays the game and thinks his way around a course."

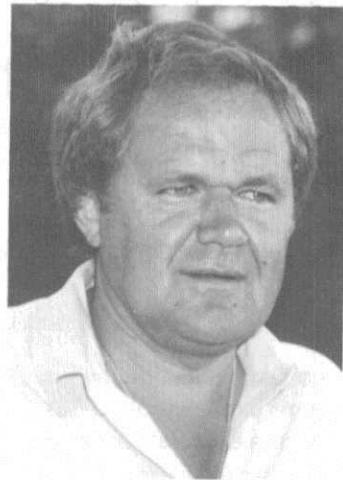

Frank has had his good moments on the TOUR, such as finishing in a tie for second in the 1979 New Orleans Open, one behind Hubert Green. He led the 1980 IVB-Philadelphia Classic after three rounds, but Doug Tewell came on strong to win.

In 1981, he tied with four others in the Quad Cities Open but Canadian Dave Barr won the playoff. He played the strong courses well, as he tied for sixth in the U. S. Open at Merion, was sixth alone in the Colonial National Invitation and tied for eighth in the Tournament Players Championship at Sawgrass.

He made another strong bid for victory in the 1982 Sea Pines Heritage Classic. He led by one after three rounds, but Tom Watson caught him the last afternoon and then won on the third extra hole of the playoff. Actually, Watson was in the lead until Frank holed a 30 footer for birdie at the par three 17th.

He had a chance to win it on the second extra hole, but missed a 12 footer for birdie, and then on the third extra hole (the 18th on the course), his two iron approach slid left of the green and he suffered a bogey.

Last year, he tied for second in the Bank of Boston Classic, but was six-strokes behind winner George Archer. Still it easily was the brightest spot in an otherwise disappointing season. "My putting let me down," he said of the season-long performance.

Charles Coody has been one of the leading performers on the PGA TOUR for many seasons and had one stretch of 13 straight years qualifying as one of the top 60 money winners. Even more important, he always has been one of the game's finest people.

His biggest week came in the spring of 1971 when he won the Masters Tournament, finishing birdie-birdie-par-par for a two-stroke margin over Jack Nicklaus and Johnny Miller. Two years earlier, he suffered one of his biggest disappointments. He played brilliantly at the Augusta National Golf Club for 69 holes. Trying to protect his lead, he switched to conservative golf, but finished with three straight bogeys and eventually tied for fifth.

His best single money year was 1971 when he collected $94,947, but he also earned another $50,000 (unofficial) as he won the World Series of Golf at Firestone Country Club.

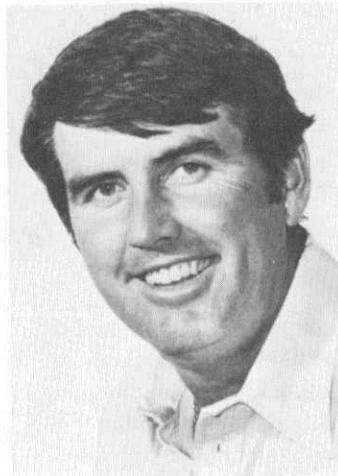

Charles was quite an athlete during his school days. He was a quarterback on his high school football team and was an all-state basketball player. He went on to Texas Christian University and, interestingly enough, it primarily was to play golf. TCU did not have golf scholarships, so he was given one for basketball.

He compiled a superb amateur golf record around his home state, winning approximately 30 titles in Texas alone. While serving a three-year hitch in the Air Force, he qualified for the 1960 and 1961 U.S. Opens. In 1962, he reached the semi-finals of the U.S. Amateur.

He started in the game at "age 12 or 13," by going to the course with his father, and never really has had a special teaching pro. His first big taste of victory came when he won the Texas State high school championship in 1954.

Normally, he will play with a draw, but over the years, Charles has shown a steadiness with his game, with no glaring weaknesses. His ability to hit trouble shots always has been well above average.

In recent years, he has been involved with the beautiful Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club development in Abilene, and has been instrumental in the rapid success of the LaJet Classic.

Everyone loves to see a young man rewarded for hard work, so it was especially pleasing to see John Cook enjoy a great year such as he experienced in 1983. As they say, nice things do happen to nice people.

John was injured a good part of 1982, and, unfortunately, he was below par physically last year. The results on the TOUR reflect it. He took some time off in the spring when a new addition to the family came along, and then he re-injured an elbow in mid-summer and was off the TOUR for more than a month.

"I had some pretty good weeks," he said, "and there were times when I played better than I scored." His best effort was a tie for fifth in the Canadian Open.

In 1983 when he earned $216,868, he won the Canadian Open in a stirring six-hole playoff over Johnny Miller and accumulated seven top ten finishes. The one that got away, though, left a scar or awhile.

Hal Sutton was in the scoring tent behind the 18th green after his final round of the Tournament Players Championship with a five-under par 283. John was on the 18th tee, needing a par four to tie. Unfortunately, he hooked his tee shot into the water at the Players' Club, suffered a double bogey and tied for third place.

In 1982, John suffered an injury to his left wrist and elbow at the Honda-Inverrary Classic, but instead of taking the necessary time to recover, he continued to play, thus aggravating the situation.

One of his best-ever efforts on TOUR came in the 1981 Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur, when he was tied with Hale Irwin, Ben Crenshaw, Bobby Clampett and Barney Thompson. John finally won the title on the third extra hole, ousting Irwin, Crenshaw, Clampett and Thompson were eliminated on the first extra hole. Due to heavy rains, it was a 54-hole tournament.

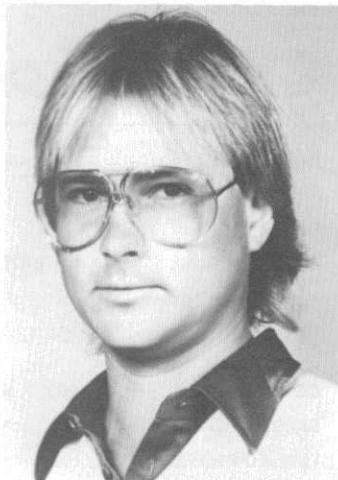

He has always known of the thrill of victory. He tasted it early when in 1974 he defeated Gary Hallberg for the World Junior crown. John's biggest title came in 1978 when he won the U.S. Amateur Championship. The next year, he lost in the final to Mark O'Meara.

At Ohio State University, he was an All-American choice three years, and in 1979, he helped the Buckeyes win the NCAA team title. That same year, he represented the United States in the World Amateur Cup team. In December of 1983, he was on the U.S. World Cup team with Rex Caldwell and they combined to win the team championship.

John started to play golf at an early age, and while his parents encouraged him, they didn't push. He played high school basketball and some football.

Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf convinced him he should go to Ohio State, even though his school years were spent in southern California. Years ago, his father had coached in Ohio, and also worked for Firestone Tire & Rubber Company in Akron.

John earned his player's card in the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1979. For most of his golfing career, Ken Venturi has been his primary tutor.

There are few young players in the game with the potential for greatness that is possessed by Fred Couples. During his first four years on the TOUR, he continually displayed an ability to rise to the occasion, especially on the more difficult courses.

It was never more clearly demonstrated than in the 1984 Tournament Players Championship on the Tournament Players Club course where every shot must be precise.

Fred took the lead the second day with a brilliant record-tying eight-under par 64 and he stayed in front the rest of the way. He had to fight off the challenges of the game's finest players to get the victory. Seve Ballesteros and Tom Watson were chasing him after the third round and the final margin was only one stroke over Lee Trevino.

"Winning here was something I never thought would happen," he said modestly. "My biggest accomplishment this week was beating the course."

He finished the year with nine top 10 finishes, but it was impressive to see he only missed two cuts in 26 starts.

Fred's first victory came the hard way in the Kemper Open on the demanding Congressional Country Club course. He had to defeat Gil Morgan, Scott Simpson, Barry Jaeckel and Tze-Chung Chen in a playoff. On the second extra hole, the 211-yard 16th, he hit a splendid five-iron shot inside two feet of the hole and he made it for his victory. "I felt like crying," he said. "I've never hit a shot that amounted to so much."

Fred has worked with former Masters champion Gay Brewer in recent years, and although bothered by a bad back at times, he has learned to harness his immense power off the tee and thus become a more consistent player.

He convinced a lot of people at the 1982 PGA Championship at Southern Hills in Tulsa that his future is very bright indeed. Fred shot a closing four-under par 66 to gain a tie for third place, but during the first round, he really had eyes popping. He birdied the last six holes for a championship record score of 29.

Couples was introduced to golf by his father, who works for the Seattle Parks & Recreation Department. So all sports were a natural with him. Within a few years, he was competing in junior events in the Seattle area, and then, in high school, came the big decision, one forced because the golf and baseball seasons overlapped.

At the University of Houston, Couples became a standout, earning All-American honors in 1978 and 1979. After a somewhat disappointing junior season, when Fred finished a solid eighth individually in the NCAA Championship but watched as his Cougar team missed the cut, he decided to drop out of school and tackle the TOUR a year early.

As Ben Crenshaw thought about what he had accomplished in winning the Masters Tournament in the Spring of 1984, he said slowly, "It's a sweet, sweet thing. I don't think there ever will be anything sweeter for me."

His victory at the Augusta National Golf Club was one of the more popular of the year — or any year — for there probably is not a player in the game who is more loved by his colleagues.

Ben's 67 gave him the first-round lead over Lee Trevino by one stroke, but he slipped back the next two days. He was four-strokes behind Mark Lye after two days and two-strokes behind Tom Kite after the third.

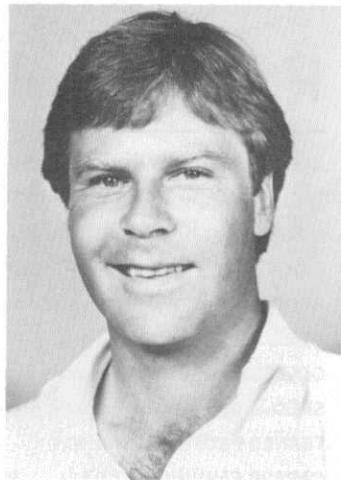

Through the final round, he shot a four-under par 68 and won by two over Tom Watson with an 11-under par 277. "Ben deserved it," Watson said later. "He's been in the hunt in a lot of major championships. This is his first, and I know what it must mean to him."

He went on to complete a very good year. In fact, his last two years have been the best financially of his career. They have been the reversal of 1982 when he struggled through his poorest year. It was so bad, that after missing the cut in the PGA Championship, he said he was heading home "to get away" from the game for awhile.

He was ready when 1983 dawned. He enjoyed his best money year, won the Byron Nelson Classic and was a standout performer in the Ryder Cup matches against the European team. Incidentally, he also finished second in the Masters Tournament to Seve Ballesteros.

He joined the TOUR in the Fall of 1973 after compiling an excellent amateur record. He won the NCAA Championship three straight years for the University of Texas, although he shared it in 1972 with teammate Tom Kite.

Ben earned his TOUR card in the Fall of 1973, gaining medalist honors by an incredible 12 strokes over runner-up Gil Morgan. In his first start, the San Antonio-Texas Open, he won by two over Orville Moody. The next event was the 144-hole $500,000 World Open at Pinehurst, and he finished second to Miller Barber.

Jim Dent is one of the more congenial persons on the PGA TOUR and you only have to visit with him for a few minutes to realize that this fellow has a wonderful outlook on life.

Some time ago, when asked to summarize his 1983 season, he smiled and said, "It was a good year. I played pretty good on the regular TOUR and I really enjoyed the new Tournament Players Series."

When it came time to ask for a capsule comment on his performance in 1984, he grinned and said, "It was a great year. I was healthy all year and I could play golf every week I wanted to play. I didn't win as much money as I wanted, but I was healthy and able to play."

He was able to win $40,423 on the main TOUR in 1983, but another $35,871 on the TPS circuit after winning the Michelob-Chattanooga Gold Cup. Last year, he played well early in the year and trailed off in mid-summer, but collected $49,941 plus $11,840 in TPS events.

Before the All-Exempt TOUR became a reality in 1983, Jim was able to enjoy exempt status only once and that was in 1974 when he finished 59th on the money list. The closest he has ever been to a victory was in 1972 when he was runner-up to Jack Nicklaus in the Walt Disney World Classic.

During his first three years on TOUR, starting in 1971, Jim says he was known as a "pro golfer," and not a "professional golfer." He wanted to make that change, and be known as a good one in his business.

He was known as the king of the big hitters and was recognized by one-and-all as the longest driver on TOUR. His problem, he says, was finding his golf ball after he hit it.

He had to learn to play all the shots, not just boom the tee ball 300-plus yards. John Goodman gave him some of his early technical training, and Paul Runyan worked with Jim on the short game. For later improvements, he went to Jimmy Ballard.

Jim started in golf as a caddy at the Augusta Country Club, but while in high school in Augusta, he was quite a football player. He never had the opportunity to play much golf in those days, but whenever he could, he would slip over to the "cabbage patch," a local municipal course.

He moved to New Jersey for a short while, and then it was on to Los Angeles where he started to mold his game. "I started to think about playing on the TOUR when I'd see other guys going to the Qualifying School, and I knew I was better than a lot of them."

He qualified for the TOUR in 1970 and that fact alone, Jim says, gave him more enjoyment than anything else he has done in the game. "It's a privilege," he says.

If you are looking for a good example of what perseverance can do for you, you need look no further than to Mike Donald.

He has had to work hard in order to move up the ladder on the PGA TOUR — harder than most people, but last year, he was able to enjoy some of the game's rewards.

For the first time in his five-year career, he earned well over $100,000. "It was a good step upward," he said. "The only thing better now would be to win a tournament. I've become more patient with myself and my game. I'm not forcing things to happen."

He has been working with Gardner Dickinson since 1980, refining the swing, and he's certain his new knowledge of the game is starting to take effect.

Twice last year he finished third — in the Kemper Open and the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic — so he knows the feeling of challenging.

When Mike was in the ninth grade, he gave up baseball to concentrate on golf. It was a good move. He went on to Broward Community College and won the National Junior College championship. It earned him a Chris Schenkel scholarship to Georgia Southern College.

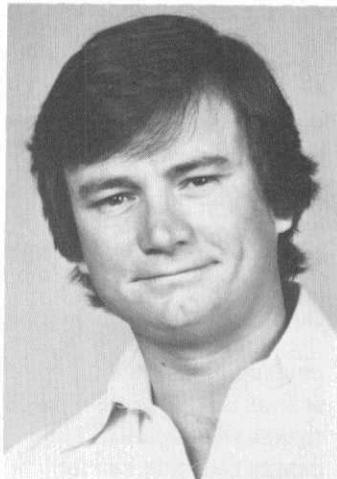

In his first tournament at Georgia Southern, he finished fifth, not bad at all when you consider the players who were 1-2 respectively were Jay Haas of Wake Forest and Chip Beck of Georgia. His parade didn't last long though, because "I had a conflict with the coach and they took my scholarship away."

So, Mike headed for home. "I didn't have any money, so I delivered flowers and umpired baseball games for a year." Georgia Southern brought in a new coach the next year and Mike was back in school. Before he returned though, Mike was impressive again as he went to the finals of the 1978 North and South Amateur before losing to Gary Hallberg.

His first attempt at the TOUR Qualifying School was in the Spring of 1979 but he didn't make it. Determined as always, he went back in the Fall of that year and passed with flying colors.

Mike started in the game at age 12. "My parents bought me a set of clubs because they didn't know what else to buy me. I loved to play baseball and I had everything I needed for that sport. They just wanted to get me something different and, even though they didn't play golf, they thought it would be a good sport for me."

And, as is usually the case, Mom and Dad were right.

Bob Eastwood found it difficult to sum up his performances in 1984. So, he simply said, "Incredible. I knew I was capable of winning. It was just a matter of time for me to get everything together."

"Time" turned out to be in his 13th year as an active player, and he not only broke through with his first victory, but he won his second as well.

"A lot of players have told me I have a good swing," he said. "I wasn't a super-star when I came out on TOUR. I'm still learning."

He has learned his lessons very well and gained considerable respect from his peers because of what he has accomplished.

Since 1976, he has improved his money winnings each campaign to a high of $232,742 last year. He says with a satisfied smile, "I'm just getting better with age. Physically, I'm in good shape and each year I seem to think a little better on the course. I know I'm striking the ball better and understand my swing better."

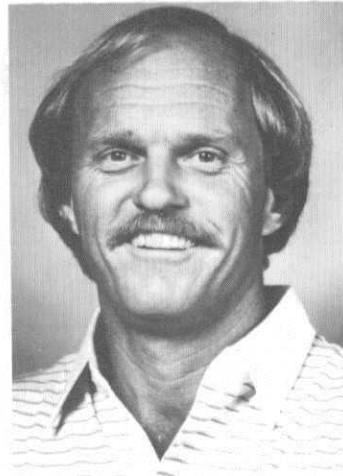

His first victory was in the USF&G Classic in New Orleans and then he won the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic. He also tied for third in the World Series of Golf and said it was a "most satisfying" effort.

He was four years old when he started to play golf. His father was in the golf business in Stockton, CA., and helped to build the Dry Creek Ranch golf club in the 1960s. It was a family affair.

His skills surfaced early, as he won city amateur titles in Stockton and Sacramento. He won the 1966 California State Amateur and while at San Jose State, he won the West Coast Athletic Conference title.

Bob headed for the TOUR Qualifying School in the Spring of 1969 and he not only made it through, but he was the medalist. His life on the TOUR had to wait awhile, though. In October of that year, he went into the Army and was not discharged until October of 1971. So, he really didn't join the TOUR full-time until 1972.

Several people have helped him along the way, such as Bob Warner in junior golf, Tom LoPresti during his college and early days on TOUR; but in recent years, Butch Baird has been his guiding hand on the practice tee.

Danny Edwards has been able to enjoy the best of two worlds in recent years, competing primarily on the PGA TOUR, but also sitting behind the wheel of one of his racing cars.

He will tell you that golf is his profession, while racing is more of an avocation. In his life, he knows one compliments the other.

He has been racing approximately 12 weekends a year in Formula Fords, but now has switched to endurance races, and plans to spend his days away from the golf courses on the tracks.

After enjoying good years in 1982 and 1983 — winning a tournament plus more than $100,000 each season — he had a disappointing year in 1984. "It wasn't much fun," he said. "I put a lot of work into my game and didn't get the results."

It was after a mediocre year in 1981 that Danny developed a "more relaxed" attitude to the game, and the results were almost immediate, winning the Greater Greensboro Open in 1982. The next year, he won the Miller High Life-QCO in a playoff over Morris Hatalsky.

After a splendid amateur career, Danny joined the TOUR for the start of 1975. His first victory came in the 1977 Greater Greensboro Open by four strokes over George Burns and Larry Nelson. In 1980, he joined with brother David and they won the Walt Disney World National Team Play title.

Danny was 14 when he started to play golf and he knew at an early age that golf would be his game. He went on to Oklahoma State University and won the 1972 and 1973 Big Eight championships. In 1973, he was named to Uncle Sam's Walker Cup team.

He turned professional in 1973 and played on the world circuit for a year. He went to the TOUR's Qualifying School in the Fall of that year and made it.

During his years on TOUR, brother David has been his biggest booster and helper. "David knows my game better than anyone," Danny says. "We don't work together as much as we used to, but when one of us does have a problem, we talk it over."

It was a strange but rather pleasant experience for David Edwards, one he had never encountered in his golf career. "I surpassed so many of the goals I had set for myself by the end of May, that I didn't know what to do."

What he did, was take most of the rest of 1984 off. After the Memorial Tournament the last weekend in May, he only played in three official PGA TOUR events the rest of the year.

"It was by far my best year," he said. "After I had the good year in 1983, I wanted to build on it and keep improving. I did what I wanted to do in 1984 and more. Now, I hope to keep building on those successes."

David's biggest week came in the Los Angeles Open on the famed Riviera Country Club course. He shot a magnificent final-round seven-under par 64 to win by three over Jack Renner.

"Riviera always has been one of my favorite courses, and because of that, the Los Angeles Open always has been my No. 1 choice. So, to win there was something very special to me."

The victory put him in the Masters Tournament for the first time and the experience was all he expected it to be — and more. A final-round 67 boosted him into a tie for third place.

"I had some very good final rounds," he pointed out, such as the 65 at the Byron Nelson to give him a second-place finish; and a 66 in the Tournament Players Championship. "They were the key to my successes," he said.

He credits an improved mental attitude for much of his good work. "The big thing I worked on was keeping my emotions under control through the first and second rounds so I could be in a position for a good finish. That had been a problem," he explained.

David enjoys telling people how he got started in the game. "I was about 12-years old," he said, "and I played because my brother Danny (who is five years older) played. That's all there was to it. All I did when I was growing up was tag along. I did whatever he did. He was the one who talked me into getting a set of clubs."

In the fall of 1980, they carried their brother relationship to the ultimate, winning the Walt Disney World National Team Championship.

David has enjoyed his share of success during his career, but he said it hasn't been easy. "At every level, from juniors, through high school, then college and now on the TOUR, I have had to start at the bottom and work my way up. I haven't been any instant success."

He always found that success, though. He won the Oklahoma State Junior title in 1973, and won the National Collegiate championship for Oklahoma State in 1978, and twice was named to the collegiate All-America team.

While Danny has been his biggest booster and helper through the years, David also gave credit to Art Proctor, the head professional at the municipal course in Edmond for getting him started properly. He worked for Proctor during his high school years.

You know there never will be a dull moment when Dave Eichelberger is around and this big friendly fellow is around a lot of the time on the PGA TOUR. He averages approximately 34 tournaments a year and it does not seem likely he will slow down for the next few years. He likes to keep his clubs humming.

He only managed two top ten finishes in 1983, and none at all last year when his performance level took a severe dip. "I've been working on a swing change," he said. "It's something I have to do and I'm determined to do it."

His last victory was in the 1981 Tallahassee Open and it came after a playoff against Bob Murphy and Mark O'Meara. He finished it on the first extra hole, but at the 72nd hole, Dave missed a three footer for birdie that would have ended it right there.

His game has had its peaks and valleys and through the years, it usually depended on his putting stroke. He is long off the tee and generally a fine iron player.

Dave started in the game at age 13 in the junior programs at his family's club in Waco, Texas. However, it wasn't until he went to Oklahoma State that his game started to blossom. He reached the semifinals in the 1964 U.S. Amateur at Canterbury and the next year, represented Uncle Sam on the Walker Cup and Americas Cup team.

He came out of the TOUR's Qualifying School in 1967 and steadily worked his way toward a $108,312 year in 1971 that included a victory in the Greater Milwaukee Open. He admits that for the next few years, he may not have worked hard enough on his game, but he gained victory again in 1977 in Milwaukee.

In March of 1980, he had everything working as he mastered the cold wind to win the Bay Hill Classic near Orlando. He admitted that he put his Texas-born knowledge of the low punch shot to good use that week.

In 1980, Dave ran away with Eagle honors in the statistical program, making 16 of them. It prompted the question, "How many Eichels does Eagleberger have?"

In 1981, the eagles were a little more difficult to catch. He finished the year with six. He had two of them at Tallahassee, though, making it possible for him to claim the victory.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—19; in money—14; top ten finishes—4; stroke avg.—71.43.

BEST 1984 STATISTICS: 13—driving accuracy (.712).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Member British-European Ryder Cup team four times, 1977, 1979, 1981, 1983. Rookie-of-Year on European Tour, 1977. Winner British PGA Championship 1978, 1980, 1981. Leading money winner on European Tour, 1983; winning five times, including French and Swiss Opens. Had 11 top ten finishes in 16 European starts in 1983, and compiled a 69.03 stroke average. Winner 1984 Car Care Plan International (England).

Nick Faldo knew he had the game to win on the PGA TOUR. It simply was a case of putting the good rounds together and he certainly did that in the 1984 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

The lanky Englishman took the lead the second day on the precise Harbour Town Golf Links and went on to win by two strokes over Tom Watson. Nick shot all four rounds in the 60s and his 14-under par 270 equaled the tournament record.

Although he has been one of the stars on the European Tour for several years, he may never experience a year quite like 1983. After playing in 11 tournaments on the PGA TOUR and winning $32,652, he headed for home with the intention of competing in a few events and then returning to the United States.

So, what did he do? He won three straight events, starting with the French Open. "That changed my plans," he said. "I realized I now had a chance to be Europe's No. 1 player, so I stayed."

He went on to win two more tournaments, finished second in two and third in three others. In 16 tournaments, he had 11 top 10 finishes and compiled an astonishing stroke average of 69.03. He easily finished as the leading money winner with nearly $180,000.

He then came back to the United States and starred on the European Ryder Cup team that nearly pulled an upset. At that point, he found himself 126th on the money list, $631 behind the man in 125th place. He entered the Walt Disney World Classic, knowing he needed a good finish to retain his exempt status on the PGA TOUR.

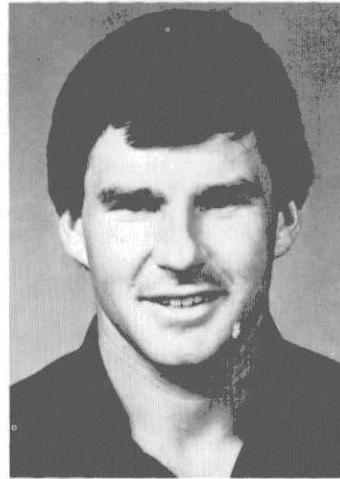

After a first-round 72, he followed with a seven-under par 65 and went on to tie with Mark McCumber for second place, two strokes behind Payne Stewart.

He said late in the year, "I never would have had the year in Europe that I had without the experience I gained in the States. My play has improved so much just by playing here".

Nick has been one of the better players on the European Tour almost from the start. He was the Rookie-of-the-Year in 1977, and his hold on the PGA Championship is envied by his peers. He won it in 1978 at Royal Birkdale. He won it again at Royal St. George's in 1980 and followed with another victory in 1981 at Ganton.

Although he had played the TOUR on a few special occasions, it wasn't until the start of 1981 that he decided to give it a try. By the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open, where he tied for ninth, he easily passed the minimum money guideline for membership. He officially became a member the next week at the Bay Hill Classic.

He has been a fine player in Ryder Cup competition. The former English Amateur champion is unbeaten in singles competition, having defeated Tom Watson, Lee Elder, Johnny Miller and Jay Haas in the last four renewals.

When Brad Faxon was enjoying a very successful season during his final year at Furman University, he started to think about the game of golf as a career. "It wasn't until then," he said, "that I realized I was good enough to play on the TOUR."

There wasn't any doubt in the minds of those who followed him through his young career that he was good enough. Brad has enjoyed success at all levels of the game.

Three times he won the Rhode Island State Junior championship. Twice he won the Rhode Island State Amateur and on two other occasions, in 1980 and 1981, he won the New England Amateur titles.

He won 11 times during his collegiate days, and in 1983, won three of the finest awards given to college golfers, the Fred Haskins, Golf Magazine and the NCAA Coaches awards as the Player-of-the-Year. He also was named to the U.S. Walker Cup team that year.

During those latter years, he had a taste of TOUR competition. He played in three U.S. Opens, and in 1983 at Oakmont, was the low amateur.

At one time, Brad's grandfather owned a golf course on Cape Cod, and that's where his father, a scratch golfer, learned to play. "I was about five-or-six years old when Dad started me," Brad said, "and I played in my first tournament when I was 13. The next year, I won the Rhode Island State Juniors for the first time."

It was with that sort of background that Brad launched his PGA TOUR career in the Fall of 1983. He entered the Qualifying School and had little trouble making the grade.

He quickly established himself as a solid performer when he survived the cut in his first seven tournaments. He will tell you though, "I didn't play as well through most of the year as I know I can."

"This past year was a great learning experience," he said. "I wanted to play as many tournaments as I could, so that I could become familiar with the courses. I stayed away from the special Monday pro-ams so that I could work on my game."

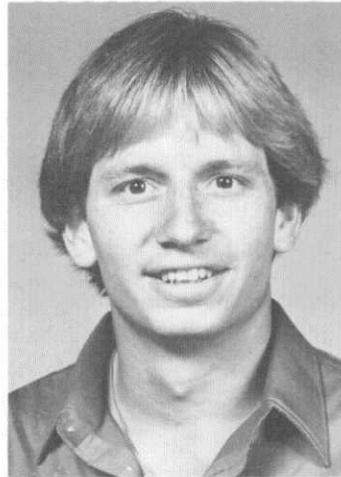

David Leadbetter of Grenelefe, FL, has been his primary teacher the last year or so and the results of their work together have been gratifying.

"When I was in college," he said, "I had an erratic swing. I could have a bad round and still win. That's not possible out here. David and I have been working on refining the swing, making it as simple as we can."

In early August, he visited with Dr. Bob Rotella, a sports psychologist at the University of Virginia. "I had heard of Dr. Rotella when I was in college," Brad said, "and I've always been interested in sports psychology. He has helped me with the mental aspects of the game."

Shortly after their first get-together, Brad had his finest tournament of the year, finishing in a tie for sixth place in the Greater Milwaukee Open. The next week in the Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational, he tied for 33rd, but said, "Without a doubt, it was the best ball-striking round of my life. I had been waiting for that moment to happen."

Brad said his natural shot "probably is a draw," but has the ability to play the ball both ways, depending on the circumstances.

Keith Fergus has clearly demonstrated that when his game is right, he can play with anyone on any type of course. He will be the first to tell you, though, that he has a tendency to become a little lackadaisical.

He said that's "probably what happened" after he won the 1983 Bob Hope Classic in a playoff over Rex Caldwell. "I still worked hard on my game the rest of the year," he said, "but I probably lost a little aggressiveness."

After having his best year moneywise in 1983, he was looking forward to a profitable 1984. Yet, it turned out to be the first time since 1979 that he did not win at least $100,000.

"When the year started," he explained, "I didn't have a method in my mind. I usually start well and I assumed I would again, but I didn't."

It wasn't until the latter part of the year that his game returned and he finished third in the Greater Milwaukee Open and seventh in the LaJet Classic.

Keith started on TOUR in 1977 but his first victory did not come until May of 1981 when he won the Memorial Tournament on the demanding Muirfield Village course in Ohio.

"I wondered what it would feel like to win," he said moments after the victory, "and often wondered if it really was worth the effort. Now, I can tell you it is worth it."

Keith, an All-American choice at the University of Houston for three years, had gone 4½ years without tasting victory, and "I've always believed winning is what sports is all about. You have to forget about the money, because if you win and play well, the money will be there."

In 1982, facing the pressure of having to battle Raymond Floyd in a playoff at the rain-interrupted Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic, Keith won again on the first extra hole with a birdie. He posted six-under par 66s in the first and third rounds.

Keith started to play golf at age eight. "My Dad played a lot," he recalls, "and I would go out and caddy for him." He says his father and Lee Williams, the head pro at Killeen Municipal Course, helped him with his game through the early stages.

He played football and basketball through the first couple of years in high school, "but I started to concentrate on golf after that." He said he realized he enjoyed practicing golf more than he did practicing the other sports.

He won the Texas State Junior championship in 1971 and was runner-up in the state high school tournament the following year. He went to the University of Houston and gained All-American status. In the summer of 1975, he lost to Fred Ridley in the final of the United States Amateur.

He believes the strongest part of his game is his driving. "I found out a long time ago that it is easier to make par or birdie from the middle of the fairway than it is from the trees." Generally, he prefers to draw the ball, although he can work it both ways.

Ed Fiori had been riding on the big wave for several seasons, and then along came 1984. Even he found it difficult to explain why his performance level dipped sharply, but those who know this tough battler, know it was a temporary low tide.

During his years on the PGA TOUR, he has demonstrated an ability to win. His first victory came in the 1979 Southern Open when he defeated Tom Weiskopf in a playoff. Two years later, he won the Western Open by four strokes. He started the week with a 74, but fought back with rounds of 67, 69 and 67 on the difficult Butler National course.

He was at his finest in the 1982 Bob Hope Classic. He played brilliantly with rounds of 70, 65, 66, 67 and 67 to tie Tom Kite and then won the title in a playoff.

Last year, for reasons even he can't explain, he never was a serious challenger. Although it was a non-Tour event, he did find one ray of sunshine in Vail, CO, when he won $20,000 in the annual Jerry Ford Invitational.

His game started to improve once he returned to the TOUR. He commented, "It's been a lack of confidence. I've been driving it poorly and at the wrong time."

The stocky Fiori started in the game at age seven. "We lived next to a course in Downey, Calif., and I used to sneak through the strands of barbed wire to play. About twice a week, they would catch me and my pal and chase us off. A neighbor had given me a few clubs to use."

After high school, Ed started to work at odd jobs around southern California, mainly in construction work. He also found enough time to play considerable golf, "wherever I could find a game."

One of those golf excursions took him to a tournament in Guadalajara, Mexico. He birdied the last four holes to get into a playoff with Craig Stadler and Jack Renner. Stadler won the playoff, but a University of Houston alumnus was there and was impressed. He recommended him to the Cougars.

"I had been out of high school for four years, so I went to Wharton Junior College for a semester, sat out a semester and then transferred to Houston."

His second year, the Cougars won the NCAA team title, and Ed was named to the All-American team. "Until then, I had not thought much about joining the PGA TOUR, but that was all the guys on the team talked about . . . getting on the TOUR."

He dropped out of Houston in the spring of 1977, played in a few mini-Tour events and then headed for the Q-School.

When Raymond Floyd tells you he has played the best golf of his brilliant career during the last few years, you have to believe him. The record tells it all.

Since the start of this decade, he has won more than $1,250,000 and seven tournaments. He won some of the big ones, too, such as the 1981 Tournament Players Championship and the 1982 PGA Championship.

Even though he did not win in 1983, he teed it up in 22 tournaments and made the cut in them all, for one of the best consistency marks on TOUR. At the beginning of the last year, he switched to lightweight clubs, and now says that was a mistake. "I didn't perform up to my capabilities early in the year, and I'm sure it was because of that," he said.

The two greatest years of his career came in 1981 and 1982. He won three times in '81 and earned $359,360, finishing second only to Tom Kite. The next year, he won three more and reaped a harvest of $386,809, easily his all-time high, and was second again on the money list, this time to Craig Stadler.

His victory in the PGA Championship at Southern Hills in Tulsa was extremely impressive. He started with a seven-under par 63 and led all the way. He said of the 63, "without a doubt, it was the best round of golf I've ever played, anywhere in my life."

His second and third round totals of 132 and 200 respectively established PGA Championship records and he was heading for a 72-hole mark until he double bogeyed the last hole for a 272, missing the record by one. "I wasn't concerned about the record at all," he said, "I just wanted the victory."

Floyd grew up in Ft. Bragg, N. C., the son of an Army man who now is co-owner of the Cypress Lakes Golf Club in Fayetteville. Although he was exposed to golf at an early age, Ray chose to pursue baseball until he won the National Jaycees golf title in 1960. He turned pro the following year, joined the TOUR in 1963 and won the St. Petersburg Open as a rookie. At age 20 years and six months, he was the fourth youngest ever to win on TOUR.

Dan Forsman will tell you it takes awhile to get used to the life on the PGA TOUR, but he and his wife Trudy seem to be settling in quite nicely.

As the season progressed a year ago — his second time around the circuit — his game also improved, and he posted his two best finishes of the year in back-to-back appearances in Texas. He tied for seventh in the LaJet Classic after a first-day 67; and then tied for seventh in the Texas Open with a strong 66-68 closing.

With a smile, he said, "A good portion of my year was wrapped up in those two events." As a result, he finished the year with $52,152 and easily retained his exempt status for 1985.

As he talked of his first year on TOUR in 1983, he said, "It's a tremendous learning experience. You think you have the game when you come out, but you soon realize you need a lot of fine tuning. You have to learn how and when to use every club in your bag, playing a variety of shots."

During his first two years, this young man has shown that he can play this game and figures to be around for a long time. As he once said, "There are a lot of people who believe in me. It's time now for me to believe in me."

Dan started to play golf at age 13, being introduced to the game by his father, an avid golfer. Although he was born in Wisconsin, the family moved to the San Francisco area "when I was about two."

He played his golf at the Los Altos Country Club and started to play in the Northern California junior program, competing against the likes of Bobby Clampett and Joey Rassett.

After high school, where he also played basketball and some football, he headed for Arizona State University. "I wanted to keep playing golf," he said, "and I knew they had a good program there with such players as Tom Purtzer and Howard Twitty on the TOUR."

One of their matches was against an Alumni team, and Joe Porter, who played the TOUR for many years, said to him, "You can play out there. Just be patient with your game, work on it and it'll come."

Dan qualified for the 1982 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach and it was the first time he had ever competed against the TOUR pros. He was fortunate one day to have a practice round with Seve Ballesteros. At the time, Dan was working as an apprentice at the Camelback Country Club.

After enjoying some success in sectional PGA events, he felt it was time to try the TOUR. He went to the School in the Fall of 1982 and made it.

Now, it seems Dan and Trudy Forsman have found a home for many years.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1977 U.S. Amateur. Member, 1977 U.S. Walker Cup team, 1976 U.S. Amateur Cup team. Co-medalist 1978 Fall Q-School. 1979 Rookie of the Year.

The golfing fortunes of John Fought have been a little unpredictable through his six years on the TOUR, and he isn't certain why.

After his exceptional rookie season of 1979 when he won back-to-back tournaments, he had to struggle through the next three campaigns. He became so frustrated with his game at one point in 1982, that he took four months off and worked in the accounting office of his father.

"The lay-off helped me in several ways," he said later. "I developed a more positive approach to the game. I needed the time to think things through."

He came back with a new outlook and his game improved almost immediately. He was in position to win the Bob Hope Classic in 1983 after a third-round 62 at Indian Wells, but finally finished tied for fourth place.

This past year, his game slipped again and he called it a "very disappointing year. I'm beginning to wonder about my future in the game."

After John won the 1977 United States Amateur title, he appeared to be a shoe-in for stardom on the TOUR. In fact, he once said his goal as a first-year player was not just to make the top 60 money winners, but to win a tournament. In his first two attempts to obtain a TOUR card, he didn't make it. He succeeded in the Fall of 1979.

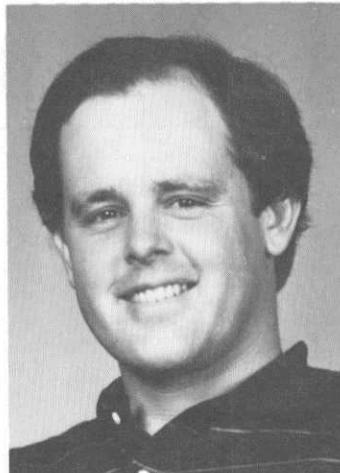

Through the first eight months of the year, he had not been impressive. Nevertheless, a tie for 13th at the Western Open and a tie for 14th at Hartford let him know he could play a little.

At the Buick Open in Grand Blanc, MI, the stocky six-footer from Brigham Young University was two-strokes out of the lead entering the final round, but he finally dropped a 10-foot birdie putt at the 18th hole to tie Jim Simons and then won it with a par on the second extra hole. The birdie at the 18th was quite an accomplishment when you consider that in the first three rounds, he played the 18th with two double bogeys and a bogey.

The next week at the Anheuser-Busch Classic at the Silverado Country Club in Napa, CA, there was a five-way tie for the lead when John played the last hole, and he birdied for his victory. Roger Maltbie in 1975 had been the last rookie to win back-to-back tournaments.

At the time, his $108,427 was the third highest amount ever won by a rookie.

A solid collegiate career, during which he won the 1975 Pacific Coast Amateur and the 1976 Pacific Northwest Open, set the stage for his one-stroke victory in the 1977 U.S. Amateur at Aronomink near Philadelphia.

The golfing career of Buddy Gardner has shot straight for the stars the last two years and those who know him, are delighted. They know he has had to overcome numerous obstacles, especially to be able to enjoy the year he had in 1984.

Buddy won more money than he did in the previous four years combined. The high point was in the Houston Coca-Cola Open when he finished second, just one stroke behind Corey Pavin. It was the third runner-up finish in seven years on TOUR.

He said of the year, "For a change I was healthy and I also made a lot of putts."

Buddy first qualified for the TOUR in the Fall of 1977, but in his first full year of 1978, he won only $5,637 and lost his card. He went back to the Q-School in the Fall of that year and earned it back. Starting in 1979, he failed to qualify for the first four events, and then hit paydirt. He tied for second behind Bruce Lietzke in the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open. It set up a very good year, winning $71,468. He also tied for second in the Anheuser-Busch Classic in the fall.

"I wasn't ready the next year," he admits. "I didn't use the time to my advantage. I enjoyed the exempt status and paid dearly for it because I didn't perform."

To make matters worse, at the Walt Disney World Team Championship, he was in a pick-up football game. Running for a pass, he tripped over a lawn chair and tore all the ligaments in his left wrist. He tried to play with it, but eventually had to have the wrist put in a cast for two months.

"It still hurt after the cast was off," he said, "and I altered my golf swing so I could play. It destroyed my game, but I fought it for a year-and-a-half."

He reached a low of $6,214 in 1982, finishing 192nd on the money list. It was back to the Qualifying School.

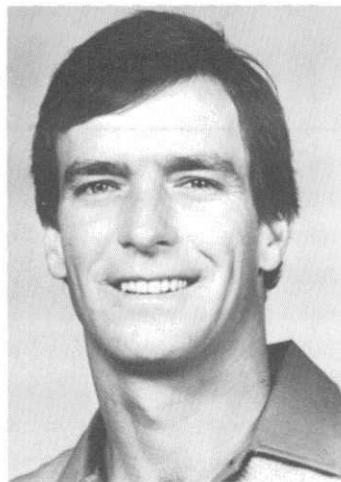

In the regional qualifier at Dallas, he made an adjustment in his alignment after the first round because of the high winds. "All I did was move the ball back six-seven inches in my stance and tried to hit three-quarter shots. By the time I hit the third ball, I knew it was right, and I played well all the way through the school." He was sixth in the final qualifier at the Tournament Players Club.

A big change in his life occurred on May 28 in 1983 when he married Susan, a nurse from Birmingham, AL. "It certainly changed my lifestyle," he said, "and it also gave me the reason I needed to work hard on my game."

Buddy started in the game at age five. "We lived about 100 yards from the first tee of the Bonnie Crest Country Club in Montgomery (AL). Everyone in the family played golf, so it was natural for me to play, too."

At one time, Buddy recalls, the juniors competition in that area was pretty tough, "with the likes of Bill Rogers, Mike Reid, Mac McLendon and myself competing against each other."

He won the Alabama State high school golf championship as a senior and went to Auburn University on a scholarship. His most important amateur title was the 1976 Dixie Amateur, and he edged Ron Streck in that one.

As long as golf is played, Al will be remembered for the afternoon at the Colonial Country Club during the 1977 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic when he became the first player ever to break 60 in a PGA TOUR event. He had a 13-under par 59. It came on June 10, during the second round and was a master blend of 11 birdies and one eagle. He used only 23 putts in the 30-29 effort, culminating in an eight footer for a birdie on the final hole.

He went on to win the tournament, although he had to hold off late challenges by Gary Player and Jerry McGee to do it.

Al represents the Beaver Creek Resort course in Vail, CO, and last Fall they hosted a Mr. 59 tournament. Several LPGA players were invited and if anyone had been able to shoot 59 or lower, the reward would have been $1 million. Laughing, Al said, "Fortunately, no one came close and the best I could do was 69."

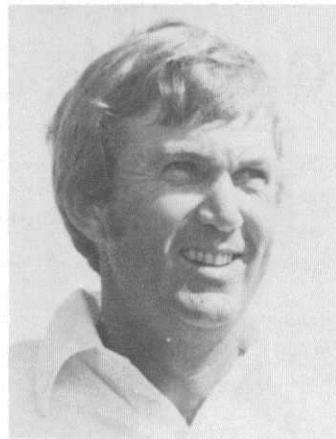

Over the years, he has done well on the toughest tracks, such as Firestone Country Club in winning the 1965 American Golf Classic and the 1966 PGA Championship; 1975 Tournament Players Championship and the 1979 Colonial National Invitation, both at the Colonial Country Club in Fort Worth; and the 1976 Western Open at the Butler National.

If there were such a category as "most comebacks from surgery" in the all-time PGA TOUR records, Al Geiberger would be leading it by such a wide margin that no one would ever catch him.

Yet, this lanky fellow keeps smiling and telling everyone that what has happened is history, and it's just great to be able to play on the TOUR again. One wonders how brilliant a record he would have had if he had been healthy for the past decade.

First, it was a nervous stomach disorder that nearly ended his career late in the 1960's and early 1970's. He battled back from that to win the 1974 Sahara Invitational, ending a victory drought of more than eight years.

Just when his long irons were whistling with incredible accuracy, he was struck down again early in 1978 when he needed intestinal surgery, and then late in 1979 with knee surgery. Seemingly healthy again, he suffered a severe attack while in Vail, Colo., for the Jerry Ford Invitational in July of 1980 and emergency surgery had to be performed for the removal of his colon. In all, he underwent three separate operations in approximately two months for an ileostomy.

Gibby Gilbert will be the first to tell you he is leading the good life these days. He will play 15-to-20 tournaments a year, win enough money to retain his exempt status, and spend the rest of his time at home in Chattanooga, TN.

He has done just that during the last two seasons. He did it last year with a strong finish as he had three top 10s in his last four starts. He saved his best for last, a tie for fifth in the Pensacola Open, but he also tied for seventh in the Southern Open and tied for 10th in the Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational. He won more than $40,000 in his last four outings.

His goal now is to win at least $1 million on TOUR, and he figures to reach that milestone this year.

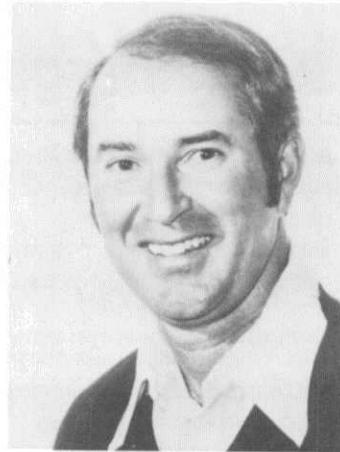

Back home in Chattanooga, Gibby is part-owner in the Brainerd Golf Club. "I grew up on that course," he said, "and that's where all my buddies play, so it was a great feeling for me to be able to buy it a few years ago. It was something I always wanted to do."

Despite the lack of a given name — it's C. L. Gilbert, Jr. — Gibby began to make a name for himself in golf early in his native Chattanooga. He started in the game at age 13. He left the University of Chattanooga in 1962 to be married, and later accepted a job as assistant professional in Hollywood, Fla.

He went to the Qualifying School in 1967 and finished second to Bobby Cole. It was 2½ years later that he won his first event, the Houston Champions International in a playoff over Bruce Crampton. Even today, he'll tell you, "I wasn't a good player when I won then," but he certainly has become one since then.

In 1972, he suffered a setback, and finished 73rd on the money list. Faced with non-exempt status, he thought seriously about leaving the TOUR, but stuck with it for one more year. He won $60,636 in 1973 for 48th place, and he has been a steady performer ever since. Only one other year did he drop from the top 60, and that was in 1977. He suffered rib injuries in the spring, and missed almost all of the summer tournaments. However, he retained his exempt status when he joined with Grier Jones late in the year and they won the Walt Disney World National Team title.

A highlight of his career came in 1973 at the World Open. He set a course-record 62 on Pinehurst No. 2. It shattered the best previous mark by three strokes.

Maybe Bob Gilder had dreamed of having a year such as he enjoyed in 1982, but he probably never expected to have one.

Three times he went to the winner's circle and each time he put on a marvelous display of scoring. He always has been known as a player capable of shooting low numbers, and his winning score of 14-under par 266 in the Byron Nelson Classic was the lowest ever shot in the 16 years the tournament was played at Preston Trail.

His 19-under par 261 in the Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic set a tournament standard and his week was highlighted by a double eagle two on the 509-yard 18th hole the third day. He only needed a driver and three wood.

Finally, he won the Bank of Boston Classic and with his other strong finishes, he collected $308,648, good for sixth place. He was named to the PGA TOUR team that faced Japan in the Goldwin Cup and also joined with Bobby Clampett as the U.S. representatives in the World Cup.

After the first five weeks of 1983, he was heading for another terrific year. He won the Phoenix Open in a playoff over Rex Caldwell, Johnny Miller and Mark O'Meara, tied for fourth in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am and tied for seventh in the Bob Hope Classic.

His game cooled after that, but he did come on strong at the end of the year and distinguished himself in his first appearance on a Ryder Cup team.

With those spectacular performances in mind, it came as a great surprise when he suffered through the poor year in 1984. Part of it was caused by back problems, but he also said, "I really wasn't ready to play when the year started and I couldn't make my body do what I wanted it to do. Besides, I putted terrible."

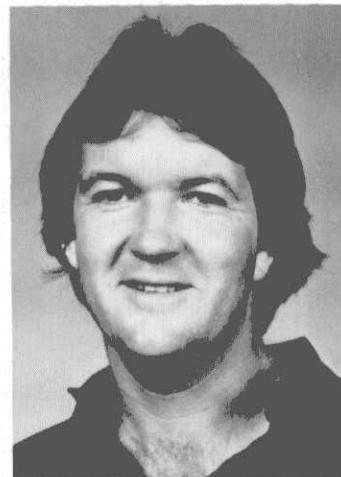

Bob starred for the Arizona State University golf team — winning the 1973 Western Athletic Conference title — and was a teammate of Howard Twitty and Tom Purtzer. After he was graduated in 1973, he tried for his TOUR card three times without success. Meanwhile, in 1974, he won the New Zealand Open in a playoff over Jack Newton and Bob Charles.

In the Fall of 1975, he did earn his playing privileges.

In his first start of 1976, he missed the cut in the Tucson Open. The next week at the Phoenix Country Club, he overtook Roger Maltbie the final afternoon to win by two strokes.

He became only the fourth first-year player to win more than $100,000, and would have been the "rookie-of-the-year," if Jerry Pate had not won the U.S. and Canadian Opens and $153,102.

Normally an excellent striker of the ball, he has the ability to move his shots in either direction and, that, he says, "is an excellent feeling because you can't always play the same shot."

There have been many highlights in the spectacular career of David Graham, too many to mention, but everyone knows his victories in the 1979 PGA Championship and the 1981 United States Open Championship would be enough to last many a man a lifetime.

David, the proud man that he is, will treasure those moments forever, but he also is particularly pleased to be ranked as the all-time money winner among the talented Australians who have played the Tour. He slipped past Bruce Crampton in 1983.

He has won well over $100,000 in each of his last six seasons, with the high mark being reached in 1983. He collected the tidy sum of $244,924. One of the highlights of that year was a victory in the Houston Coca-Cola Open when he came from five strokes behind the last afternoon.

David has established a remarkable record for a fellow who started in the game with a pick-up set of left-handed clubs.

At the Merion Golf Club in the U.S. Open championship, he trailed George Burns by three strokes after three rounds. He then played what many have called one of the finest finishing rounds in the history of the tournament. He shot a three-under par 67 for a total of seven-under 273, one stroke better than Burns and Bill Rogers.

As Rogers said at the awards ceremony, "David Graham hit 18 greens in regulation and in the last round of the U.S. Open, that is unbelievable."

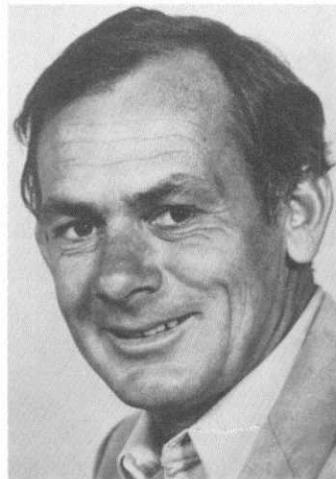

Not many of his eight victories have been easy. His first was in the 1972 Cleveland Open and he had to defeat his close friend, Bruce Devlin, in a playoff.

When he won the PGA Championship in 1979, he was cruising and then he double bogeyed the 18th hole to let Ben Crenshaw tie him. He won it with a birdie on the third extra hole.

In the Memorial Tournament in 1980, Tom Watson was headed for an apparent victory, but David won it with a 30-foot birdie putt at the 18th.

David was only 14-years old when he found the left-handed clubs in his garage in Windsor, Australia. He played with them for two years before making the switch to righthanded. As a 16-year old, he worked in a golf shop in Melbourne and, after a three-year apprenticeship, took a head job at a nine-hole course in Tasmania.

Late in the 1960's, he embarked on the tournament circuit, first through Australia and the Far East. It was a road that has taken him to the very top.

There may never have been another week in the life of Lou Graham quite like the one he experienced in June of 1975 at wet-and-soggy Medinah Country Club in Chicago. That's when he overcame the challenges of many, and especially John Mahaffey, to win the United States Open Championship.

He has been reaping the benefits ever since, with his 10-year exemption to all PGA TOUR co-sponsored events one of the major ones. It couldn't have happened to a nicer gentleman. At Medinah, he was 11-strokes off the pace being set by Tom Watson after 36 holes, but a splendid 67 the third day let him leap to within four strokes of Frank Beard, who became the third-round leader.

Despite the thunderstorms and delays, Lou managed a two-over par 73 the last afternoon and that left him in a tie with Mahaffey at three-over par 287. Lou won it all the next day, 71 to 73.

That came in Lou's 12th year on TOUR, and he posted only two other victories. Yet, for some unexplained reason, he went on a tear late in 1979 and won three more tournaments within a space of eight weeks. He couldn't begin to explain the new-found success. He defeated Bobby Wadkins in a playoff at the IVB-Philadelphia Classic, then won the American Optical Classic at Pleasant Valley and finally the San Antonio-Texas Open.

Lou started to play the game at age 10 in his native Nashville, TN. He earned a scholarship to Memphis State University and he stayed for three years. Golf was his game, though, and not textbooks.

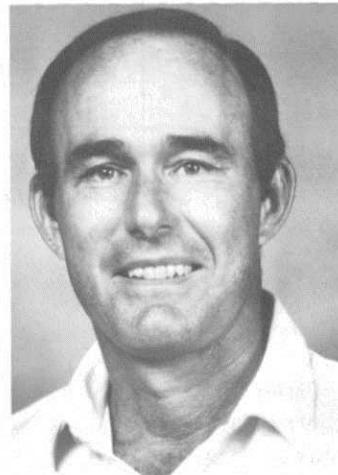

He enlisted in the Army and served in the President's Honor Guard, but he didn't care for the service any more than he did the textbooks. He says with his sly grin, "I wanted out the day I got in."

After his discharge in 1962, he worked at two clubs near Baltimore before he found the financial backing to head for the TOUR in 1964. He has been an exempt player ever since 1967 except for 1969 when he was 68th on the money list. He underwent surgery to repair tendonitis in his left hand.

As an example of his strong consistent play, he was selected to three United States Ryder Cup teams.

The last couple of years, Lou has been spending some of his time competing in Tournament Players Series events. On the PGA TOUR, his best finish last year was a tie for eighth place in the Bank of Boston Classic. He opened with a pair of 69s.

He said his consistency has been a problem the last year or so. "One week my driving would be off a little, and the next week it would be my putting."

Toward the end of the year, when Hubert Green was asked to summarize his performance in 1984, he smiled and replied, "just say it was a little bit better."

In a matter of a few weeks, it became considerably better. It became his best year since 1979. A tie for fifth place in the LaJet Classic set the stage for his fast finish. He skipped the Texas Open the next week and then won the Southern Open by six strokes with a superb 15-under par 265 effort.

The next week in the Walt Disney World Classic, he battled Larry Nelson to the wire, but his 21-under par 267 showing left him in second place, just one stroke behind.

After suffering through his poorest year on TOUR in 1983, he had to undergo microscopic surgery on a shoulder and the splendid year of 1984 resulted.

Throughout his career, Hubert has been a hard worker. As a result, he says, "I want to do everything well. I've always been hard on myself and that's a trait of Hubert Green."

Hubert had stretch of about seven years through the 1970s when he was devastating and certainly one of the outstanding players in the world. During one three-week period in 1976, he won three straight tournaments — Doral-Eastern Open, Greater Jacksonville Open and the Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

The next year, he won the United States Open in a gutsy performance at Southern Hills in Tulsa. While his swing may have appeared a little unorthodox, it was highly effective.

Hubert started to swing a club at age five, but as he was going through the teen years, he played all sports. "My father was a believer in sports," he says. "He wanted me to play them all, but as I became older, I eliminated one after the other as I realized I wasn't good enough or big enough to play them."

As a result, he began to concentrate more on golf and during his high school days spent considerable time during the summer months playing in the many special invitationals held throughout his native Alabama. The next step was Florida State University.

He turned professional in 1970 and worked for a summer as an assistant pro at Merion Golf Club in Ardmore, Pa. He qualified for his TOUR card in the fall of that year.

Success came quickly. In the Houston Champions International, he tied Don January and then birdied the first extra hole for the victory. He was named the "rookie-of-the-year."

Jay Haas has been one of the more highly-regarded players on the PGA TOUR for several years and one of the most popular among his colleagues.

Jay quietly goes about his business, wins a few tournaments, challenges numerous times and collects a healthy amount of money. Even when he is in a stretch of sub-par golf — for him — he finds something positive and cheerful to say.

He didn't win in 1984, but he said, "My whole year was wrapped up in Westchester. The year was more of a grind than some of the other years, mainly because of my day-to-day putting. But, it was successful."

Jay's biggest seasons were in 1981 and 1982. He won twice each year, and it was his performance late in 1982 and early 1983 that earned him a position on the U. S. Ryder Cup team.

Last year, a tie for second in the Manufacturers-Hanover Westchester Classic was his best effort, but in the next two weeks, he tied for 11th in the U. S. Open and tied for fifth in the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic.

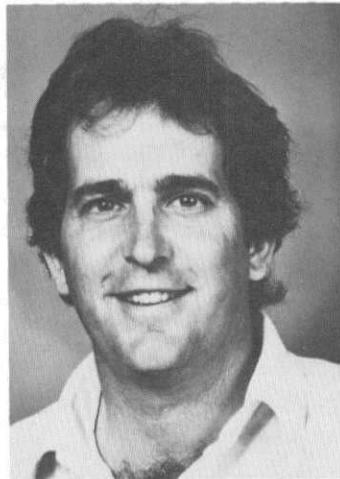

With former Masters champion Bob Goalby as his uncle, it was a foregone conclusion that Jay would become a professional golfer. Bob started him early, and has helped him through every stage of his career.

"I was about five years old when I started to swing a golf club," Jay recalls. With a wide grin, he went on, "Bob had a club that was broken in half, so it actually was about my size. He put a grip on it, and that was the start. It wasn't long after that he put several more clubs together."

Jay was seven when he played his first tournament — and won his first trophy. It was the National Pee Wee Championship in Orlando, Fla. "We played five holes each day and I scored 26-26—52 to finish third," he said.

Under the tutelage of Goalby, Jay went on to win the Illinois state high school championship in 1972 and then headed for Wake Forest. His junior year was the big one. "I had one stretch when I played some of the best golf of my life," he said. It started with him winning three of his Walker Cup matches, then advancing to the fifth round of the British Amateur; the third week he was low amateur in the U.S. Open at Medinah; and finally, he won the NCAA championship at Ohio State University.

He earned his TOUR card in the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1976.

Gary Hallberg is emerging as the consistently-strong player everyone expected him to be, but, more important, he will tell you he is learning how to control his own environment.

"Even though I didn't win in 1984," he said, "it was my best year. It's taken me quite a while to learn patience. I'm more comfortable with my surroundings. I've learned to do my own thing, and so my game has improved."

He enjoyed his most-successful financial year in 1984 due mainly to his improved consistency. He won the 1983 Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open and last year, he nearly won it again. He would have too, except that Gary Koch shot a final-round 65 at Torrey Pines to tie him and then Koch won the playoff with a birdie on the second extra hole.

His first two full years were a disappointment. He explained, "When I first started on TOUR, I thought all I had to do was play golf. It came so easy the first few weeks, but I now know there is a lot more to the learning process."

His victory in 1983 was something of a surprise. He trailed Tom Kite by four strokes entering the last round at Torrey Pines, and proceeded to shoot a six-under par 66 to edge Kite by one. He had an eight-foot birdie putt at the final hole and he made it. "My heart was pumping like it's never pumped before," he said.

Gary was an impressive winner all through his amateur career and instant stardom was expected once he joined the PGA TOUR. He did very well through his first few months out of the chute. He was the first player ever to earn his TOUR card by winning the minimum $8,000 needed at that time to obtain playing privileges without going through the Qualifying School. In 11 tournaments, he won $64,244. He finished the year with six top 10 finishes.

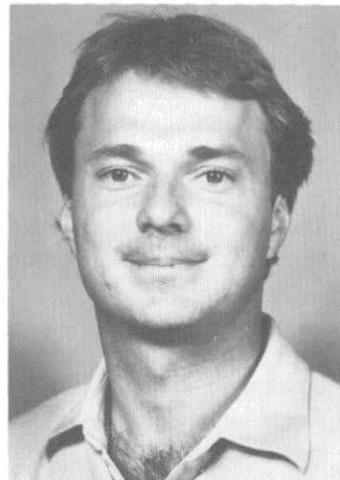

Gary started in the game at age nine when his father brought home a set of old clubs. He thought it would be a fine idea for his son to play golf instead of baseball.

"Dad figured he could drop me off at the course on his way to work and pick me up on his way home," Gary said. "If I played baseball, it would only take two-or-three hours."

Once he started to play, he loved the game and worked diligently at it. So much so, in fact, that his Dad finally had to tell him to ease up and not be so serious.

When Gary was about 15-years old, he and his Dad turned some of their 15 acres into a course where Gary could play at home all the time. He eventually earned a scholarship to Wake Forest, and he went on to become the first four-time, first-team All-America choice. He was the NCAA champion in 1979 and won a total of 14 college tournaments.

During his early teen years, he also played hockey, and it wasn't until he went to Wake Forest that he started to think about being a professional golfer.

Leader, 1983 Canadian PGA Order of Merit.

Dan Halldorson is another of the fine players to come out of Canada and, after some physical problems in 1983 and in early 1984, he appears to be on the winning track again.

He developed eczema on his hands in the Fall of 1982. He said he tried to come back too soon in 1983, but he kept playing. Instead, his hands became worse and he developed bad habits in his golf swing.

"I lost a lot of confidence," he said. "Early last year, I tried to get my old swing back, so I was making a lot of adjustments. It took more time than I figured it would."

There were positive signs toward the end of the year when he tied for sixth place in the B.C. Open and then challenged all week in the LaJet Classic before finally settling for a tie for third place. He knew, though, he was close to his old form.

It was in 1980 that he enjoyed his biggest year. He won the Pensacola Open and then joined with Jim Nelford to give Canada the World Cup team title.

Dan first qualified for the TOUR in the Fall of 1974, but he only won $619 in 1975 and lost his card. He spent the next three years playing all across Canada. "I knew my game wasn't good enough for the TOUR," he said.

He won a few times and piled up a number of second-place finishes, but decided in 1978 that he wasn't going anywhere in the game while playing in his homeland. He wanted another shot at the U.S. TOUR.

He made it through the Qualifying School, and early in 1979, he tasted success. After two rounds of the Hawaiian Open, he was tied for the lead with Fuzzy Zoeller and George Burns, but finally tied for seventh.

Even though he finished 116th on the 1979 money list, he believed the top 60 in 1980 was a realistic goal. After he finished second to Jim Colbert in the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, winning $32,400, he knew it was.

He already was assured of exempt status for 1981 with a position among the top 60 money winners when he headed for Pensacola. After two rounds of 68-67 at Perdido Bay, he was tied with Gary Hallberg and Tom Kite at nine-under 135. A 70 the third day left him three in back of Bob Mann, but his final-round 70 was all he needed to regain the lead.

The Halldorson family lived across the street from a golf course in Winnipeg, so he started in the game at an early age. He even built a practice range in his back yard.

In his home province, he has won the Manitoba Juniors, the Manitoba PGA and four times the Manitoba Open. In 1981 and 1982, he was honored as the Canadian Playing Professional of the Year.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—27; in money—22; top ten finishes—0; stroke avg.—71.82.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 30—eagles (7).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner, 1982 Florida State Open. Medalist in 1982 PGA TOUR Qualifying School, winning by 14 strokes. Set course record of 65 at Tournament Players Club in Q-School. Winner 1979 Sun Belt Conference title.

When Ben Crenshaw won medalist honors by 12 strokes in the Fall Qualifying School of 1973, his performance was labeled "incredible." Indeed it was.

Well, in the Fall of 1982, Donnie Hammond did him two better. He was the medalist by an astounding 14 strokes with a six-day, 13-under par score of 419. He had opening rounds of 66 and 68, followed with a 71, and then stunned everyone with a record seven-under par 65 on the tough Tournament Players Club course in Ponte Vedra, FL.

One of the keys, he said, came the first day. He started at No. 10 at the TPC and "when I walked to the 18th green (his ninth hole), I looked up and there was my Dad in the stands. I was three under at the time and I stayed pumped up all week."

His father has had a tremendous amount of influence on Donnie.

His home was in Frederick, MD, and the old Baltimore Colts of the NFL had their pre-season training camp not too far away at Westminster College. "I would go with Dad to watch them, and then he'd play a nine-hole course there. I only had four-or-five irons, but I seemed to pick it up quickly. When he saw that, he bought me a set. I was 13 at the time."

Donnie played at Frederick High School and then went to Jacksonville University. In three years, he won five college events, including the Sun Belt Conference title in 1979 by six strokes. He played on the Space Coast tour for three years.

When he started in the Q-School at the TPC, it was his fourth attempt at obtaining a TOUR card. "All I did that week," he said, "was work to avoid the double and triple bogeys. I hit a lot of irons off the par four holes, working for position."

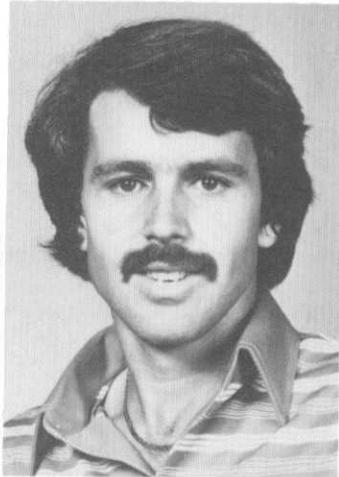

The highlight of his first year was his fine play in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am. He was tied for second place after three rounds, only two strokes off the pace being set by Tom Kite, the eventual winner.

"Jim Ireland, the Vice-President of FootJoy, was my amateur partner, and we made the cut in team play, too. The last day, we were paired with Tom Kite and it was a great thrill to watch such a good player."

Maybe the biggest thrill of his rookie year came in the Kemper Open. "My Dad used to take me to all the junior tournaments, but at the Kemper, he actually caddied for me. I'll never forget that week."

Donnie increased his money winnings last year. He said, "It was similar to the year I had in 1983, except I felt more comfortable on the weekends. I suppose part o' it was due to the fact I was more familiar with the courses. Generally, I was pleased with my play because I was more consistent."

When he is playing well, driving is a strong point because he is able to keep the ball in play.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner, 1969 Alabama State Juniors; 1972 Alabama State Amateur; 1975 and 1976 Southeastern Conference; 1975 and 1976 American Amateur Classic; 1977 Columbian Open (South America). Named All-America 1975 and 1976.

There have been several ups-and-downs to the career of Phil Hancock, and the level of excellence seems to vary with the condition of his back. He has had problems with it, and all one has to do is check his money winning record to see when the pain flared up.

He was in good shape in 1980 and the result was a victory in the Hall of Fame Classic on one of his favorite courses, No. 2 at Pinehurst. He went on to a $105,489 year.

"It took a lot of hard work," he said of the victory, "and I pointed to winning a tournament for sometime. I always felt I could win on the TOUR, but you can play well out here for a long time and either not win at all or not win as much as you would like."

He considered 1983 a good one because "I played as consistently as I've ever played. I had a bad stretch of putting, and that kept the results from being better, but I really didn't have many bad rounds or tournaments."

Phil always has enjoyed success at golf. Although he was an All-Conference quarterback at Greenville (Ala.) High School and also excelled in basketball, golf was his sport. "I knew that would be the one I'd play in college and that one day I would turn professional," he said.

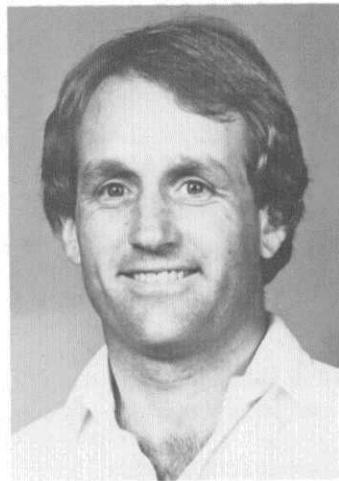

He started as a nine-year old on the encouragement of his father and an older brother. He won the Alabama State Junior title in 1969 and the Alabama State Amateur in 1972. He went on to the University of Florida and twice won the Southeastern Conference crown. While there, he was a teammate of Andy Bean, Gary Koch and Mike Sullivan.

He enrolled in the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1976 and it came as quite a shock to him when he didn't make it. When it was time for the School in the Spring of 1977, he was ready. He won medalist honors, and in his first start as a member of the TOUR, he tied for ninth in the Western Open.

In the 1978 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, Phil played some of the finest golf of his career for the first two rounds. He shot 64-64—128, and led by two. He learned a valuable lesson in patience.

"The first two days," he recalled, "I didn't come close to making a bogey, but I put too much pressure on myself trying to continue at that pace."

Although he considers himself a good tee-to-green player and a better than average putter, his short game was one that needed work, and he has improved on that too. When he is playing well, he prefers to move the ball from right-to-left.

Morris Hatalsky is a classic example of what rewards will come your way with hard work, patience and faith.

He has experienced his highs and lows during his years on the PGA TOUR, but he knew it was not going to be easy. After all, as he points out, "I was in five Qualifying Schools before I made it," in the Spring of 1976.

He enjoyed his most profitable year in 1983, but last year proved to be a disappointment. "It probably was my toughest year in sometime for a couple of reasons. One, my short game left me; and also I had some back problems, problems I've never experienced before."

He worked on becoming a better ball striker in 1984, and believes he neglected his chipping and putting. "I learned you have to work on all aspects of your game," he stated.

In July of 1983, he won the Greater Milwaukee Open in a playoff over George Cadle. The next week, he lost a playoff to Danny Edwards in the Miller High Life QCO and then tied for eighth in the Anheuser-Busch Classic. He went on to his first $100,000-plus year.

The first time he reaped the rewards of his dedication was in the Fall of 1982 when he won the Hall of Fame Classic on the famed No. 2 course at Pinehurst, winning by two strokes over Jerry Pate and D.A. Weibring.

Morris started in golf at age 10 after his brother gave him a set of clubs. "I fell in love with the game right away," he said. Living in San Diego, it wasn't long until he was competing on the junior level and winning. At age 17, for example, he won the Mexico National Junior title, and in 1969, was the San Diego High school golfer of the year.

After two years at Arizona State University, he transferred to the United States International University and continued to play well.

During his first full year on the TOUR, in 1977, he finished second to Dave Eichelberger in the Greater Milwaukee Open. He admits the next year was a "disaster". I realized I had no firm foundation to my game but relied on my chipping and putting."

At the end of the year, he went to Ken Venturi for help and the improvement was immediate. "I was committed to stay on TOUR as long as I could," he said, "but it wasn't a case of winning then; it was a case of making money."

Venturi changed the fundamentals of his swing and his thoughts about how to play the game. The records tell the rest of the story.

Mark Hayes started to play golf at age six, under the watchful eye of his father, a high school physical education teacher and golf coach.

Since that time, Mark has gone about his way, dedicating himself to succeeding in the game, and he has been successful. His biggest victory came in the 1977 Tournament Players Championship at Sawgrass, and with it, a 10-year exemption on the TOUR.

Three years ago, Mark started to work on a major swing change, primarily getting a bigger turn and using his upper body more. This past year, he spent time with Dr. Bob Rotella, the sports psychologist. "I've worked hard and not obtained the results," he said. "Part of it is mental, and Dr. Rotella has been a big help."

At the age of 13, the family returned to Stillwater, where Mark was born and there he came under the tutelage of Labron Harris, Sr., the Oklahoma State University coach and a close friend of Mark's Dad.

"One of the reasons I was so dedicated to the game," Mark says, "was that I was small for my age and I couldn't do anything else well. I practiced every day. I never thought about doing anything else for a living but playing golf."

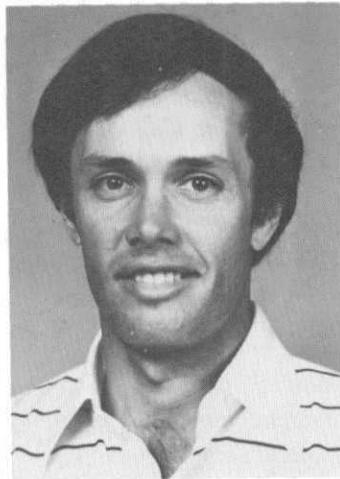

One highlight of his blossoming career came in the annual Texas vs. Oklahoma Junior matches, and he defeated Tom Kite in the final.

During his years at Stillwater High and Oklahoma State, he was a teammate of Doug Tewell, and it was Mark who eventually convinced Doug that he should play the TOUR for a living, and not work in a pro shop.

After leaving college, he went into the Army for two years and spent most of his time at Fort Jackson, S. C., working in the golf shop. There at the same time was Joe Inman.

He arrived on the TOUR in the Fall of 1973 and broke through with two victories in 1976. He led the Byron Nelson Classic from wire-to-wire and closed the year with a victory in the Pensacola Open.

His closest brush with victory in the last few years was in the 1981 Greater Greensboro Open. He was leading Larry Nelson by two, approaching the final green, but Nelson made a near impossible bunker shot for a birdie, and Mark, stunned by the turn of events, made bogey from the back fringe. Larry won it all with a birdie on the second extra hole of their playoff.

A three-time All-American at North Carolina State, Vance Heafner had justifiably big expectations when he turned pro in 1978 and tried to earn his PGA TOUR card. Several frustrating experiences in Qualifying Schools, however, delayed his start until June of 1980. But since his 1981 campaign, he has displayed the talent that is necessary to be successful on the TOUR.

Vance has not won an individual title through his first five years, but he challenged frequently enough to have his name displayed on a lot of leader boards.

Last year, he was tied with Scott Hoch after three rounds of the Miller High Life QCO, but Hoch shot an exceptional final round and left Vance tied for second. He also challenged for most of the week at the LaJet Classic before finishing in a tie for third place.

He has had some back problems and in New Orleans at the USF&G Classic, he tore a muscle. "I never gave it time to heal," he said. As a result, he had to wear a brace.

The strapping six-footer, who is the son of the late Clayton Heafner, a noted player in the 1940's and 50's, got his feet wet with earnings of $11,398 in 18 tournaments over the last half of the 1980 season. He was aiming directly at an exempt Top 60 spot as the 1981 season opened — and he reached that goal in dramatic fashion in the season's last two weeks.

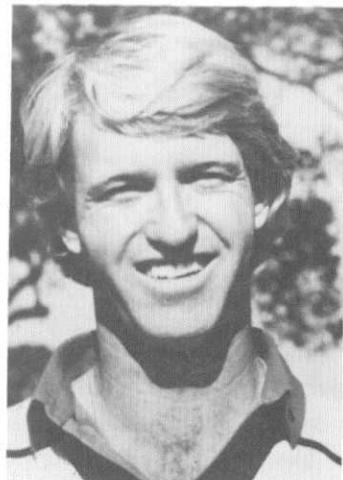

Indeed, it came down to the last two holes at the Pensacola Open, where he ran home birdie putts to tie for 10th place, earning the $4,433 which lifted him past Gibby Gilbert into the 60th and final exempt position.

"I think every player aims for exempt status in his first year. I'm not really a goal-oriented person, but I have to say that those last two weeks of the season were the most exciting and enjoyable times I've had in golf," he said.

Heafner's enthusiasm carried over into the next week, where he and partner Mike Holland ran off with the Walt Disney World National Team Championship. They won with a record-breaking score of 42-under par 246, leaving the second-place team five shots back.

As Clayton Heafner's son, his exposure to golf was early. But with his father's death, when Vance was six years old, his athletic interests broadened, and he became a better-than-average high school basketball and football player. Golf continually beckoned however, and he gave up the other sports to concentrate on golf in his senior year, a decision for which he was rewarded with a golf scholarship to North Carolina State.

His college coach, Richard Sykes, and then Roger Watson, became the guiding forces in his playing career. Watson, especially, helped the young Heafner build a game which has proven capable of success on the PGA TOUR.

When you look at the PGA TOUR record of Lon Hinkle, it appears as if it was compiled by two different players. In his first five years, he won a grand total of $40,876. In the next year alone, he easily surpassed that figure. Since then, he has been one of the leading players in the game.

He hit a high mark in 1979, winning $247,693 and finishing third on the money list. His earnings dipped in 1982 when he suffered with a shoulder injury. Last year, he started well with three top 10 finishes in his first four starts, and then his game soured. He broke his driver in 1983, and last year stated, "My driving disappeared and hasn't come back." Late in the year, he was back in the groove and finished strong.

Chatting about his early days on TOUR, he says, "my goals were too low. My main goal was to survive. When things would go bad over here, I'd bail out and go overseas to find an easier game."

On one of those trips, he met Edith, a Swiss beauty, and she gave him a new purpose to life. Since then, his career has shot straight for the stars.

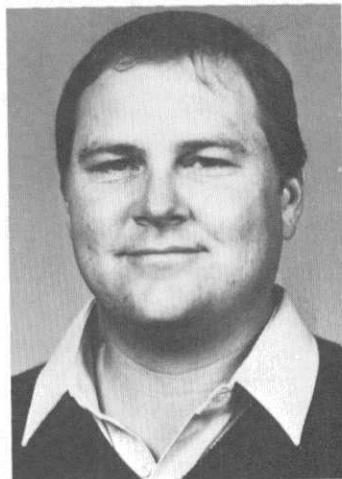

While his first victory was in the 1978 New Orleans Open, he had his biggest year in 1979, winning the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am in a playoff over Mark Hayes and Andy Bean. He also won the World Series of Golf, outlasting Larry Nelson to the wire.

Lon's father is a Professor in Literature at San Diego State University, and Lon started in the game of golf at age 13, shortly after the family moved from Granville, Ohio, to San Diego. He'd play golf every day.

There are seven Hinkle children and in the early days, it wasn't unusual for all of them to be competing in junior golf tournaments around southern California.

Lon received a mental boost in 1980 when he finished third to Jack Nicklaus in the United States Open and PGA Championships. Although Jack won both by comfortable margins, Lon learned in those two experiences that he could win the significant championships.

His biggest enjoyment in 1981 came in the National Long Drive contest. He won with a belt of 338 yards, six inches and became the first TOUR player ever to win it.

Scott Hoch should have had the feeling right from the start that 1984 was going to be a good year. In the Seiko-Tucson Match Play, he went all the way to the semi-finals before being edged by Tom Watson, 2 and 1, but he captured third place with a 2 and 1 decision over Lanny Wadkins.

He saved his best for a two-month period in the summer when he won the Miller High Life QCO for the second time, finished third at the Kemper and Buick Opens, was fourth in the Western Open and sixth in the Anheuser-Busch Classic.

At Quad Cities, he had two 67s and two 66s to win by five strokes. It was the third victory of his career. Late in the season, he tied for second in the Southern Open behind Hubert Green.

Scott qualified for the PGA TOUR in the Fall of 1979 but before he had a chance to tee it up in his first start, the 1980 Phoenix Open, he jarred his back and had to withdraw. The pain became so severe he could not even swing a club. It wasn't until the Atlanta Classic in June — the 23rd tournament of the year — that he was able to play 72 holes. He went 15 weeks without even trying to enter.

A few weeks later, in the Quad Cities Open, he shot a course-record 63 the first day and never was headed. He went on to set a tournament-record 14-under par 266 and edged two of his former Wake Forest teammates, Curtis Strange who was second, and Gary Hallberg, who finished third.

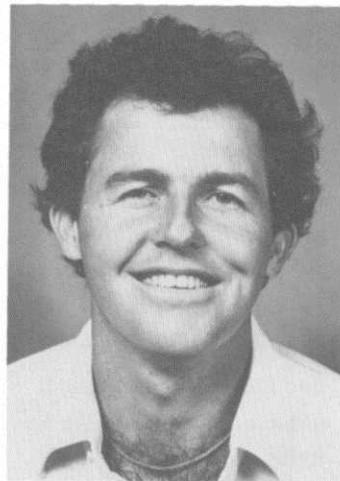

The back continued to bother him the rest of the year. In fact, there still are times when he can not go full bore.

He opened 1982 at the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, and, after only a few days of practice, he tied for 15th. The next week, he was fourth alone in the Bob Hope Desert Classic. Bouyed by such a fine start, he continued to play well and won again in the rain-shortened USF&G Classic in New Orleans.

He was only one stroke in back of Bob Shearer after the first round, but the next day, he traded places with the Australian. The third round wasn't completed until Monday because of weather problems, and Scott's two-under par 70 gave him a three-round total of 10-under 206. He was declared the winner over Shearer and Tom Watson.

He was raised in an athletic family and started to play golf at age eight. His father, Art, preceded him at Wake Forest, earning All-American honors in baseball and then played professionally until injuries shortened a promising career. Scott's brother, Buddy, is a professional bowler.

At Wake Forest, he was a teammate of Strange, Jay Haas, Bob Byman and David Thore when the Demons won the 1975 NCAA team title.

There was a short time — maybe three weeks — during which Mike Holland didn't know whether or not he liked golf. It started with an introduction to the game by a 10-year old classmate. Three weeks later, Mike went from his backyard lesson to beating the same friend on a nine-hole course in Bishopville, SC. Suddenly, he liked it.

"I guess the game came pretty natural for me," said Holland, looking back over 16 years of steady progress in golf since that backyard introduction. "When you're the first member of your family to take up the game, you don't really know what all the possibilities are, but maybe that was good," he said.

What did transpire was that Holland became a very solid high school player, solid enough to earn a golf scholarship to the University of South Carolina, where he decided his skills warranted a serious consideration of golf as a career.

It was during his junior year at South Carolina that Holland went through several minor changes in his game which, in the final analysis, gave him the opportunity to become a truly fine player.

"Being largely self-taught, I did have several minor things in my swing which were not quite right. I had a nice sophomore season and was playing pretty well, but to advance, I had to go through a transition period, and I was fortunate to have Grant Bennett, from Columbia (SC) to oversee that process. He gave me a solid foundation."

"Another factor in my development, I think, was the fact that I did not have any great successes early. I was a pretty consistent top-ten finisher in college, but I didn't win. That made me hungry, and I probably needed to be that way since I tend to be too easygoing," he smiled.

After All-American honors in 1978, coming on the heels of the 1976 South Carolina Amateur Championship, which he won during his successful sophomore season, he turned professional and headed for TOUR Qualifying.

Holland gained his card in the Spring of 1980 and earned only $1,961 in 16 events over the last half of the year. But he felt he was making progress, and began to show it during 1981.

He wrapped up the individual season with a solid tournament, tying for 10th in the Pensacola Open, and that event served as a springboard for both he and partner Vance Heafner in the Walt Disney World Team Championship. They went into the event on a high note, took the first-round lead and were never headed.

His big week in 1982 came at the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic where he birdied three of the last six holes to finish second to Raymond Floyd. It was worth $43,200. "Nothing will replace the thrill of winning with Vance last year," he said, "but the important thing about this finish is that I did it myself."

He suffered through 1983 with a circulatory problem that left his hands and arms numb. He underwent corrective surgery in October of 1983, and still was trying to recover for much of last year.

If you ever had to pick someone to be a good-will ambassador for the world, Joe Inman might be your man. One of the more enthusiastic people in the game of golf, Joe will have a good word for you, no matter what the subject may be. He doesn't hesitate to spread his feelings among his colleagues.

Typical of Joe, he is extremely proud of the accomplishments of his younger brother, John, who won the NCAA championship for the University of North Carolina and also the Western Amateur in 1984.

"John has been a motivation for me," Joe says. "It's such a pleasure to see young people develop and John truly is a fine person. It looks as if he'll be out here on TOUR before too long."

Joe's best stretch of 1984 came in three straight tournaments when he tied for 10th in the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic and then tied for seventh in the Western Open and Anheuser-Busch Classic.

As a youngster, Joe tried his hand at most sports, but readily admits, "I wasn't good enough in most of them, so I ended up with golf."

He won the Carolinas Juniors championship and eventually headed for Wake Forest University where he was a teammate of Lanny Wadkins and Leonard Thompson. He won the 1968 Carolinas Open and the 1969 North and South Amateur, thus earning a position on the 1969 U.S. Walker Cup team.

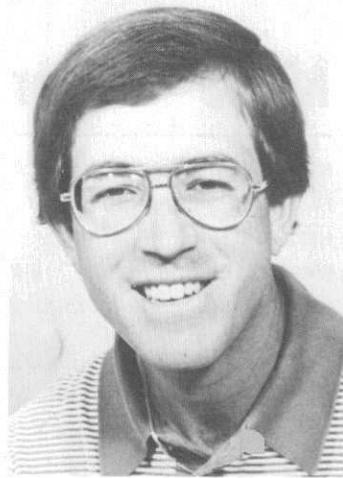

After he was graduated from Wake Forest in 1970, Joe spent some time in the Army, with part of it being at Fort Jackson, S. C., where Mark Hayes also was stationed. After he was discharged, Joe headed for the TOUR School in the Fall of 1973 and made it.

His first victory came in the 1976 Kemper Open and it is possible that there never has been a happier TOUR winner in the history of the game. The Kemper was being played in Charlotte, NC, that year, and there were hundreds of Joe Inman followers there. When the victory was assured, he kept repeating with a bright smile, "I can't believe this."

Although not a long hitter off the tee, Joe believes his course management is the strongest part of his game and prefers to play with a fade. Paul Obermeyer of the Ping Company is the man Joe seeks when he needs help.

One of Joe's best tournaments during his years on TOUR came in the 1979 Atlanta Classic. Joe finished second, three strokes ahead of David Graham and Grier Jones with a 15-under par score of 273. However, Andy Bean was at his brilliant best that week and won by eight strokes over Joe at 23-under 265.

Asked if he had ever been 15-under par before and lost, Joe laughed, "I've never been 15 under before, period. Andy was like a robot."

The great players always seem to find a way to win, to keep a good round going, to keep a streak alive. Even during those moments when the situation appears near impossible, they have the skills to execute.

Hale Irwin has been known as one of the brilliant shotmakers in the game, and when you mix in the competitive heart he possesses, you have a man who knows no boundaries, no limits to the success he seeks.

As an example of his consistency, he went from early 1975 through the 1978 schedule — covering 86 tournaments — without missing a 36-hole cut. That's the third best streak in TOUR history.

He went the distance in all 20 starts in 1983, and one resulted in a most satisfying victory in the Memorial Tournament. He said of it, "I've always wanted to win the Memorial Tournament. My desire has been very high ever since the first year. This is one we all point for; and if you don't, you are not aware of what tournament golf is."

In 1981, after going for nearly 20 months without a victory, he won twice in impressive style, the Hawaiian Open and the Buick Open and both came after spending a week vacationing with his family at the resort he represents, Kapalua on Maui in Hawaii.

He said of the winless stretch, "It hurt my pride." With a laugh, he added, "You have to tell yourself you are not immortal. You're not sitting on Zeus' throne, but while you are up there, you can believe you really are sitting there and it's a good feeling."

Last Year, he gained a victory in a rather unusual fashion. In the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, he needed a birdie on the testy 18th at Pebble Beach to tie Jim Nelford, who already had finished his round. Hale's tee shot went far to the left, hit a rock on the Carmel Bay beach and ricocheted back onto the fairway. He made his birdie. On the second extra hole of the playoff, he hit a poor three wood into a bunker, but then struck one of the great two irons of his career to nine feet and he made it for the victory.

His first victory was in the 1971 Heritage Classic, but two of the highest points of his career came in triumphs in the 1974 U.S. Open at Winged Foot and the 1979 Open at Inverness.

Many years ago, someone coined the phrase, "Nice things happen to nice people." Whoever said it first, must have had someone such as Peter Jacobsen in mind.

Peter is one of the most personable and popular men in the game, and he certainly had a lot of nice things happen to him last year. For starters, he won twice, the prestigious Colonial National Invitation in a playoff over Payne Stewart and the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open by two strokes over Mark O'Meara.

At the Colonial in Fort Worth, TX, Stewart suffered a bogey at the final hole to force the playoff and then Peter won it with a birdie on the first extra hole. Peter's father had undergone a rather serious operation the week before, and when Peter stooped over to lift the ball from the cup, he said "Well, this one's for you, Dad."

Peter's exceptional play all year earned him a position on the U.S. team that faced Japan in November.

His first victory was in the 1980 Buick-Goodwrench Open. The next year, he nearly won it again, only to lose in a playoff to Hale Irwin. Two years ago, he finished third in the PGA Championship at Riviera Country Club and the effort was especially satisfying. "It showed me I do have the ability to be a factor in major championships."

Most important, Peter remains his happy, personable self, a delight to sponsors and gallerites at every stop he makes on the TOUR.

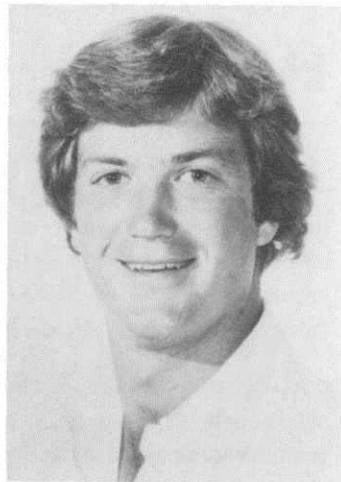

Peter started in the game at age 12. His father taught him the fundamentals, and his older brother, David, also helped considerably. "They are about the only teachers I've ever had," he says.

He went to the University of Oregon and won the PAC-8 Conference championship 1974. He was named to the collegiate All-America team three years. In 1976, he won the Oregon Open and the Northern California Open.

"I didn't know how good I was, really," he says, "because I had not played that much amateur golf nationally."

Nevertheless, he qualified for the TOUR the first time he tried, in the Fall of 1976. He has been on the rise ever since.

Along with his playing skills, Peter also is in demand for clinics and exhibitions.

Barry Jaeckel would like to believe he gets closer each year to being the type of consistent player he feels he can be. "I'm looking for more consistency," he said, "more of the middle line. I still have too many ups-and-downs."

Last year, he believes he made progress in the right direction. "It seemed to be a good year in some ways," he said. "I made more cuts, but I couldn't find the combination for high finishes. Yes, I was more consistent, but couldn't break through to a challenging position."

He definitely had an "up" week in the 1983 Kemper Open at the Congressional Country when he tied with four others, but he lost in the playoff which eventually was won by Fred Couples. Laughing, he said, "that was my semi-annual week to play a tough course in a big tournament well. It was a good feeling."

Barry isn't the type to look back and think about what might have been, but even though he has had a fine career, he can be excused if he occasionally recalls the duel he had with Raymond Floyd in the Spring of 1981.

In the Tournament Players Championship at Sawgrass, Barry held a one-stroke lead after two rounds and three strokes after three, but Floyd and Curtis Strange came on strong the last afternoon to force a tie. Then, Raymond defeated Barry and Curtis on the first extra hole.

"I don't feel I lost it," the classy Jaeckel said. "A great player beat me and a great player tied me. I'll go away smiling." That's vintage Jaeckel, and he did go away smiling.

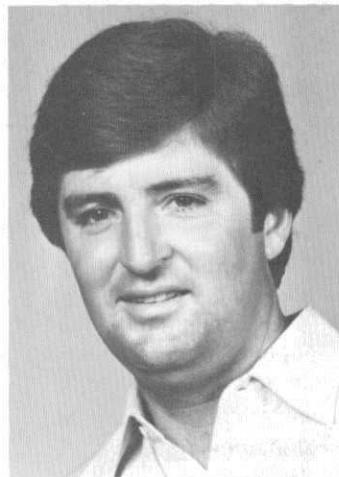

His first victory came in the 1978 Tallahassee Open when he defeated Bruce Lietzke in a playoff. Over the years, Barry has had to work to keep his slightly unorthodox swing pattern in the groove. It requires constant attention. His short game is excellent.

The handsome Californian started in the game in rather unusual fashion. "I visited a friend's house when I was a kid. I don't remember how old I was, but he had this golf club. It felt good to swing and I thought I'd like to try the game."

He went on to make his high school golf team, and played most of his golf at the famed Riviera Country Club, where his parents were members. His first important title was the 1968 Southern California Amateur and he was runner-up in the 1971 Pacific Coast Amateur.

After turning professional in 1971, he played the mini-tours and overseas, winning the 1972 French Open. He attempted to qualify for the TOUR, but missed four times before succeeding in June of 1975.

He is the son of Richard Jaeckel, a character actor who has had roles in dozens of movies and many television series.

Don January was one of the leading players on the PGA TOUR for many years, and now he has assumed the same role—and more—on the Senior PGA TOUR.

While Don won 11 tournaments from 1956 through 1976 on the regular TOUR, he now has established himself as the dominant force among the Seniors. Last year, for example, he had entered 17 tournaments through the end of November, won 4 of them and placed seventh or better in all but one of them.

When the Senior PGA TOUR officially started in June of 1980, Don won the opener. It was the Atlantic City Seniors, and he collected $20,000 for his efforts. Later in the fall, he won the Australian Seniors, so his game knows no boundary or age limit.

Before he joined the TOUR in 1956, Don played for the NCAA championship team at North Texas State University. In his first year, he won twice, the Dallas Open and the Apple Valley Clambake. His biggest victory was in the 1967 PGA Championship, as he edged Don Massengale in a playoff.

In 1972, Don left the TOUR to devote his time to golf course construction in the Dallas area. When financing became difficult during the recession, he rejoined the TOUR in 1975, soon after his 45th birthday. His remarkable comeback was highlighted in his home state when he defeated Larry Hinson in a playoff to win the San Antonio-Texas Open.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: All-American 1970, 1971. Member of Houston team that won 1970 NCAA Championship.

When Tom Jenkins was in his early teen years, his love was baseball. Golf never really entered his mind. One day, while pitching as a 14-year old, he tore a muscle in his right pitching arm and his days on the mound were over.

"I have a brother who is about three years older," he said, "and he played golf. So, I started to go out with him. I played along for a couple of years, and when I was 16, I started to get involved."

He played junior tournaments around Houston, and it just so happened that Dave Williams, the University of Houston golf coach, ran most of the junior events in that area.

It was natural, therefore, for Tom to move on to the University, and even today, he says, "Dave Williams is the man who was the most influential on my career."

John Mahaffey was the star of the team in 1970, the year the Cougars won the NCAA crown.

In the Fall of 1972, Jenkins headed for the PGA TOUR after going through the Qualifying School. "I even surprised myself in my first two full years and then I won the IVB-Philadelphia Classic my third year, in 1975."

At Philadelphia, he led by five shots after the second and third rounds, and finally won by one after Johnny Miller made a late charge.

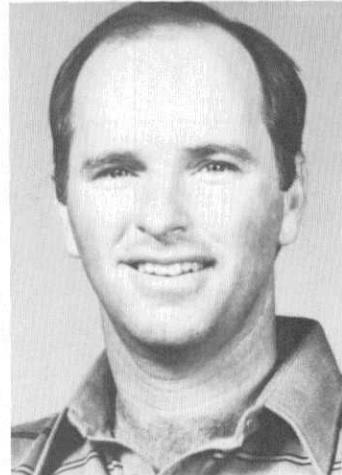

He played well in 1976, too, and then a skid started. By 1978, he was all the way down to 186th on the money list and could lift himself up to only 171st by 1979 and 137th in 1980.

"I was married and moved from Houston to Florida," he said, "and my priorities changed. We had a daughter in 1979, and my family became the most important thing to me. I let my game suffer."

Dave Pelz, a close friend who lived in Baltimore at the time, planted the seed that made him think about getting competitive again. "He got me motivated, back to work and practicing late in 1980," he said. "In eight years on the TOUR, I never practiced after the TOUR ended in the fall. I'd just go home and relax."

With hard work and words of encouragement from Pelz, Tom started 1981 with a new outlook on the game. In his fourth start, the Wickes-Andy Williams San Diego Open, he was one off the lead after three rounds, and finished in a tie with Bruce Lietzke and Raymond Floyd at 10-under 278. Lietzke won it with a birdie on the second extra hole.

Nevertheless, Tom knew then that he could play again and has come on to enjoy some of his most productive years.

Winner 1981, 1982 Vardon Trophy, 1980 European Open. Member 1982, 1983 and 1984 USA Team vs. Japan. Member 1984 U.S. World Cup team.

It may be a long time before anyone has a year quite like the one Tom Kite enjoyed in 1981, but he keeps getting close to a repeat.

You remember how brilliantly consistent he was in 1981, winning the inaugural PGA TOUR Arnold Palmer Award as the leading money winner; capturing the Vardon Trophy for his 69.80 stroke average; and compiling an incredible 21 top 10 finishes in 26 starts. He was eighth or better in his last 10 starts and later was honored by the Golf Writers of America as the Player-of-the-Year.

Just as in 1981, Tom claimed only one victory in 1982, as he defeated Jack Nicklaus and Denis Watson in the Bay Hill Classic, but he also lost another, the Bob Hope Desert Classic, in a playoff to Ed Fiori. He did win his second straight Vardon Trophy with a 70.21 average; and only missed the cut once in 25 starts. When he missed it in the Canadian Open, it ended a string of 53 successful tournaments.

He won the 1983 Bing Crosby Pro-Am — thanks to a course-record 62 the third day at Pebble Beach. Last year, though, was one he will remember. It was a year for things to happen in twos. For the first time, he won two tournaments — the Doral-Eastern Open and the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic — and his wife Christy presented him with two sons — twins David Thomas and Paul Christopher.

He also represented the United States on two teams — the USA vs. Japan matches and the World Cup Competition.

Kite's life in golf began at age 6, when his father put a club in his hand for the first time and urged him to take a swipe. At 11 he won his first tournament, an age-group event at the Country Club of Austin, Tex. He began to take the game seriously three years later.

Before his 21st birthday in 1970, Tom was medalist in the Western Amateur, runnerup to Lanny Wadkins in the U.S. Amateur, second in the Southern Amateur and was named to the four-man U.S. team in the World Amateur Team Championship.

The following year he was chosen on the U.S. Walker Cup team and, in 1972, he shared the NCAA title with his University of Texas teammate, Ben Crenshaw.

First-team All-American, 1972, 1973, 1974. Member 1973 NCAA Championship team at Florida. Winner of 10 collegiate events. Member 1973 and 1975 Walker Cup team, 1974 U.S. World Amateur Cup team.

After seven years of so-so success on the PGA TOUR, Gary Koch has emerged as one of the truly fine players in the game. His is an example of perserverance and many others would like to follow in his footsteps.

In the Fall of 1982, he was playing for what he called, "my golfing life." He needed a good showing at one of the final events of the year to finish among the low 125 money winners and earn exempt status for 1983. He gained it at the LaJet Classic, finishing fifth and collecting $14,000.

He went on from there to have an excellent campaign in 1983, winning the Doral-Eastern Open. His victory was highlighted by a hole-in-one on the 225-yard fourth hole.

Last year, he did even better. He won twice and both times he came from six-strokes behind the last day to catch the leader and then win in playoffs. He defeated Gary Hallberg in the Isuzu-Andy Williams San Diego Open and George Burns in the Bay Hill Classic. In both instances, he did it with a birdie on the second extra hole.

During his winless stretch from the Spring of 1978 until the 1983 Doral-Eastern Open, he said, "there were a lot of self-doubts" about his game. There are no "self-doubts" now. He knows he can play with the best.

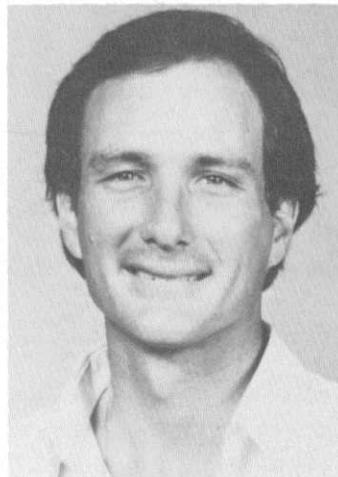

Gary was a brilliant amateur player. He won such titles as the 1970 U.S. Junior, three Florida State juniors and won the 1969 Florida State Open as a 16-year old. He won 10 tournaments at the University of Florida and was a runner-up twice in the NCAA Championship gaining All-America honors three times.

Twice, he played for Uncle Sam in Walker Cup competition and once on a World Amateur Cup team.

When he came out on the TOUR for the start of 1976, he won early in the Tallahassee Open by a stroke over John Mahaffey. The next year, he won the Florida Citrus Open by two strokes. He played well until part way through 1978 when he tore ligaments in his left thumb. "I continued to play with it, and made it worse," he said.

At the end of 1979, he had to have an operation and "it took quite a while for me to get back on track. I feel I'm there, now."

Through the years, his short game has been excellent and, normally, he prefers to play with a draw. He has worked with Charlie Malone and Bob Toski, but currently, when needing help, he goes to Peter Kostis.

The golf fortunes of Bill Kratzert made a big swing for the better in 1984 and it now appears as if his game is back to where it was during the late 1970s when he was so successful.

He encountered physical problems shortly after his victory in the 1980 Greater Milwaukee Open, and through the next three years, he developed bad swing habits. He even gave some thought to leaving the TOUR, but he started to spend some time on the practice tee with Phil Rodgers and, gradually, the pieces started to fit together again.

He completed the cycle in grand style in the Pensacola Open last fall, coming from two strokes behind with four to go with a string of three birdies to win it all by two strokes. "I can't tell you the importance of this to me," he said.

During the latter half of 1984 when he started to play well again, he explained, "I was able to drive the ball much better. That's been one of my biggest problems. Phil helped me to take a lot of looseness out of the swing without really doing anything physically. He gave me the right thoughts."

With a smile, he added, "Just knowing you can hit 10 or 11 fairways with the driver takes a big load off your mind. I had been hitting three or four."

Bill obtained his TOUR card in the Spring of 1976 and a few months later, he was a winner. He joined with Woody Blackburn and they won the Walt Disney World National Team title in a playoff over Bobby Nichols and Gay Brewer.

His father has been the head professional at the Fort Wayne, IN, Country Club for more than 20 years, so it was natural for him to play the game.

"I didn't start to play until I was about 13," Bill says. "My dad never pushed me into it. It was just always there. It wasn't until I was 14 or 15 years old that I decided that golf was my game."

He won the Indiana State Amateur at age 16 and the Indiana Open a year later. Allen Miller, who befriended Bill when he became ill during the Sunnehanna Amateur, influenced him to go to the University of Georgia, where he was chosen All-Southeastern Conference all four years and All-American his last two.

After he failed in his first try in the TOUR Qualifying School, Kratzert quit the game in frustration, went home to Fort Wayne and worked six months as a fork-lift operator. But in the Spring of 1975 he accepted an assistant pro's job at a club and returned to the game to stay.

While the majority of young players follow the road through the Qualifying School to become members of the PGA TOUR, Ralph Landrum used the 1983 United States Open Championship as his front door.

Five times he tried to obtain his players' card in the Q-School and never was able to succeed. Yet, he continued to believe in his ability.

He did qualify for the Open at Oakmont Country Club and says, "before it even started, I felt I could win. I know that sounds strange, but I played well in the qualifying rounds."

During the first two days, he didn't do anything spectacular, with rounds of 75 and 73, but the third day he was paired with Larry Nelson and Tom Weiskopf.

Nelson was getting most of the attention that afternoon, en route to a six-under par 65, but Landrum was making a little noise, too. Ralph smiles and says, "That was a great break for me. I was five-under par with three holes to play, but I bogeyed the 16th and double bogeyed the last for a 69."

The final afternoon, he had a 74, yet finished in a tie for eighth place and collected $10,711. That wasn't enough to obtain his TOUR card, but the shot of confidence it gave him set the stage for a $46,808 year and 106th place on the money list.

The best was yet to come. A month later, he tied for fifth place in the Anheuser-Busch Classic and the following week, tied for fourth in the Canadian Open. He held a one-stroke lead over Tom Purtzer after three rounds at Glen Abbey, but finished with a one-over par 72 and only two strokes out of the John Cook-Johnny Miller playoff.

It was his check for $13,300 at the Anheuser-Busch Classic that put him over the minimum money guideline and qualified him for a position on the TOUR.

He labeled 1984 as "a tough year. I shot a lot of high scores from the first tee to the last hole."

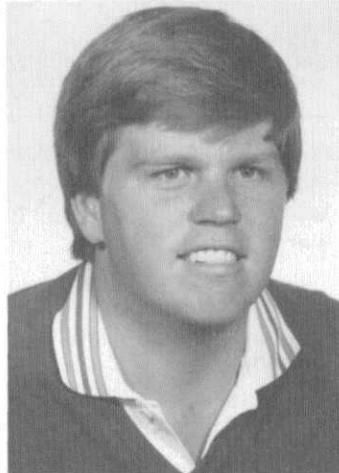

He won nearly all of his money in three tournaments. He tied for second in the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic, thanks to a final-round 67. He received a check for $37,333. He ended the year with a solo fourth in the Pensacola Open — where he opened with a 63 — and also tied for ninth in the Kemper Open.

Ralph started in golf at age 10, as a caddy for his mother and father. He started to play tournament golf a year or so later. In high school, he lost the Kentucky State Interscholastic title in 1975 to fellow PGA TOUR member Russ Cochran. Although he also played high school basketball, he went to the University of Kentucky on a golf scholarship.

He won the 1975 Kentucky State Junior title and was a semi-finalist in the 1977 U.S. Amateur.

After turning professional in 1979, he served as head professional at the World of Golf Club in Florence, KY, until he made it on the TOUR.

He believes driving and putting are his strong suits, and prefers to play with a draw.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner of 16 international tournaments such as: 1980 Dunlop Masters, Colombian Open; 1981 and 1982 German Open; 1981 Bob Hope British Classic; 1983 Italian Open; 1983 Glasgow Classic; 1983 TPC at St. Mellion; 1983 Johnny Walker Tournament; 1983 Casio World (Japan); 1984 Irish Open; 1984 Dutch Open; 1984 French Open; 1984 Spanish Open. Winner of six German National Opens and two German National PGAs (Germans only). Member of 1981 and 1983 European Ryder Cup team. Leader in European Order of Merit, 1981 and 1984; Five-time member of German World Cup team.

Bernhard Langer already was considered one of the better players on the European Tour when he headed for the United States and the 1981 World Series of Golf at the Firestone Country Club.

It was his first exposure to life on the PGA TOUR and he wanted to make a good impression. He did that—and more. "At one point early in the back nine the last day," he recalls vividly, "I was tied for the lead. It was a good feeling because I knew then that I could play over here. Until you do it, you never can be certain."

He went on to finish in a tie for sixth place at Firestone that year, and since then his credentials have become even stronger. He has won 16 international events and in 1981 and 1984, he led the European Tour's Order of Merit. He won four national titles a year ago, winning the Irish, Dutch, French and Spanish Open championships. In 1983, he won five times around the world.

In the Spring of 1984, he played in eight PGA TOUR events, made the cut in all eight and had three top 10 finishes. A third-place in the Bay Hill Classic was his best. He earned $82,465, easily enough to qualify for his TOUR card and he accepted membership last fall.

Bernhard started in the game as a caddy at age nine at the Augsburg Country Club in his hometown of Anhausen, West Germany. "I did it to earn a little pocket money," he said.

After a few weeks, he decided he wanted to play. With a laugh, he said, "They made me play up-and-down the practice range until I reached a certain standard and then they let me on the course."

For the next seven years, he would play, practice and caddy whenever he could. In 1972, when he was finished with his formal schooling at age 15, he headed for Munich and went to work as an assistant professional at the Munich Golf and Country Club. Heinz Fehring was the head pro, and he became Bernhard's first and only teacher.

"He's a very good teacher," Bernhard said, "but we only had a few hundred members and most of them played on the weekends. The course never was busy during the week, so I had plenty of time to practice and play."

After a few months, Fehring asked him, "What's your target? Do you want to be a teacher or player?" Bernhard told him he didn't know how good a player he was, but he would rather be a player. By the same token, he wanted to learn more about the golf profession.

When he completed the apprentice program at age 18, he set out on the European Tour and in 1979 won his first event, the World Under-25 Championship in France. The next year, he won three times. He was on his way to stardom.

One of his most satisfying victories came in the 1981 German Open because he became the first native-born German to win it. He also won it in 1982, and he has six German National Open titles and two German PGA championships to his credit. The latter two events are for home professionals, only.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner, 1970 New York State scholastic title. 1973 New Hampshire Open. Small College All-American, 1971 and 1972.

Wayne Levi has a good reason to be proud of his record. As he said, "I've averaged a victory a year through my first seven full years on TOUR and I've managed to make it to the Tournament of Champions every year."

"This past year, I went over the $1-million mark in earnings, and that was a great accomplishment for me."

He has been able to reach these goals without devoting 100 percent of his efforts to the game. His family is very important and he spends as much time as possible with them.

As an example, he skipped the first five weeks of 1983 in order to be at home with his wife, Judy, as she awaited the arrival of their second child.

He later said, "I just felt that was where I should be. It was more important than a golf tournament."

Prior to his victory in the 1983 Buick Open, he skipped five of the preceding six events, saying, "I wanted to be home to see Lauren crawl (their second born) and I want to be there to see her walk. There will be many more tournaments, but you get to see that only once."

His "annual" victory last year came in the B. C. Open and it was especially satisfying because his home is not too far to the north of Endicott, NY. Early in the year, he lost the Hawaiian Open in a playoff to Jack Renner.

On a historical note, when he won the 1982 Hawaiian Open, he did so using Wilson's Optic Orange ball. He thus became the first player to win a TOUR event while using a colored golf ball.

Wayne started to play golf at age 13, mainly because his pals were playing the game. He fell in love with the game, almost immediately. During his days at Herkimer High School in upper New York State, he never lost a match, and won the 1970 New York State Interscholastic title. During his two years at Oswego State College, he only lost once.

In the summer of 1972, he headed for Florida so that he could devote 12 months of the year to his game. After two years of mini-tour action, he tried for his TOUR card, but didn't make it on his first two attempts. Meanwhile, he played wherever he could find a game throughout Florida and, during the summer months, on the New England circuit. He won numerous events, and his first was the 1973 New Hampshire Open.

He is proud of the fact, and rightly so, that he played well enough on the mini-tours in 1974 and 1975 to be able to sponsor himself. In June of 1977, he made it through the Qualifying School.

When Bruce Lietzke's game is right — and it usually is — he is one of the finest players in the game. It has been said, and rightly so, that he is capable of winning anywhere at any time under any condition.

So, it wasn't a surprise when he came from four strokes behind during the last round of the Honda Classic last year to tie Andy Bean and then win the tournament on the first extra hole.

Even though it was his only victory of the year, he said, "In many ways, it was my second best year on the TOUR, second only to 1981 (when he won three times). I played well all through the year. If there was a disappointment, it was in the NEC World Series of Golf. I had a chance to win, but finished second."

He is playing more of a limited schedule now, explaining, "I play where I really want to play and the result is I've played more quality golf. I want to be anxious to play when I get to a tournament site."

During the week of the 1982 Canadian Open, even though he was playing well, he kept insisting that he didn't expect to win. He held a two-stroke lead going into the final round at Gleneagles, and told everyone he felt he had a good chance to win, but didn't expect to win. He did, of course, by two strokes over Hal Sutton.

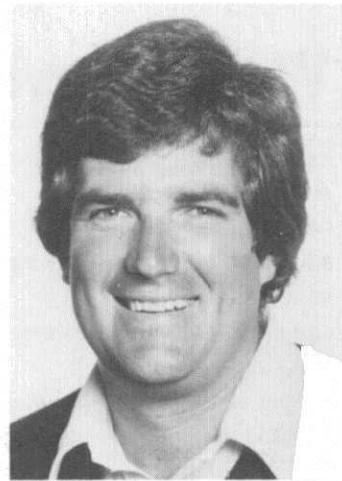

It is hard to believe, but there was a time when Bruce put his golf clubs in the closet and wasn't certain if he wanted to continue with the game. It was in the Spring of 1973, shortly after he left the University of Houston.

"I had played so much through high school and college that I was tired of it," he said. At that time, he said he was through with the game. "Oh, I suppose, in the back of my mind, I knew I would get back to it."

Six months later, he did, and he turned professional in 1974. He missed by one stroke in his first attempt at qualifying for the PGA TOUR, but he made it in the Spring of 1975.

He played well on TOUR almost from the start, although his first victory did not come until the 1977 Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open when he defeated Gene Littler on the fourth extra hole. A couple of weeks later he won again in the Hawaiian Open.

Bruce started to play golf at age five when brother Duane, then an assistant professional in Wichita, Kan., gave him a cut-down set of clubs. While at Beaumont Forest Park High School in Texas, he won the Texas State Scholastic title as a sophomore and helped his team to one championship and three seconds in his four years. While at the University of Houston — where he roomed with Bill Rogers — he won the 1971 Texas State Amateur.

Pat Lindsey always knew he could put low numbers on the scoreboard, but to do it under heavy pressure, well, he wasn't certain he could accomplish that until after the 1983 B.C. Open.

He played what he called the "two finest rounds of my life" the second-and-third days on the En-Joie Golf Club course in Endicott, NY, posting a seven-under par 64 and following with a 65. That gave him a four-stroke lead over Victor Regalado heading into the final day.

He was off to a shaky start with a bogey at the first hole, but he came on strong, played aggressively the rest of the way, and won by four strokes over Gil Morgan.

"Now, I feel very positive about myself and my game," he said. "I know I can play the TOUR. When I've had some chances for good finishes, I've usually faded at the end, partly because I wasn't aggressive enough, especially with the putter."

He called 1984 "a slow year, but he was especially pleased with his performance in the World Series of Golf at Firestone Country Club. He shot a final-round 66 on the demanding South Course and leaped into a seventh-place finish. "That salvaged the year for me," he said.

Pat showed a touch of class as the 1982 PGA TOUR schedule headed into the final weeks. He certainly was in a precarious position in regards to his exempt status for 1983, but he settled the issue by making the cut in his last five starts. More important, in the last two events, he tied for ninth in the Pensacola Open and tied for seventh in the Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

He started to play the game at age 10. He would follow his father around the course and occasionally hit a few golf balls himself.

He qualified for the TOUR in the Spring School of 1979. The most exciting day he has had in his golfing career, he says, came when he shot a 68 on the Pinehurst No. 6 course to earn his TOUR card.

When his game is right, his driving and short irons are the strong parts, and he can either draw the ball or fade it. "It depends on which way it is bending on the practice tee," he says with a laugh in response to which way he prefers.

Pat was graduated from the University of South Florida and in 1974 was named the school's Athlete of the Year. He also won the Miami Tournament of Champions in 1975 and was second to Gary Koch in the 1974 Florida Intercollegiate tournament.

There was another big day in Pat's life in 1983. His wife, Julia, presented him with their first born, Margaret Boone, on June 17.

Shortly after Jack Renner came out on the PGA TOUR, he was asked if he had any idols, was there anyone he would like to emulate.

Without hesitation, he said, "Gene Littler. I grew up in the San Diego area and Gene has lived there all of his life. I can assure you, there isn't one single person, anywhere, who can or would say one bad thing about Gene Littler."

No one could have said it better. Gene has had his share of glory since starting on TOUR in 1954, and he has known adversity, too. In the Spring of 1972, for example, he underwent surgery for cancer of the lymph glands. Most thought he never would reappear on TOUR. Yet, he did, by the end of 1972. In July of 1973, about 16 months after surgery, he won the St. Louis Children's Hospital Classic.

In 1975, he won three times, and in 1977 he won again, giving him a grand total of 29 TOUR triumphs. On the Seniors TOUR he has won eight times, including the Seiko-Tucson Match Play to start the year. However, in a freak accident at home a few weeks later, he suffered a broken left arm and did not resume play until early August. A steel plate was inserted in the arm, and it will remain there until October of this year.

As long as Mark Lye is playing golf, there never will be another afternoon such as the hot-and-humid one at the Pleasant Valley Country Club in Sutton, MA, in September of 1983.

After seven years of battling on the TOUR, he finally won his first tournament, coming from eight-strokes behind the last day with a brilliant eight-under par 64 to win by one shot over John Mahaffey, Jim Thorpe and Sammy Rachels. He finished birdie, par, birdie, birdie.

An emotional sort, Mark said, "I was beginning to believe winning was out of my reach. It isn't that you're not good enough, it's just that some people can't rise to it."

He came back with another very good year in 1984, with his performance in the Masters Tournament standing out. He led by two strokes after two rounds and was the center of national media attention. He finally finished tied for sixth.

"After playing as well as I have the last two years," he says, "I feel good about my future. I know I have the ability to play out here a long time."

He had the finest round of his career in the third round of the Walt Disney World Classic. He shot a course record 11-under par 61 at the Lake Buena Vista Country Club.

Mark's story is one of determination and it is because of that desire to excel that he has been able to enjoy success on the PGA TOUR. All of his golfing life, Mark has had to work hard for his rewards.

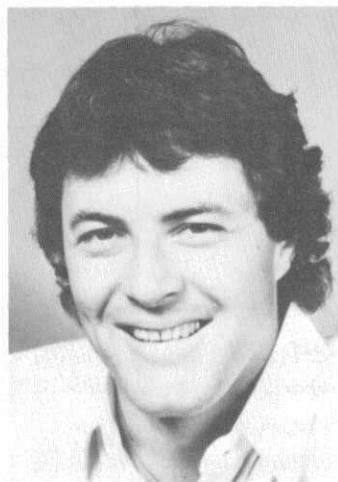

Although he now resides in Tallahassee, FL, he grew up on the fairways of the Silverado Country Club in Napa, CA and it was there in 1979 that he nearly won his first tournament. With the cheers of his hometown friends ringing in his ears, he was tied with Lon Hinkle for the third-round lead, but finally had to settle for something less as several others came on strong at the wire.

As soon as Mark started to play the game, he knew he would be a golfer for the rest of his life. He received his first set of clubs as a nine-year-old, and he played every day, all day.

He played all over California, and in 1970, he was the No. 1 junior on the state's point system. As a 12-and-13-year old, he was winning tournaments.

He headed for San Jose State after being graduated from high school, and it was difficult at first, because he still had not started to sprout. As a freshman, he was five-feet-nine, 125 pounds. By the end of the next year, he was close to his present size of six-feet-two, 175 pounds.

After being graduated from San Jose State, he set his sights on the TOUR, but first headed for Europe for more experience. He tried the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1975 and missed and again in the Spring of 1976 and missed. He was off to Europe, and then Australia after that, and blossomed as a winner. In fact, he won the 1976 Australian Order of Merit. In the Fall of 1976, he was back in the Qualifying School, and he made it.

When John Mahaffey's game is right, there are few who can strike the golf ball with the same authority. Such was the case for most of last year when he enjoyed his most profitable campaign.

"I probably wasn't as consistent as I should have been," he said, "but I had some very good streaks. It came from being more aggressive, and that's what I'm trying to be."

One of those "streaks" came in the Bob Hope Classic. His final round 66 at Bermuda Dunes put him into a tie with Jim Simons and then he won it in a playoff. He ended the year with a tie for second in the Pensacola Open.

Part of his success last year related back to a swing change he made in 1983. "I made some positive changes to help my longevity on TOUR. I added some distance without jeopardizing a lot of accuracy. It gave me a more positive outlook."

John joined the PGA TOUR in the Fall of 1971 after a fine amateur career. He won the 1970 NCAA championship for the University of Houston.

His first victory was in the 1973 Sahara Invitational in Las Vegas. Physical problems hit him for the first time at the 1976 PGA Championship at Congressional. He suffered a hyperextended tendon in his left elbow. It gradually became worse toward the end of the year, and it practically was impossible for him to compete early in 1977. He reached the point where he wondered if he would ever play the TOUR again.

In the spring, he received the go-ahead to play, but before he had a chance, he fell off a ladder in his garage and broke a finger. He wasn't able to rejoin the TOUR until July.

He was completely healthy again by mid-1978, and enjoyed a six-month stretch when he played as well as everyone knew he could. He won the PGA Championship at Oakmont in a playoff over Tom Watson and Jerry Pate, and the next week he won the American Optical Classic in Sutton, Mass.

He was named to the World Cup team that played in Hawaii, and he won medalist honors. When the new year dawned, he won the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Within a month, hard luck struck him again. Trying to blast out of a bunker at Pebble Beach in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, his clubhead tore into the heavy sod on the lip and came to a sudden halt. The result was that all of the tendons on the back of the hand and wrist gave away. He tried to play in Hawaii the next week but had to withdraw. It was three months before he could return.

If there was an award for hard work, Roger Maltbie would be one of the leading contenders.

The personable Californian was one of the brightest young stars in the game in 1976, but three years later, he was almost a forgotten man and he fell to 155th on the money list. With hard work and dedication, he pulled himself back into the front line in 1981, and came close to winning twice.

After shooting a third-round 64 in the Sammy Davis, Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, he led the field by two with a 197 total. "It's been a long time since I've been in this situation," he said softly. "I told my caddy coming down 17 that it was like running into an old friend."

He had a most respectable 68 the final afternoon, but Hubert Green had a 64 and edged him by one.

The next week in the Buick Open, he finished one stroke out of the four-way playoff, and he said, "For the first time in a long time, the game is at my fingertips."

He had two of the finest rounds of his career opening the 1982 Memorial Tournament with a 68 and 66 for a tournament record 36-hole total of 10-under par 134. He led by six strokes.

After three rounds, he was tied with Gil Morgan, but only after Morgan eagled the final hole to catch him. He finally tied for second place with three others as Raymond Floyd snared the victory.

He returned to the ranks of $100,000 winners in 1984 and, interestingly enough, it was the Memorial that gave him the biggest boost. He shot a final-round 67 and leaped into a tie for third place, three strokes out of the Jack Nicklaus-Andy Bean playoff.

Roger was as amazed as anyone by his startling performances midway through his rookie year of 1975. He won back-to-back tournaments, the Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open and the Pleasant Valley Classic. After the latter, he left his winner's check of $40,000 in a restaurant near the tournament site. The sponsor issued a new one, and at last report, the original still hangs on the wall behind the bar.

The next year, he won the Memorial Tournament at Muirfield Village, defeating Hale Irwin on the fourth extra hole of their playoff.

Roger was a teammate of Forrest Fezler at James Lick High School in San Jose, Calif. As a sophomore, Roger beat Forrest, who was then a senior, for the county scholastic title. Maltbie went on to win the Northern California Amateur in 1972 and 1973, and the California State Open in 1974.

In his first attempt at qualifying for the TOUR, he missed in the Fall of 1973, but the next year, he made it.

Gary McCord was on center stage after his first-round 64 in the Houston Open a few years ago. It gave him a one-stroke lead over three fellows named Ben Crenshaw, Tom Kite and Hale Irwin.

His explanation of how the 64 came about was vintage McCord. "It was out of my hands," he said to the media. "I was playing in a tri-zonal time warp. My force field was very strong. My plume, the swirling force of energy, normally extends about six-feet above my head. Today, it must have been 10-feet tall."

He told them it all was a part of his experiment of playing in the third dimension, because, you see, he really was an unknown magician from the planet Blothar, and he was sent down this particular day to take over the body of Gary McCord. "I'm on kind of a recreational reconnaissance and golf seems like a nice game."

After a few minutes of tale-telling, he said in a whisper that was just loud enough for everyone to hear, "This is great. These guys are writing down everything I say."

That was typical Gary McCord and because of it he is one of the more popular people to play the game.

There is another side to this bright fellow, and his peers recognize it. He is the one credited with the plan for the All-Exempt TOUR which went into effect at the start of 1983.

As he recalls, "At Doral in 1981, I talked with Jack Nicklaus and some others about the idea. I went home and spent six weeks in my den, pouring over the records and all the other information I could find, trying to come up with a system that would eliminate Monday qualifying and work."

Later in the Fall of 1981, the basic plan was presented by Commissioner Deane Beman to the players and it received overwhelming approval.

As everything turned out, Gary became a victim of his own system in 1982 when he finished 130th on the money list and only 125 would be exempt in 1983. He returned to the Qualifying School that fall, and finished 10th.

He went on to win $55,756 in 1983 for his best money year until he topped it with $68,213 last year. In the statistical department, he finished No. 1 in putting in 1984, averaging 28.57 putts per round.

Gary started to play the game at age 15. He was a pretty fair baseball pitcher as a teenager in Garden Grove, Calif., but his family moved to Riverside. "I was 15 then, and I didn't know anyone. So I started going out to the golf course, and I played every day all summer."

He developed into a fine player at the University of California-Riverside earning All-America honors twice and winning the College Division NCAA crown.

After missing in the PGA TOUR qualifying school twice, he finally made it in the Fall of 1973.

In the Fall of 1983, he was elected to a three-year term as a Player Director on the TOUR's Policy Board.

It was more than a learning year for Mark McCumber in 1982. What he learned about himself and his golf game set the stage for one of the great stories of 1983.

"For the last six months of that year," he said, "I worked hard on the mental part of the game. When I won the Doral-Eastern Open in 1979, I was able to isolate each shot. I looked at films of the tournament and saw that I had the exact same pre-shot routine; the same number of waggles, everything."

"That was when I decided to see Bert Yancey to talk about the pre-shot routine and its importance. My third-and-fourth round scores really had been poor, which meant I was doing something different from the first two days."

Once he established in his mind what he wanted to do, Mark finished the year by making the last seven cuts. A tie for ninth in the Pensacola Open was his best effort.

In 1983, he was one of the game's finest. He won the Western Open, the Pensacola Open and earned $268,294 for the year. That represented an increase of $236,610 in a year.

He had his good moments last year, such as shooting a course-record 64 at Muirfield Village the last day of the Memorial. However, he injured his hand at the Western Open and, as he said, "I didn't play as well from that point on. The difference was the injury."

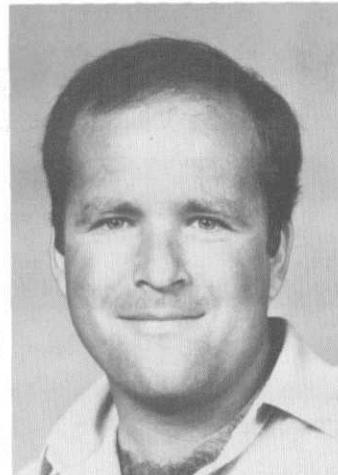

Early in the year, he had back-to-back fourth place finishes in the Los Angeles Open and Honda Classic. Two of his most enjoyable experiences came in finishing eighth in the British Open and making a hole-in-one during the U. S. Open.

As he headed for the Doral-Eastern Open in 1979, winning was not on his mind. In the six previous events that year, he missed the cut four times and did not qualify for two others. Rounds of 67, 71 and 69 left him one-stroke out of the third-round lead. His even-par 72 the last afternoon was good enough to give him a one-stroke margin over Bill Rogers.

After being graduated from high school, Mark studied for the ministry for two years at Brooklyn Bethel College. Golf was his game, though, and he turned professional in 1974. He tried for his TOUR card five times before he made it in the Spring of 1978.

Along with playing, he also is busy in the golf course design business with his brothers. A part of the Master Links Company, they have worked on 17 courses in the last four years.

In addition, Mark recently signed as the director of Golf at the Ravines Resort in Middleburg, FL, a complex designed by the McCumber family. He will head the Corporate Golf School there.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1971 Mexican International Junior, 1976 Air Force Academy Invitational, 1977 Pacific Coast Intercollegiate. Winner, 1984 Sacramento Classic (TPS).

Pat McGowan recalls with a laugh how he received his introduction to the game. "I was about eight-and-a-half years old at the time," he said, "and I used to play tennis four-or-five hours a day with my two older brothers at the Colusa (CA) Golf and Country Club. We were crazy about tennis."

"Then one day the pro at the club, Warren MacCarty, had a putting contest for all the kids and we did reasonably well. The next day, one of my brothers, Mike, and I asked for jobs picking up golf balls at the range. We did that for the next eight years. The tennis racquets went into the closet to stay as soon as we started to work."

He won several junior titles and went to Brigham Young University where he played on teams with the likes of Mike Reid, Jim Nelford, John Fought and Mike Brannan. He continued to win through college with one of his big victories being the 1977 Pacific Coast Intercollegiate.

He made it onto the TOUR after his first attempt at qualifying in the Fall of 1977 and had an excellent rookie year, winning $47,091. That was his best money year until 1982, and then he far surpassed them both in 1983.

One of the great thrills of his career came in the 1984 Sacramento Classic in the Tournament Players Series. He won by defeating Steve Hart in a playoff, but there were many, many of his close friends in the gallery from his hometown of Colusa. The check for $36,000 was the largest of his career.

"It was fun to do so well before so many of my good friends from home," the affable McGowan said. "And, it did a lot for my confidence."

His first strong showing on the TOUR came in the 1978 Canadian Open when he finished second to Bruce Lietzke. In the Quad Cities Open in 1982, he was tied with Calvin Peete and Jeff Mitchell after three rounds and eventually tied for second. He had a final-round 67, but Payne Stewart won it with a closing 63. It was his best finish since the '78 Canadian and it was especially pleasing since his father had flown in from Sacramento the night before to see the final round.

Karl Tucker, the head golf coach at BYU, had a big influence on his game, but in recent times, Peggy Kirk Bell, his mother-in-law who is one of the leading instructors in the game, has helped him at their Pine Needles course in Pinehurst.

While in high school, Pat was named all-conference in both football and basketball for three years, and in 1973, was Valedictorian of his class.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1965 Florida High School Championship; 1970 Canadian Amateur; Three-time winner of Trans-Mississippi Amateur. Member 1969 and 1971 Walker Cup team; 1970 Eisenhower Cup team.

Allen Miller said he was "just a normal kid looking for something to do" when he strolled across the street from his home to the Osceola Golf Club in Pensacola. The pro there, a fellow named Gordy Glenz, was conducting a junior clinic, and Allen, at age 11, thought it might be fun.

Glenz was so impressed by what he saw in the young Miller that he suggested he get more individual attention so that his apparent natural talents could blossom. As a result, Gordy worked with Allen for about four years.

Now of course, Gordy still keeps a close eye on his young man. He has been a PGA TOUR Tournament official for well over a decade.

Allen established an outstanding record as an amateur. His first two titles of any significance were the 1965 Junior Orange Bowl championship in Miami and the Florida State High School championship. He then headed for the University of Georgia.

While with the Bulldogs, he was a teammate of Terry Diehl, Lyn Lott, Tommy Valentine and Pete Davison, who is Director of Club Operations for all Tournament Players Clubs.

Twice he was on the Walker Cup team, playing at Cherry Hills in Denver in 1969 and St. Andrews, Scotland, in 1971. He also was on the 1970 U.S. Eisenhower Cup team.

He had an exceptional year in 1970, winning six significant amateur titles, including the Canadian by 10 strokes and the Trans-Mississippi for a second time.

He qualified for the TOUR in the Fall of 1971, finishing fifth in a strong class. Although Allen has had his share of physical problems through the years, he did gain a victory in the 1974 Tallahassee Open by a stroke over Dan Sikes, Joe Inman and Eddie Pearce.

"It was like the whole world got off my back," he said at the time.

He suffered through several off years, but everything started to take a swing for the better in 1982. A major portion of the turn-around has to be credited to a new lifestyle. He was married in 1981 to Cindy Kessler, formerly of the LPGA Tour, and they now have a daughter, Kelly Kristin.

"With them, I have a lot more than just golf," he said, "but I hope my game continues to get better."

Allen prefers to play the ball from left to right and does so consistently now. A few years ago, he tried to make several swing changes, and that, plus the tendonitis in his left elbow, caused him considerable grief.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 12—greens in regulation. (.684).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner, 1964 U.S. Juniors, 1973 Individual and Team (with Jack Nicklaus) World Cup winner, 1974 PGA Player of the Year. Winner 1974 Dunlop Phoenix Open (Japan), 1975 Individual and Team (with Lou Graham) World Cup winner, 1975 and 1981 U.S. Ryder Cup teams, 1976 British Open champion, 1979 Lancome Trophy winner, 1980 U.S. World Cup team. Winner 1981 $1 Million Sun City Challenge in southern Africa (won $500,000). Member 1983 USA Team vs. Japan. Winner 1983 Chrysler Team Invitational (with Jack Nicklaus).

Throughout his career, when Johnny Miller has been playing well, he has been awesome. He always has been able to make the game appear so easy, driving the ball long-and-straight; rifling his irons dead on the flagsticks and holing putts from all corners of the greens.

Miller's arrival as a star always has been tied to his final-round 63 and victory in the 1973 U.S. Open at Oakmont, but it was in 1974 that he won eight times and set what was then a record of $353,021. He won the first three events of the year.

The next year, Johnny's clubs were blazing again. He won the Phoenix Open to start the year with a 24-under par score, and the next week won the Tucson Open with a 25-under score. In each tournament, he had a round of 61.

No one has touched back-to-back efforts like that since.

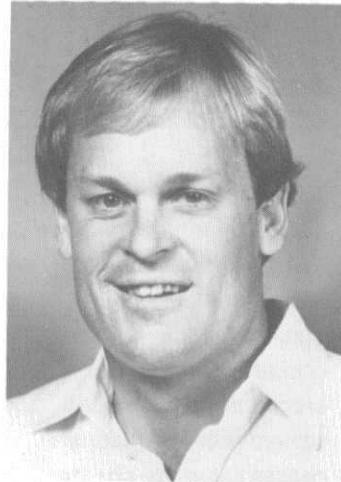

Johnny trimmed his schedule to 15 events last year and, although he did not win, he had some very good efforts. In his season opener, he led the Bob Hope Classic through four rounds but finally finished third as John Mahaffey and Jim Simons slipped past him with strong rounds.

In the year's only other five-day event, the Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational, he was tied with Craig Stadler for the lead after four days, but he dropped back to 5th place. After the U. S. Open in mid-June, he only played three events, and he felt the inactivity hurt his chances when he was in the hunt.

He came close to having a banner year in 1983. He did win the Honda-Inverrary Classic but he lost two others in playoffs—the Phoenix Open to Bob Gilder and the Canadian Open to John Cook. In mid-December, he joined with Jack Nicklaus and they won the Chrysler Team Invitational. It was especially significant since Johnny is the tournament's official host.

In 1966, Johnny first gained national notoriety when he signed up to caddy in the U.S. Open at the Olympic Club in his native San Francisco. However, he eventually qualified to play in the tournament, and went on to an eighth-place finish.

He started in the game at age five, and one of his first titles was the U.S. Juniors in 1964. He went to Brigham Young University and was graduated in 1969. Later that year, he qualified for the TOUR.

Just when it appeared as if Larry Mize had no chance to make the exempt list for 1983, he fooled everyone by playing the way he knew he could play this game. He had won $14,787 with two tournaments remaining on the 1982 schedule, so it appeared as if his chances were slim, indeed, of making the top 125 money winners.

However, he proceeded to tie for ninth in the Pensacola Open and then tie for 11th in the Walt Disney World Classic to win $14,000 and finish the year in 124th place with $28,787. In the Pensacola Open, he started with rounds of 66 and 68 to put himself in position for a strong finish, and at Disney World, he finished with 69-67. One shot more, and he would not have made the top 125.

Those performances should have served as a clue to all followers of the game to keep their eye on this fellow. He made the most of his exempt status and became a winner in 1983, capturing the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic in rather dramatic fashion.

He was dueling Fuzzy Zoeller, Chip Beck, John Mahaffey, Sammy Rachels and others down the stretch in a tight drive, but he clinched it with a pressure-packed 25-foot putt for a birdie on the final hole at the Colonial Country Club. Larry had two other top 10 finishes and collected $146,325 for the year.

At the start of last year, his goal was to be more consistent, and he certainly accomplished that. Even though he did not win, he had his best year in all other categories, such as money, top 10 finishes, surviving cuts and stroke average.

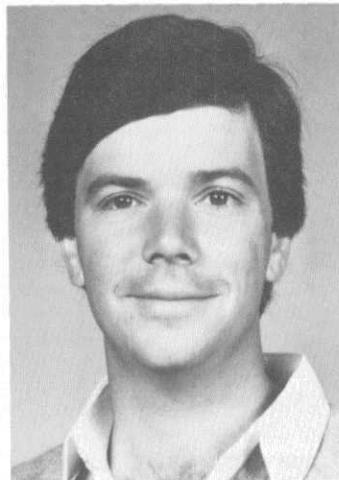

"I had more patience," he said, "and my confidence was good all year."

Since the first time he picked up a club at the age of nine, Larry Mize has been totally in love with the game. He only had a few lessons in the formative years, as his father, a scratch handicapper, pointed him in the right direction.

His mother made certain he played in a number of junior tournaments, and he rewarded her with consistent second-and-third place finishes. He was the No. 1 man on the Augusta (GA) Prep team, and then went on to Georgia Tech, where he was No. 1 for three years and captain of the team for two. Along the way he also won an Atlanta Amateur championship.

It was an important year for Larry experiencewise in 1980 when he competed in five TOUR events. He attempted to obtain his TOUR card in the Spring of 1981 but missed by a stroke, but he was successful in the Fall of 1981.

Talking proudly about her son, his mother commented, "He loves the game more than you can imagine, but sometimes I wonder if he isn't too nice on the course. Maybe he needs more of a killer instinct." He found some of that, too, in 1983.

1984 EARNINGS: $155,087.

CAREER EARNINGS (Regular/Senior TOURS combined): $544,022

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1958 All-Army championship; 1962 All-Service championship; 1969 World Cup Team title (with Lee Trevino); 1969 World Series of Golf; 1971 Hong Kong Open; 1971 Morocco Grand Prix; and 1977 International Caribbean Open.

When Orville Moody arrived at the Houston Champions Golf Club for the 1969 United States Open, there was only one person, other than Orville himself, who thought he had a chance.

His pal, Lee Trevino, told him, "If I don't win it this week, I think you will, Sarge."

Those words meant a lot to Orville, and he did go on to win the Open in one of the championship's biggest surprises. He was only two years out of the Army and only a year away from giving up the TOUR completely.

There have not been many other highlights to Orville's PGA TOUR career, but later in that year, he joined with Trevino and they won the World Cup title for the United States. He also won such things as the 1958 All-Army Championship and the 1962 All-Service Championship, definitely highlights in his mind.

Starting in 1980, Orville only made occasional appearances on the regular TOUR, but he was waiting for the day he turned 50 and could compete on the Senior PGA TOUR. He reached that milestone in December of 1983, and as a "rookie" among the Seniors last year, he did very well, indeed.

He won the Daytona Beach Senior Classic in a playoff over Arnold Palmer and Dan Sikes and the MONY-Senior Tournament of Champions by seven strokes. He also won an unofficial event, the Viceroy Panama Open.

Orville's father was a golf course superintendent in Oklahoma and he says, "I've been playing the game for as long as I can remember." He won the Oklahoma State high school crown.

He was offered an athletic scholarship to the University of Oklahoma, but left college shortly after enrolling and enlisted in the Army. After a stint as a rifle instructor, his golfing talents were recognized, and he was placed in charge of maintenance, instruction and supervision of Army courses. He served in Japan, Korea, Germany and the United States. He even won three Korean Opens.

In 1967, while stationed at Fort Hood in Killeen, TX., he decided to give up his 14-year career in the Army — he was a Staff Sergeant — and try the TOUR. He gave himself two years to make good, or he would return to the Army.

He made it through the 1967 Qualifying School, but it was not an easy year in 1968, winning $12,950. A few times, he was on the verge of quitting, but decided to stick by his original plan to give the TOUR at least two years.

Orville, is part Choctaw Indian.

Gil Morgan is a personable, quiet sort of fellow who can slip by unnoticed, but when he's on the golf course, his colleagues know where he stands.

In the first two tournaments of 1983, all they had to do was look atop the leader boards, and there they would find his name. He won the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open in a playoff over Lanny Wadkins and Curtis Strange; and the next week he won the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open by two strokes.

Last year, he opened the season in the Seiko-Tucson Match Play and reached the final before bowing to Tom Watson, 2 and 1. That was as close as he would come to victory. He said, "I was disappointed I didn't win, but from a standpoint of consistent play, I was pleased because it may have been my best year."

In one stretch, starting with a tie for third place in the Masters, he had six top 10 finishes in seven starts, including three more thirds.

His biggest victory was in the 1978 World Series of Golf when he defeated Hubert Green in a playoff and finished the year as the No. 2 money winner behind Tom Watson. With his powerful, fluid swing action, he always has been able to play the more difficult courses well.

Gil started to play the game at age 15. When he was a junior at East Central State in Oklahoma, he decided to pursue it as a career, along with his goal of some day obtaining a degree in optometry. He won the Oklahoma collegiate championship in 1967, but waited until he earned his doctorate in optometry before turning professional in 1972.

His best national amateur performances came in the Western Amateur and Porter Cup, finishing second in 1972. He entered the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1972, but did not make it. After a stint on the mini-tours, he returned in 1973 and passed his test.

Although he did not gain a lot of national amateur attention, Danny Edwards said that the players around Oklahoma knew all about him. "Oh, yeah, we knew all about the fellow named Morgan who lived in Wewoka."

He progressed steadily up the ladder on the TOUR until he won the 1977 B.C. Open by five strokes over Lee Elder. The next year, he won the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open and then the World Series of Golf. He pocketed $267,459 for the year.

Jodie Mudd

BEST 1984 FINISH: T14—Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—26; in money—16; top ten finishes—0; stroke average—72.04

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 18—driving distance (268.9).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Three-time All-American at Georgia Southern. Winner 1980 and 1981 U.S. Public Links Championships; 1981 Sunnehanna Amateur; plus eight collegiate events. Member 1981 U. S. Walker Cup team. Low Amateur in 1982 Masters Tournament (tie 20).

Jodie Mudd is expected to enjoy a long-and-successful tenure on the PGA TOUR, and it appears likely that, somewhere down the road, he will look back at 1983 and 1984 as the most significant years of his career.

He points out that 1983 certainly was not up to his expectations. It was full of ups-and-downs, mentally and physically, but he came back with a good season last year.

"I learned a lot about life in general," he said. "The biggest change from 1983 to 1984 was more the mental aspects of everything. I learned a lot about myself and how to handle the good and the bad."

"I've realized golf is not a do-or-die situation and you have to learn how to take advantage of the good shots and save strokes, and wash the bad ones out of your mind."

He points to 1984, especially the last half of the year, as a big turn around. Through the first nine events he was able to enter, he only survived the cut twice. He knew he had to get his game and his thought processes in order.

The upswing started at the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic where he tied for 15th place. He went on from there to make the cut in 13 of his last 16 starts of the year.

Jodie became an official member of the PGA TOUR in April of 1982, the week after the Masters Tournament. As an amateur, he tied for 20th at Augusta that year. His first pro start was the Tallahassee Open and he tied for 30th, winning $675. The next week, he played in the USF&G Classic and tied for fifth place, pocketing $10,537.

That was sufficient for him to meet the minimum money guideline that was in effect at that time, and he was a TOUR regular the next week in the Houston Open.

Jodie came from a golfing family, and in the early days, he caddied for his father. He continued to play golf in high school but also excelled in basketball. "I gave basketball up in my senior year, though," he said, "so I could concentrate on golf."

After playing in a couple of events in Florida, he accepted a scholarship to Georgia Southern College. There, his game blossomed. Twice he won the United States Public Links Championships, in 1980 and 1981. He won the prestigious Sunnehanna Amateur in 1981 and was a member of the U.S. Walker Cup team the same year. He won eight collegiate events and was the runner-up on another seven occasions.

There wasn't any doubt about his ability to play the game. As his success continued, he started to think about playing on the PGA TOUR. "I felt my game would be good enough," he said.

He talked about life on the TOUR. "The pace is faster and it's more of a grind than I thought it would be at first. There's more pressure than in amateur and collegiate golf. You have to learn how to handle it."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1965 U.S. Amateur champion. 1966 NCAA champion. 1975 Ryder Cup Team. Player Director on PGA TOUR Policy Board, 1979-1980. Member 1966 World Amateur Cup Team. 1967 Walker Cup Team. Winner, 1967 Florida Open. 1968 Rookie of the Year. Winner, 1979 Jerry Ford Invitational.

Just when Bob Murphy should have been enjoying some of the finest years of his PGA TOUR career, he has had to overcome physical problems in order to play at all.

First it was a hand injury and then back problems that prevented him from playing the game with his usual vigor. Through it all, he has kept smiling. His best week of the year came on one of the more difficult courses at Muirfield Village in the Memorial Tournament. His first-round 67 put him in a tie for the lead and he finally finished in a tie for 10th place.

In 1982, Bob suffered through his lowest money year since he has been on TOUR, mainly because of the hand problem. He had to miss the first nine events. He came back with a respectable season in 1983, only to suffer with back problems last year.

Frequently, Bob will serve as a color analyst for CBS telecasts and his work is well received.

During his fine career, he has been able to win four times, but it is interesting to note that this strong competitor has lost five times in six playoffs. The last was in the 1981 Tallahassee Open when Dave Eichelberger gained the victory.

Bob's career started in a rather unusual fashion. He went to the University of Florida on a baseball scholarship as a pitcher, but he injured a shoulder in a pick-up football game as a freshman.

He took up golf as a physical education course and it was love at first sight. He said he would even skip class to practice.

Before he was graduated with a degree in physical education, he won the 1965 United States Amateur championship, the 1966 NCAA title for the Gators, two Florida Amateur titles, the 1967 Florida Open, and played on U.S. World Amateur Cup and Walker Cup teams.

He turned professional and went to the PGA TOUR School in 1967, and passed easily. In his rookie year of 1968, he set a goal of winning $40,000. He won $105,595, a record for a first-year player at that time, and two tournaments, the Philadelphia and Thunderbird Classics, back-to-back. Just prior to his first victory, he was second in the Westchester Classic.

He has won twice since then, the 1970 Greater Hartford Open and the 1975 Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic.

He had off years in 1976 and 1977, due mainly to a uric acid condition that gave him hand problems, came back slightly in 1978 and then, for the first time in his TOUR career, slipped from the list of top 60 money winners in 1979. He was 62nd, only $770 behind the 60th man. He figured he needed one more putt, somewhere, to keep his streak alive.

Tommy Nakajima

EXEMPT STATUS: 77th on 1984 money list.

FULL NAME: Tsuneyuki Nakajima

BIRTH DATE: October 24, 1954 BIRTHPLACE: Gunma, Japan

RESIDENCE: Narita City, Chiba, Japan

FAMILY: Wife, Pitsuko; Yoshino (10/6/78); Masao (11/18/79)

SPECIAL INTERESTS: Music, skiing.

TURNED PROFESSIONAL: 1975 JOINED TOUR: 1983

BEST-EVER FINISH: 4—1983 Greater Greensboro Open.

CAREER EARNINGS: $125,147

MONEY & POSITION: 1983 — $46,351 — 107 1984 — $78,796 — 77

BEST 1984 FINISHES: T6—Honda Classic; T8—Phoenix Open; T10—PGA Championship.

BEST 1984 STATISTICS: 32—greens in regulation (.665), par breakers (.188).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1973 Japan Amateur. Winner 1977, 1983 and 1984 Japan PGA. In 1983 won seven times in Japan, including Japan Match Play, Suntory Open and Mitsubishi Gallant. Also was low pro in U.S. vs. Japan Team matches in 1983. Leader Japan Order of Merit, 1982 and 1983. Winner 1984 Kanto Open.

Tsuneyuki (Tommy) Nakajima has followed in the footsteps of Isao Aoki, becoming a member of the PGA TOUR and carrying an impressive set of credentials along the way.

He has been the leader in the Japanese Order of Merit on two occasions, and in 1983 he collected seven victories, but a special moment came when he shot a brilliant 65 the last day to win individual honors in the U.S. vs. Japan team matches in November, 1983. He posted the score on a cold, windy day when most players were struggling to match par.

He considers winning the Japan Amateur championship in 1973 at the age of 19 as his greatest accomplishment, but in 1983 won his second Japan PGA title, and such other events as the Suntory Open, Japan Match Play and the Mitsubishi Gallant. He won the PGA title again last year.

He played well in eight appearances on the PGA TOUR in 1983, with a solid fourth in the Greater Greensboro Open his best effort. The next week, he tied for 16th in the Masters Tournament, but he was only four strokes off the lead after three rounds (72-70-72), but a final-day 76 was costly.

He said at the time, that his main purpose of playing here was to win enough money to qualify for a PGA TOUR card. He collected $46,351, easily enough for membership without having to go through the Qualifying School.

Last year, in 14 appearances he missed the cut only once and earned a tidy sum of $78,796. His best finish was a tie for sixth place in the Honda Classic.

He obtained the nickname Tommy while playing in the 1981 Australian Masters. The television announcers could not pronounce Tsuneyuki, and Tommy seemed to be close enough.

Tommy started to play golf as a nine-year old with the help of his father. Through the early years, his father was his only teacher. He turned professional in 1975 at the age of 22 and his progress has been steady. In 1981, he was second only to Aoki on the Japan Order of Merit, and the following year, he collected a record $270,000 with five victories.

Today, close followers of the Japan circuit will tell you that he is the heir apparent to Aoki's throne as Japan's leading player and is expected to continue on and one day be regarded as its greatest player.

As expected, Aoki and Jack Nicklaus are his two "most admired" people in the game, but when Aoki holed the wedge shot to win the 1983 Hawaiian Open, Tommy didn't know about it for a day or two. He was competing in Australia.

He considers the strongest part of his game the driver through the three iron, but his short game and putting have been improving each year.

A very personable-and-pleasant fellow, he is a welcomed addition to the PGA TOUR.

Jim Nelford may never come as close to a victory as he did in the Bing Crosby Pro-Amateur last year, only to have it pulled from his grasp in the most unusual finish of the year.

Jim shot a final round four-under par 68 at Pebble Beach and was in the clubhouse at 10-under par 278. Hale Irwin was nine-under par with two holes to play. He parred the 17th and then on the 18th tee, he pulled his drive far to the left. The ball appeared headed for Carmel Bay but it hit among the rocks and somehow bounced back onto the fairway.

Irwin then reached the green in regulation, placing his approach only five feet from the cup on the par five hole, and he made it for the birdie and the tie.

On the second extra hole, Irwin hit a poor drive into a bunker, and then hit a career two iron shot nine feet from the hole. He made it for the birdie and the victory. Unfortunately, Nelford never came as close again the rest of the year.

In 1983, Jim chased Fuzzy Zoeller to the wire in the Sea Pines Heritage Classic before losing by two strokes.

It was a definite plus for golf and the PGA TOUR when Jim decided that his future in sports was not in hockey but on the fairways of the world. However, some of the things he learned on the ice rinks of his native Canada have been useful in golf.

"I played hockey from the time I was six until I was 17," he said. "It was mostly club hockey. I really enjoyed it."

Normally a righthander, he started to play the game at age nine as a lefthander because he had to borrow his father's clubs — and they were lefties. "My Dad switched me over to righthanded at an early age," he said, but he continued to putt lefthanded, and still does today." It was more comfortable for me to putt that way, and that's probably because my best shot in hockey was from the left side."

He caddied some for his father in those early days, but his real start in the game came when his uncle would take him to his cabin in Saskatchewan and they would venture to a nearby course.

In his early teens, he started to think more seriously about golf, and one day he read in a magazine about how colleges gave scholarships for golf. He liked that idea, so he would practice whenever he could in his native Vancouver.

Happily, he received a scholarship to Brigham Young University, and there he teamed with Mike Reid, Pat McGowan, John Fought and Mike Brannan. Later, Bill Sander joined the team.

He was a fine amateur, winning the Canadian Amateur in 1975 and 1976 and the Western Amateur in 1977. He won the 1976 Pan American and Pacific Coast Intercollegiate events. He was All-Western Athletic Conference for three years, and twice was named second-team All-American.

In the Fall of 1977, he turned professional and headed for the TOUR's Qualifying School. He made it.

Three times he has represented Canada in World Cup competition, and in 1980 he joined with Dan Halldorson to win the team title.

In 1983, he returned to Canada to play in the new Tournament Players Series' event in Windsor at the Essex Club, and he won it.

The stronger the challenge the better Larry Nelson seems to play. He was not enjoying a banner year in 1984 but he made it a good one with an impressive performance in his final event, the Walt Disney World Classic. He won by a stroke over Hubert Green with a tournament record 22-under par 266.

The previous year, he was off to a slow start and arrived on the scene for the United States Open at Oakmont Country Club practically unnoticed. He stayed that way through his first two rounds. His 75-73—148 left him seven strokes off the pace.

Then came another challenge; a challenge he issued to himself, and he responded brilliantly. His six-under par 65 in the third round lifted him to within one stroke of the co-leaders, Tom Watson and Seve Ballesteros.

During the rain-interrupted last round, it was a battle between Larry and his good friend Watson. Play had to be halted late in the afternoon with Nelson on the 16th tee and Watson on the 15th green.

When it resumed the next morning, Larry hit a four wood to the back level of the green on the 226-yard hole, some 62 feet from the cup. He was hoping he wouldn't three putt. Instead, he made it for a near impossible birdie two and went on to a one-stroke victory over Watson. His 10-under par 132 for the last two rounds set a U.S. Open record.

It was his second major championship, since he won the 1981 PGA title before thousands of his hometown followers at the Atlanta Athletic Club. His margin was four strokes over Fuzzy Zoeller.

Larry started on TOUR in 1974, but his first victory didn't come until six years later in the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic. Later that same year, he defeated Ben Crenshaw for the Western Open title.

There are not many stories on the PGA TOUR more unusual than Nelson's. Only four years after he started to play golf, and after playing only one 72-hole tournament, he had his Approved Tournament Players card. "I really wasn't ready," he said later, but he got ready in a hurry, as witness his steady climb up the money rankings since then.

Larry lettered in baseball and basketball in high school and attended Southern Tech for a year before he was drafted and spent two years in the military. After his discharge in 1968, he tried school again and also worked as an illustrator at the Lockheed plant near his home.

He went to a driving range one day in 1969, liked hitting balls so much that he went to work in pro Bert Seagraves' shop at the Pine Tree Club in Kennesaw, Ga. He turned pro six months after that. He tried the mini-tours briefly and, in 1973, finished bogey-bogey in the Florida State Open to lose by a shot. That was his lone 72-hole event before earning his TOUR card that Fall.

While some of the magic may be missing from Bobby Nichols' golf bag these days, he still remains one of the most popular figures in the game.

He only makes a limited number of appearances on the TOUR, but before he moves on to the Senior PGA TOUR in a couple of years, he would like to reach the $1 million mark in earnings, and it appears likely he will make it.

It has been a wonderful career for the big handsome fellow who came very close to not being able to play the game at all.

Since he started on the PGA TOUR in 1960, Bobby has won 12 times, including the 1964 PGA Championship at the Columbus (OH) Country Club. It was there that he seemingly made great shots from all corners of the golf course and holed putts from one end of the state to the other. He won by three over Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer.

Several years earlier, Bobby was an outstanding football and basketball player at St. Xavier High School in Louisville, Ky. On September 3, 1952, he was critically injured when a car in which he was a passenger failed to make a curve and crashed.

He suffered a broken pelvis, back injuries, a brain concussion and internal injuries. He was paralyzed from the waist down and was unconscious for 13 days. He was hospitalized for 96 days.

His football and basketball days were over, but he still could play golf, when he finally regained the use of his legs. While going on to win junior golf titles in Kentucky, he met Bear Bryant, then the football coach at the University of Kentucky. Bryant went on to Texas A&M, and proceeded to give Bobby a scholarship to play golf for the Aggies.

Bobby won the 1956 Southwestern Conference title, and after he was graduated, spent two years in the Army. He held the rank of Captain in the reserves.

He came out on TOUR in 1960, and two years later was honored by the Golf Writers Association of America with the Ben Hogan Award for his courageous comeback.

He had another terrifying moment at the 1975 Western Open. That was when he felt the effects of a bolt of lightning and was taken to the hospital with Lee Trevino and Jerry Heard. He has not played with the same effectiveness since.

Has total of 18 international titles. Member World Golf Hall of Fame. Winner, 1982 Card Walker Award for outstanding contributions to junior golf. Winner 1983 Chrysler Team Invitation (with Johnny Miller).

As long as the game of golf is played, there never will be another Jack William Nicklaus. He represents all that is great in the game and in the world of sports.

He has established a standard of excellence that never will be surpassed. It seems appropriate that his first victory as a professional would be the 1962 United States Open Championship at Oakmont Country Club and he achieved it in a classic playoff over Arnold Palmer.

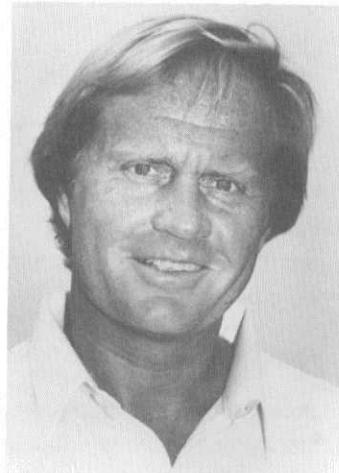

Since then, there have been numerous classic performances, but one of the most satisfying victories of his career came in May of 1984 when he won his own Memorial Tournament for a second time. He had to defeat Andy Bean in a playoff to win it.

He has won five Masters Tournaments and five PGA Championships, four U.S. Opens; three Tournament Players Championships and British Opens and two U.S. Amateur Championships.

On the PGA TOUR, since starting in January of 1962, he has won 70 times, but he also has had an astonishing 56 second-place finishes and two of them came last year. He also has been third 35 times.

He readily admits one of his greatest satisfactions came in the Fall of 1983 when he captained the United States Ryder Cup team to a thrilling one-point victory over the European team.

Jack William Nicklaus — he truly is the one-and-only.

Mike Nicolette had been fighting the odds — and losing — for too many years on the PGA TOUR to let his one big chance for glory slip away.

He was competing in the 1983 Bay Hill Classic and playing as never before. After three rounds, he was six strokes ahead of Greg Norman of Australia and Seve Ballesteros of Spain. Everyone knows six shots is not a bunch when you have two of the best in the world next in line.

Seve's hopes of making a move evaporated when he bogeyed four in a row, starting at the 11th, but Norman was making moves. After 16 holes, Mike and Greg were tied.

They parred the 17th, and then at the demanding 18th hole, Mike recalls, "After my tee shot, I had 203 yards to carry the lake to the green. I thought, 'This is your chance to win. Go for it.' He also told himself that his boyhood idol — and the tournament sponsor, Arnold Palmer — would go for it. So, he did.

On the first extra hole, Mike received his reward, winning with a par as Norman three putted.

He later laughed, "Seve owns Spain and Greg just bought a house here in Bay Hill and a $73,000

It was another dream come true for Mike in the final round of the 1982 Buick Eastern Open. He was in the next-to-last group and paired with Jack Nicklaus. "Every young player dreams of that," Mike said. "and being with him, plus in contention to win, well, it was an experience I'll never forget."

Jack may not forget it either, because Mike shot a final-round 70 and tied for second place, just one stroke behind the winner, Andy Bean. Jack had to settle for a 74 and a tie for 11th.

Mike referred to 1984 as "a learning experience. I made some swing changes and experimented a little to try and find something that would help to make me more consistent."

Mike started to play golf at age 10 because his parents played. He says he never really worked at it "until I was 14 or 15, and then I played in a couple of junior tournaments. I liked the competition,

He played varsity golf through high school and then at Rollins College. He left school to try for his TOUR card in the Spring of 1978 and made it. Although his first two years on TOUR were not overly productive, he felt he was making progress. He knew he was playing better and felt the scoring would come if he stayed with it.

(Won seven events in 1983); 1984 Victoria Open in Australia.

Greg Norman has always established high standards for himself and at every step along the way through his golfing career, he has met or surpassed his goals.

As he prepared to enter his first full season on the PGA TOUR in 1984, he said he had set very high goals again, but didn't care to reveal what they were. "But, believe me," he said, "they are high."

Whatever the goals happened to be, Greg reached the highest plateau during an unbelievable six-week stretch in early summer. After a so-so start for the year with only one top ten finish in nine attempts, he went on a rampage.

He won the Kemper Open in a breeze. He led by seven strokes after three rounds and finally won by an easy five. He skipped the next tournament, but went into the U.S. Open with his clubs smoking. He saved three great pars on the last three holes, the final one with a putt of 40 feet to tie Fuzzy Zoeller. Unfortunately for Greg, he was drained the next day and Fuzzy won the playoff, 67 to 75.

After a tie for 10th place in Atlanta, he won the Canadian Open the following week in a tense duel with Jack Nicklaus, and then in the Western Open, he lost another playoff, this one to Tom Watson.

The handsome Australian never played the game until he was 16, and then one day, he caddied for his mother, a three handicapper. When she finished the round, he borrowed her clubs and played a few holes on his own.

In two years, this son of a mining engineer went from a 27 handicapper to scratch. His secret to success came from two books his mother gave him, both written by Jack Nicklaus — "Golf My Way," and "55 Ways to Play Golf."

Greg will tell you, "I didn't try to copy Jack, just pick up the basics."

Today, Greg is known for his prodigious drives, but that was part of his early training, as he was told to hit it as hard as he could, and then work on straightening it out.

The victories started to come early and by 1982 — just three years after he joined the European Tour full time, he was the leading money winner.

His first appearance in the United States was in the 1977 Memorial Tournament.

In the 1981 Masters Tournament, he finished fourth, but he gained considerable attention with his "shark-hunting" stories, and thus became known as the "Great White Shark." He says he actually never went hunting for sharks, only shot at a few when "I became irritated because they were eating my fish. And, I only did that a few times."

Nevertheless, the nickname Shark has caught on, and he even has puppet shark headcovers for his woods.

In 1983, Greg entered nine PGA TOUR events and made the cut in all nine, collecting $71,411. He easily surpassed the minimum money guideline for membership. In his first 1983 start, he tied with Mike Nicolette in the Bay Hill Classic, coming from six strokes behind the last day, but lost the playoff on the first extra hole.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1979 Sun Bowl College All-Star tournament. 1980 Dixie Amateur. 1980 California State Open (first start as professional). Namec Fresno State Athlete of Year in 1980. All-America choice, 1979, 1980.

Only one other player in the history of the PGA TOUR has shot a lower 72-hole score than Tim Norris. Mike Souchak won the 1955 Texas Open in San Antonio with a 27-under par 257.

When Norris blitzed the Wethersfield Country Club course in the 1982 Sammy Davis, Jr.-Greater Hartford Open, he shot a 25-under par 259. Only Byron Nelson, in the 1945 Seattle Open, and Chandler Harper, in the 1954 Texas Open, have ever shot as low as 259. Tim was on the verge of matching Souchak's mark until he bogeyed two of the final four.

He really could not explain his superlative play except to say he had very positive thoughts all week. Although his record did not show it, he said, "I had been playing well for several weeks, but everything just jelled at Hartford."

Prior to his victory, Tim went to a little longer shaft in his irons. "That enabled me to hit the ball a little further, higher and softer into the greens. I figured if I could shorten each hole by 10 yards, that has to help me."

After a fine amateur record, Tim was able to earn his TOUR card in the Fall of 1980 and went on to have a decent rookie year, winning $32,424. Late in the fall, he suffered a sprained right hand. He tried to qualify for the first tournament, the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, but the pain was too intense. He did not return to the TOUR until the Tallahassee Open in late April where he tied for 45th. He didn't make another cut until the Greater Milwaukee Open in early July. Unfortunately, the hand still gave him problems through the end of the year.

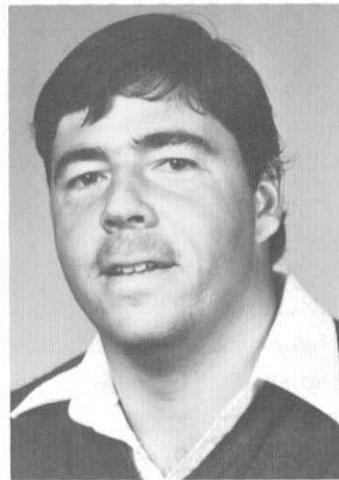

A tireless worker, he will spend hours on the practice tee when he is right physically. "That's what it takes," he said. "I want to give the TOUR my best shot and if it doesn't work out, I always can go home and get a job."

He underwent a hand operation in the Fall of 1982 and didn't return to the TOUR in 1983 until the Tournament Players Championship. He was in rare form at the Anheuser-Busch Classic in late July, however, as three rounds in the 60s lifted him into a second-place finish, one behind Calvin Peete.

He started in the game at age six in Fresno, CA. He had a few tennis lessons and didn't care for that game, and then moved on to golf, encouraged by his stepfather.

"I took a liking to it right away," he said. As he grew older, he would watch golf on television. He didn't make his high school team until his senior year. He went on to Fresno State, and played well there. He was selected as an All-American twice. In his first start as a professional, he won the 1980 California State Open by five strokes.

He entered the TOUR regional qualifier in Modesto, CA, and won by five strokes. He went to the final school and easily qualified for his TOUR card.

Andy North has enjoyed some wonderful days on the PGA TOUR, but his greatest week had to be at Cherry Hills Country Club in Denver when he won the 1978 United States Open Championship.

He led by two strokes after 36 holes and by one after the third round, but midway through the second nine on the final day, he appeared to be coasting home. He led by four strokes with five holes to play.

There were some anxious moments before he was through, though. When he hit his tee shot on the 18th hole, he needed a bogey to win—and that's what he scored. After being bunkered in three, he blasted to four feet. It wasn't an easy putt, but he made it to gain the victory.

The last couple of years, the game has not been as kind to the big University of Florida graduate. He was bothered by a painful right elbow during most of the 1982 and 1983 campaigns. Originally, it was thought to be tendonitis.

Further examination revealed a bone spur and in the Fall of 1983, he underwent an operation to have it removed. "I never said much about it," Andy said, "because most of the guys on TOUR play hurt at least part of the time. You just play and do the best you can."

As it turned out, the spur was "about the size of a piece of gravel."

During the time when the elbow hurt, he developed poor swing habits and his game suffered. In 1983, it was so painful, he hardly practiced.

It takes time to get the proper swing plane back, but towards the end of 1984, there were good signs. "I was encouraged," he said, "because I started to play decent again. I accomplished a lot."

An unusual ailment helped lead North to golf when he was in the seventh grade in Madison, WI. A bone in his knee had stopped growing and was disintegrating. While on crutches for 18 months he was told to give up his pursuit of basketball and football but that he could play golf—if he rode in a cart.

Since Andy's father was a low-handicap golfer, the game was no stranger to the family and he progressed quickly. He also returned to basketball and was chosen all-state as a high school senior, but by then golf was his dominant sport.

North won the Wisconsin high school championship in 1966 and 1967, the State Amateur in 1969 and placed second in the Wisconsin Open in 1968 and 1969. After entering the University of Florida he was chosen All-American for three years and won the 1971 Western Amateur.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—36; in money—18; top ten finishes—0; stroke avg.—72.91.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 10—driving distance (272.4).

Mac O'Grady believes he set a PGA TOUR record even before he became a member of the TOUR. "I went through the Qualifying School 17 times before I made it," he said. "The first time was in October of 1971."

After he finally succeeded in the Fall of 1982, he made the most of his opportunity and collected $50,379 to easily place among the leading money winners in 1983. He played considerably more in 1984 and ties for 13th place in the Hawaiian Open and Greater Greensboro Open were his best finishes.

He said early in the year, "I've played so many places around the world during the last 10 years or so, being on the PGA TOUR is like celebrating Christmas every day."

He added, "A friend told me, 'You've had your nose up against the candy store window for years — and now you're inside'."

The Mac O'Grady story is an intriguing one. Actually, his real name is Phil McGleno, but in 1978, for a variety of reasons, he changed it to Phillip McClelland O'Grady. McClelland is for Bob McClelland, a fellow who has been like a father to him for years; and O'Grady was his mother's maiden name.

Mac was one of seven children and they lived in Minneapolis, MN, until moving to Los Angeles in 1960. He started to caddy when he was 12, both at Riviera and Bel-Air Country Clubs. Later, several of the men for whom he caddied, would serve as his sponsors.

As a youth, he was filled with frustrations, and in an attempt to wash them away, he did everything from ride a bike for great distances, practice yoga and even worked hard on being able to play the game right-and-left handed. Of course, he plays right-handed now, but still puts left-handed.

He said he loves marathoning, and misses those long, peaceful runs on the beach of Malibu.

His best effort on TOUR was in the 1983 Sea Pines Heritage Classic. A second-round 65 gave him a seven-under par 133 and a one-stroke lead over Bob Eastwood. A 73 the next day dropped him into a tie for third, two strokes behind front-running Fuzzy Zoeller.

He was in a position to make a strong move the last afternoon, but four bogeys on the second nine left him four behind Zoeller and in a tie for third place. Nevertheless, he was delighted.

Later in the fall, his position was not secure among the top 125 money winners. At the Las Vegas Pro-Celebrity Classic, he was 111th, and said, "I need to make a good check this week."

After three rounds of the five-day event, he was only one-stroke out of the lead, but a last-day 74 dropped him into a tie for 12th. Still, he won $15,188 and was home free for the year.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—35; in money—20; top ten finishes—0; stroke avg.—72.84.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 30—eagles (7).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1975 Illinois State High School championship; 1979 Harvey Penick Invitational; 1980 Illinois State Open.

If you ask David Ogrin when he was introduced to the game of golf, he'll smile and tell you, "Legend has it I was born with a club in my hands. When I was two-years old, my dad had one of his clubs break, so he sawed off the shaft, put a grip on it and I started to swing away."

"By the time I was five, I was breaking 60. I still have some scorecards from when I was five; and I was in my first competition at seven."

There was a time when David was considering baseball as a career. "I had dreams of being a switch-hitting catcher," he says with a laugh, "but my love of golf was too much. When I started to miss one-or-two games in Little League to play golf, my coach said, 'Good-bye.'"

In 1975, his Waukegan East high school team won the Illinois State Interscholastic title. Then he went to Texas A&M on a scholarship. "Bob Ellis is the coach at A&M and he originally was from Illinois. He kept in touch and wanted me to go there, so I did."

He won three collegiate events, including the 1979 Harvey Penick Invitational in Austin. Hal Sutton was the runner-up.

"I wanted to go as far as I could in the game," he said, "and I made it through the TOUR's Qualifying School on my fourth attempt." That was in the Fall of 1982 at the Tournament Players Club.

"It isn't often one dreams a dream," he said, "and then when he reaches the dream, realizes it is even better than the dream. The TOUR is all I dreamed it would be, and more."

Summing up his first year, he commented, "For years, I had to watch the great players from afar. I tried to emulate them. Now, I have the chance to actually ask them things and watch them up close. I don't want unsolicited suggestions, but I appreciate being able to ask them."

He said the highlight of 1983 was the United States Open. After shooting 75 and 69, he was only three strokes off the lead. He finished tied for 13th, his highest of the year.

He also had opportunities at the Kemper Open and the Las Vegas Pro-Celebrity Classic, but grins and says, "disaster struck. Maybe with a little more maturity, I would have won a lot more money, but that's part of the learning experience."

Even though he increased his earnings in 1984, he didn't feel he played up to his potential. "I will say this, the second time around in a number of the TOUR stops encouraged me, because I realized I could play out here especially at the Western Open and the USF&G in New Orleans."

When everything is right, he plays with a slight fade. His strong point seems to be his ability to "grind out the par in tough situations." He admits, "I'm not a birdie machine."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1979 United States Amateur, California State Amateur, Mexican Amateur, All-American at Long Beach State. 1981 Rookie-of-the-Year. Member 1984 USA Team vs. Japan.

As long as Mark O'Meara plays the game, he probably will never experience another year such as 1984. He won his first TOUR tournament, the Greater Milwaukee Open, but victories are expected of this talented young man.

What made it unusual was the rest of the story. He finished second FIVE times, third three times and had a total of 15 top ten finishes — high on the TOUR. He earned $465,873 and finished second to Tom Watson in the race for the Arnold Palmer Award as the year's leading money winner. He only trailed Watson by $10,387.

Every time he was asked to explain his sudden rise to the top, he always pointed the finger at Hank Haney, the man from Houston who turned his game around.

"I've always played on natural instincts," Mark has said, "but I knew I needed something better. Hank has me swinging more on a plane. I was always too upright and that led to inconsistency. Now, I understand the swing much better."

Prior to 1984, he twice had lost tournaments in playoffs. The first was in his rookie season of 1981 when he bowed to Dave Eichelberger in the Tallahassee Open; and then in 1983 to Bob Gilder in the Phoenix Open.

He started to play the game at age 13 after his family moved to Mission Viejo, CA. A golf course was next to their home and, at the time, Mark didn't know many of the kids in the neighborhood. So, he would slip onto the course and play.

"My Dad played," he said, "but that wasn't the main reason I started. Once I did, I liked it, and then I started to set the goals."

He wanted to make the golf team as a freshman at Mission Viejo High School, and he did. His junior year, the team won the state championship.

He wanted to play well enough to earn a college scholarship, and he did that, too, going to Long Beach State University. His next goal was to be classified as an All-American, and he made the third team as a freshman and second team as a senior.

He broke onto the national scene in a big way in 1979, winning the United States Amateur at Canterbury in Cleveland, defeating John Cook in the finals. He won the California State Amateur, defeating Lennie Clements in the final and also won the Mexican Amateur, defeating Gary Hallberg the last day.

"That convinced me I could play," he said. Because of his U.S. title, he was able to play in the Masters Tournament, two World Series of Golf, the Byron Nelson Classic and the Colonial National Invitation.

He prefers to play with a draw off the tee, and with a slight fade with the irons.

Leader British Order of Merit, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1974. Winner of a total of 19 international tournaments. Runner-up 1974 and 1982 British Opens. Winner 1983 Spalding Invitational.

When Jack Nicklaus completed his final round in the 1981 Canadian Open Championship, he walked toward the scorer's tent, approached Peter Oosterhuis and congratulated him on his victory.

"I'm happy for you, Peter," he said. "You've been very patient waiting for this first win."

Oosterhuis's smile grew even wider, and he replied, "Thanks, Jack, but rather than being patient, I think I was just stubborn."

Oosterhuis was a big winner on the European circuit when he left the shores of his native England to seek his fame on the PGA TOUR in the Fall of 1974.

He did not win again until he mastered the difficulties of the Glen Abbey course in Oakville, Ontario, winning with a four-under par score of 280. Just one stroke back were Nicklaus, Bruce Lietzke and Andy North.

The $76,500 first prize represented more than he had ever won in an entire season. His best previous year was 1977 when he won $60,083.

A fine amateur, Peter was a member of Britain's Walker Cup team in 1967 and the Eisenhower Trophy team in 1968. In the early 1970's, he was the leading player on the European circuit. Starting in 1971, he led the British Order of Merit for four straight years. That is the same as being the number one money winner on the PGA TOUR.

He won 19 times, including such titles as the 1973 and 1974 French Opens and 1974 Italian Open. In fact, the latter was his last victory prior to the Canadian.

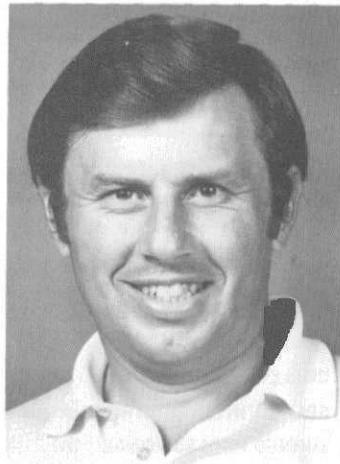

Oosterhuis was the third-round leader in the 1973 Masters Tournament and finished alone in third place. In the 1974 Monsanto Open at Pensacola, he was the leader coming down the stretch, but Lee Elder birdied three of the last four holes to tie him, and then Lee won the playoff.

Early in 1981, Peter admits his game was going nowhere. While at the Heritage Classic, his long-time friend, Bert Yancey, told him he needed a better routine over the ball.

"I was never set in my own mind what I wanted to do with each shot, even when I was over the ball," Peter confessed. "Bert stressed the importance of knowing what I wanted to do before addressing it, develop a routine and stay with it."

Gradually, his game started to come together again. All he lacked was the consistency to put four solid rounds together. He did that at Glen Abbey. He has played well ever since.

Peter was born in London. His father was from Holland, and he went to England during World War II, where he met his bride-to-be.

Arnold Palmer has been honored by many people from many nations during his distinguished career as an athlete and businessman, but one of his most cherished moments came late in 1980 when it was announced by Commissioner Deane R. Beman that, starting in 1981, the leading money winner on the PGA TOUR would receive the Arnold Palmer Award.

Tom Kite was the first recipient.

Since Arnold was the TOUR's leading money winner for many years, the first player to reach the $1 million mark in winnings, and, generally, done so much to popularize the game, Commissioner Beman said it would be appropriate to give the 1980 inaugural award to Arnold himself.

Palmer won the U.S. Amateur championship in 1954 and joined the TOUR the next year.

Jerry Pate has a flair for the dramatic and it never was more evident than during the closing stages of the 1982 Tournament Players Championship, which was being held for the first time on the demanding Tournament Players Club course.

He was battling Brad Bryant, Bruce Lietzke and Scott Simpson for the lead and the coveted victory. Just when it appeared a playoff was imminent, Pate birdied the treacherous little 17th hole with a 15-foot putt; and then birdied the 440-yard 18th by lofting a five iron brilliantly to within two feet for another birdie. On one of the more difficult courses on TOUR, he played the final seven holes in four-under par.

Then, as he stood on the final green at the awards ceremony, he coaxed TOUR Commissioner Deane R. Beman and course architect Pete Dye to the edge of the bulkhead and pushed them both in the lake. Finally, he dove in himself.

It was his second such act of showmanship. He did it the first time after winning the 1981 Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic, diving into the large lake to the left of the 18th green.

A severe neck muscle pull suffered in mid-1982 cut deeply into his playing ability. It bothered him all through 1983, making it practically impossible to play. Last year, he suffered through the early part of the year and, gradually, he started to feel better and play without pain. The biggest boost to his confidence came in a fourth place finish in the Bank of Boston Classic.

Pate literally burst into world-wide attention as a PGA TOUR rookie in 1976. His last swing in the U.S. Open, a five-iron from the rough at Atlanta Athletic Club, left him a two-foot birdie putt for a two-shot victory, and his closing 63 in the Canadian Open was good for a four-stroke victory over Jack Nicklaus. His total of $153,102 in official earnings was the most ever won by a rookie until Hal Sutton bettered it in 1982.

Conrad Rehling, who developed Bob Murphy while coaching at the University of Florida in the early 1960s, found another champion-to-be about a decade later while coaching at a small college near Pensacola. Pate was still in high school when he came under Rehling's wing. When Rehling moved to the University of Alabama, Pate followed. In 1974, like Murphy nine years earlier, Pate won the U.S. and Florida Amateur titles.

Jerry also helped Uncle Sam win the 1974 World Amateur Team championship, the 1975 Walker Cup matches and the 1981 Ryder Cup matches.

(TOTAL: 1)

BEST 1984 FINISHES: 1—Houston Coca-Cola Open; 2—Phoenix Open; T2—Southern Open; T5—Canadian Open; T9—Western Open.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—29; in money—26; top ten finishes—5; stroke average—71.26

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 4—Birdies (384).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1977 Junior World and Los Angeles City Championship. Winner 1981 North-South Amateur, Southwest Amateur, Maccabiah Games. Winner of 11 college tournaments, including 1982 PAC-10. Member 1981 Walker Cup team. Winner 1982 Fred Haskins award as outstanding collegiate player. Winner 1983 South African PGA, German Open and Calberson Classic (France).

Corey Pavin may have been a first-year player on the PGA TOUR in 1984, but he proved he was far from being a first-year touring professional.

The young man from UCLA not only won the Houston Coca-Cola Open, but he went on to win far more than any other first-year player in the history of the TOUR. He collected $260,536.

Before joining the TOUR, Corey gathered more experience playing around the world than any of his colleagues who started their PGA TOUR careers last year and it didn't take long for his skills to surface.

He missed the cut in the Bob Hope Classic, his first official start, but the next week, he fought Tom Purtzer to the wire before Purtzer finally won it with a birdie at the final hole. He earned $43,200, which was more than enough to solidify his position among the top 125 money winners for the year.

It was three months later at The Woodlands in the Houston Coca-Cola Open when he shot three straight 68s to edge Buddy Gardner by one stroke and gain the victory.

He said of his triumph, "When the year started, the top 125 for my exemption was my goal. This is a pleasant surprise. I wasn't sure I could win so soon."

The first time he attempted to obtain his PGA TOUR card was in the Fall of 1982, but he didn't make it. In the Fall of 1983, he tied for seventh.

"I wouldn't want to go through that again," he said. "The pressure is unbelievable. I worked 18 years on my game, but I only had six days to prove I belonged on the TOUR."

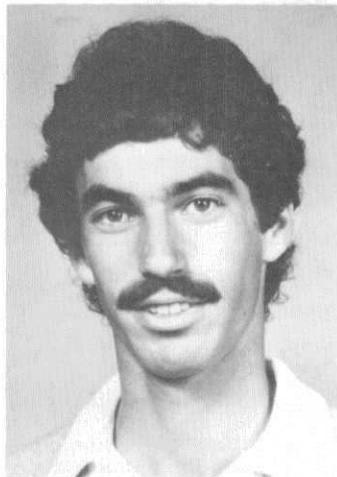

Corey started in the game at age eight and it wasn't long before he was receiving his first taste of competition. It was in 1977 that he won his first two important titles. As a 17-year old, he captured the Junior World crown and also became the youngest ever to win the Los Angeles City Men's Amateur.

He was very successful during his years at UCLA, winning 11 tournaments including the PAC-10 championship in 1982. He also received the Fred Haskins award as the outstanding collegiate player that year.

When Corey failed to get his TOUR card in his first attempt, he took his golf game overseas in 1983. He was successful, to say the least. He won the South African Open, the German Open and the Calberson Classic in France. Incidentally, he wasn't able to defend his German Open title last year. The victory in Houston qualified him for the World Series of Golf the same weekend.

He finished his European swing with more than $75,000 in earnings.

Now, he was ready for the PGA TOUR, and he says life on the TOUR is about what he expected. "I had a good taste of the travelling part of it when I was overseas, and I did play in the Los Angeles Open twice as an amateur."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1983 Ryder Cup team. 1982 and 1983 USA team vs. Japan. Winner, 1983 Ben Hogan Award. Winner 1984 Vardon Trophy.

The Calvin Peete story continues in its own beautiful way. There are few in any sport more inspirational than this one. His performances on-and-off the courses have elevated him to the very top in his profession.

He has won eight times in the last six years — four of the victories coming in a brilliant 1982 season. He has been the leader in such statistics as driving accuracy and hitting greens in regulation almost from the beginning of the program. He was a member of the 1983 Ryder Cup team, and twice has represented Uncle Sam in the U.S. vs. Japan matches.

He won the Golf Writers' Ben Hogan award in 1983. It goes annually to the individual who has to overcome a physical handicap or illness to play the game. As a youngster, Calvin suffered a broken left elbow and even today, he cannot extend the arm. So much for golf's straight-left arm principle.

Last Fall, when Calvin won the Texas Open in San Antonio, he had two rounds of 67 and two rounds of 66. It assured him of his first Vardon Trophy for low stroke average — 70.56.

He said, "Winning the Vardon would be like winning a tournament to me, so today, I feel as if I've won twice."

Born in Detroit, Mich., Calvin spent most of his life on a Florida farm with his 18 brothers and sisters — through two marriages by his father. He was forced to drop out of school at an early age.

"Like so many black families," Peete said, "most of us kids had to get jobs as soon as we were old enough to work so we could help out with the expenses."

While still a teenager, Peete got into the business of selling goods to migrant farm workers. The field hands had little chance of getting into the city stores, so Peete would pack clothes, rings, watches, jewelry and anything else he could squeeze into his station wagon and take off. Wherever the migrant workers went, Peete was not far behind. From Florida it was a series of selling stops along dusty roads as far north as Rochester, N.Y.

Peete had friends in Rochester, and each year his buddies would invite him to play golf.

"I always turned them down," Peete said. "I thought the game was silly. Who wants to chase a little ball around under the hot sun?"

Finally, in 1966 when he was 23 years old, Calvin tried the game with his friends and he was hooked. He recalls: "Just about that same time I saw a tournament on television and learned that Jack Nicklaus was making around $200,000 a year chasing that ball. I figured I could be happy with one-third that amount, so I decided to give it a try."

Peete improved rapidly and he began to play in amateur tournaments wherever he could. Eventually he entered the PGA TOUR's Qualifying School. Like so many others, Peete failed on his first try. And the second. But he made it the third time, in the Spring of 1975.

Some players take longer than others to develop on the PGA TOUR and it would appear as if Mark Pfeil is one of those. When he won the 1980 Tallahassee Open and earned $52,704 for the year, it was a big step. That was more money than he had won during his first four years on TOUR combined.

Although his money total slipped in 1981, he has been getting better and better ever since and has reached the stage where he is expected to be a consistent money winner for years.

He accumulated $85,477 in 1983 on the regular TOUR, and added another $36,000 when he won the Anderson-Pacific Classic on the Tournament Players Series tour in Sacramento.

He nearly won again in the Texas Open in San Antonio, but Jim Colbert simply was too strong for everyone that week. However, Mark had back-to-back 63s for the middle two rounds, and the 126 total represented the lowest 36 holes on TOUR all year. He finished second.

Last year, he continued his upward climb. He won a career-high $101,878 with his three big money finishes being a tie for third in the Canadian Open, tie for fourth in the Colonial National Invitation and a tie for sixth in the Panasonic-Las Vegas Invitational.

Pfeil comes from good golfing stock. Both of his parents are fine players and it was with them, at the Palos Verdes Country Club, that Pfeil first started to play the game at age 10. Over the years, Bud Oakley at the Palos Verdes Club has been his primary teacher.

Mark played little competitive golf as a junior, but at Palos Verdes High he made rapid progress and, in his junior year, won the California Interscholastic Federation title. After two years at El Camino Junior College, he moved on to Southern Cal where he achieved All-America honors twice. He captained the Trojans in 1974 and won such titles as the Pacific Coast Amateur twice and the Southern California Amateur.

He turned professional in 1974 and graduated from the Fall, 1975, Qualifying School. After earning less than $500, he returned to the Q-School in Fall, 1976 and regained his card. He has been a pleasant addition to the TOUR scene ever since.

Winner, 1980 Chile Open, 1984 Johnnie Walker tournament (Spain).

As long as the game is played, the name Gary Player will be listed with the greats. He has compiled a brilliant record all over the globe during his three decades as an international competitor, but even more important, he is known everywhere as one of the finest gentlemen in all of sports.

One has to wonder what sort of record he would have compiled in the United States if he had chosen to play the PGA TOUR full-time for the last quarter-century.

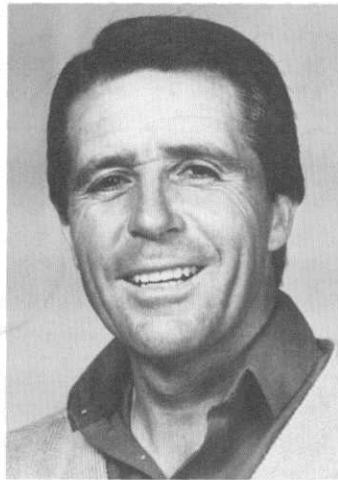

The figures probably would have been staggering. Stopping off between flights to other tournaments around the world, he managed to win 21 times and collect nearly $1.8 million in earnings. He has won 127 times worldwide, including the Open championship of his South Africa homeland 13 times.

His love for his native land and his family, though, made it far more important for him to keep his roots there rather than move elsewhere in search of additional fame and glory. He was one of the original inductees into the World Golf Hall of Fame at Pinehurst.

He has won the Masters Tournament and the British Open each three times. He has won the PGA Championship twice and in 1965, captured the United States Open.

He showed the world how well he still plays at the PGA Championship at Shoal Creek, AL last August. He shot a tournament record nine-under par 63 in the second round to tie for the lead. He battled Lee Trevino and Lanny Wadkins the rest of the way and finally finished tied for second with Wadkins as Trevino came on to win.

He admits that he is looking forward to competing on the Senior PGA TOUR, but meanwhile, he thoroughly enjoys playing against the younger stars. He hasn't changed his style, though. He still plays every shot as meticulously as his first tee shot of the day.

Dan Pohl has established himself as one of the longest hitters on the PGA TOUR, but he also is getting a reputation for being able to play well in some of the more significant championships.

For example, he was third in the 1981 PGA Championship and in 1982, lost the Masters Tournament in a playoff to Craig Stadler and also tied for third in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach in 1983.

By any measuring stick, last year was his best. He won far more money than ever before; his stroke average was down and his consistency permitted him to survive more cuts than ever before. "And best of all," he said, "I was healthy all year."

As for his length off the tee, Dan was the TOUR leader the first two years such statistics were kept, but in 1982, he relinquished the title to free-swinging Bill Calfee, 275.3 yards to 274.6. In Dan's best year, he averaged 280.1 in 1981. He finished sixth in 1983 at 271.2 per drive.

"I know it would be even better than that," he says, "if I could use the driver off every tee on the measured holes. Sometimes, I have to back off to the three wood or one iron."

His zest for power made him an outstanding baseball hitter for Mt. Pleasant High in Michigan, although he was a pitcher. When he first started to play golf, he continued to swing viciously, but soon realized it also was important to keep the ball on the course, somewhere.

Although he started in the game at age five, baseball and basketball were his first loves. He was so competitive, though, that he wanted to play everything. He played four years of high school golf, and had improved enough by his senior year that "Steve Robbins, my high school coach, wrote to several colleges. Arizona responded, so that was where I went."

Even today, he credits Robbins and Arizona coach John Gibson with helping him the most.

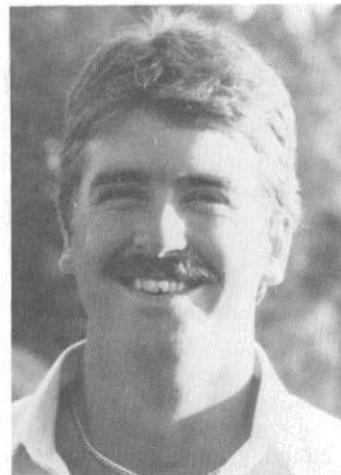

He earned his TOUR card on his second attempt, in June of 1978, but the following 12 months profited him only $1,047. He went back to the school in June of 1979 and regained his playing privileges.

With new vigor, he attempted to qualify for the Canadian Open and Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic, but could gain only alternate status. He didn't get in either one.

The next week, he qualified for the Western Open, and suddenly, he was in the spotlight. With three holes to play on Sunday afternoon at the Butler National Golf Club, Dan Pohl was in the lead.

"I had played solid all day," he said, "but you can't believe how pumped up I was. I thought I was putting good swings on it, but the ball started to act like it was shot out of a cannon. I hit every approach shot over the greens on the last three, and bogeyed each one of them."

He tied for third, only one stroke out of the Larry Nelson-Ben Crenshaw playoff, won by Nelson. Nevertheless, he won $17,400, and he was here to stay.

The Don Pooley story is an interesting one. It shows what a person can do who is willing to work at his profession and, as he says, also have a faithful God.

After suffering through a miserable year in 1979, winning only $6,932 due mainly to muscle spasms in his back and tendonitis in his left hand, he rebounded with a $157,973 year in 1980. The improvement of $151,041 was the biggest jump on TOUR that year.

The next two years were good ones for Don, even if not as profitable as in 1980, but he was rolling again in 1983, collecting nearly $146,000. His best opportunity for victory came in the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic, where he tied for second after Calvin Peete shot a last-round 63 to win it.

One of these years, he figures to win in Atlanta, because he was second again last year, this time to Tom Kite. He also played very well in the Isuzu-Andy Williams-San Diego Open, finishing in a tie for third place, just one stroke out of a playoff.

"Last year was just the opposite of 1983," he said. "I struck the ball poorly, but I putted very well and I can't tell you why."

A swing change in recent years has added to his length off the tee. "The change helped with my release and I draw the ball now instead of fading it."

Early in 1983, he went 22-straight rounds without being over par, and that was the best streak on TOUR. It enabled him to challenge for the coveted Vardon Trophy for low stroke average.

Looking back to 1979, the first step to success came in November and December. Feeling better physically, he entered mini-tour events in Phoenix and won two of them. He played well enough in the others to collect $12,000.

His wife Margaret was to have a baby early in January, so he skipped the first month of the 1980 TOUR. He tried to qualify for the Bing Crosby, and did not make it. He tried again the next week for the Hawaiian Open, and was second alternate. On Tuesday night, while at home in Tucson, he received a call from the Island, that he was in. Without a practice round, Don tied for 14th, won $6,063 and was on his way to the banner year.

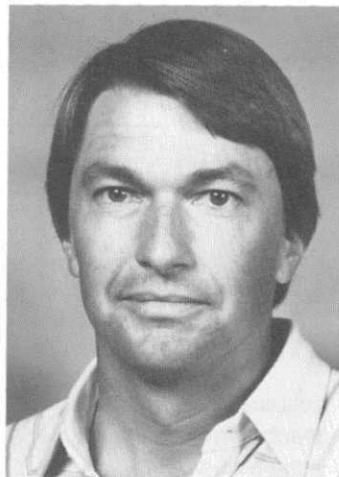

"I made some changes in my set-up to a more open stance," he said, "and in my putting, to be more erect, but winning $100,000 never entered my mind back then."

The victory he wanted came at the B.C. Open in late August. He was tied with Lee Trevino at 10-under par 203 after three, and his closing 68 gave him a one-stroke margin over Peter Jacobsen, and Trevino slipped into a tie for third.

Don says he has been playing golf for as long as he can remember. He received his first set of clubs on his seventh birthday. His father was — and still is — an avid golfer and they play in father-son events at Victoria Country Club in Riverside, Calif.

He improved at each level of competition, and was the No. 1 man on his Riverside High School team and then played No. 1 on the University of Arizona team.

He played the mini-tours for a while after college, and it wasn't until his third attempt at the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1975, that he obtained his card.

Nick Price was extremely impressed with everything he saw when he arrived at the Firestone Country Club for the 1983 World Series of Golf. He qualified as the leader on the South African Order of Merit.

"I've watched the World Series on television back home and I always thought this would be a great place to play," he said.

As his first round started, he parred the first and second holes, but bogeyed the third and fourth, missing the greens in each case. "At that point, I was just trying to hold the round together. I told myself to be patient and work on each shot."

What happened from that point on was, he not only held the round together, but he neatly put his entire golf career together.

Nick birdied the sixth hole that day, and then birdied five of the first seven holes on the second nine for a 36-30—66. He was in the lead by one stroke over Jack Nicklaus and Bobby Clampett. And, that's where he stayed the rest of the week, winning by four strokes over Nicklaus with a 10-under par 270.

The victory was worth $100,000, but more important, it gave him a 10-year exemption for all PGA TOUR co-sponsored events. Since he qualified for the World Series by virtue of his play on the South African Tour earlier in the year, his $100,000 did not count in official earnings. Thus, his record only shows $49,435 won last year.

As he said later, "The exemption means everything. The money is just icing on the cake. I feel fantastic. I can't believe it was that easy to win."

Last year was Nick's second on the PGA TOUR and he made it a good one, even though he did not win. He'll tell you the Canadian Open was the one that got away. After rounds of 67 and 67, he was leading by six strokes and, even after a 73 the third day, he still was in front by four. However, Greg Norman came on strong to win, and Nick finished in a tie for third place.

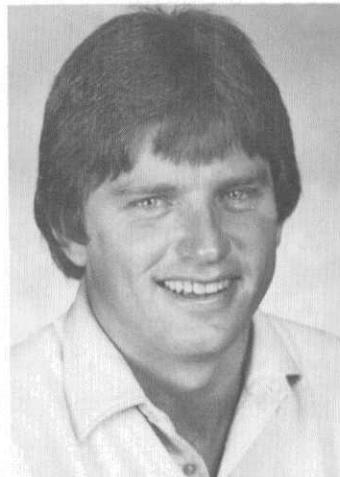

Nick started in the game as an eight-year old caddy for his brother in Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe). He progressed rapidly as a player, and by the time he was 17, he had an invitation to compete in the Junior World tournament at Torrey Pines in LaJolla, CA. "Everyone said I should go," he recalls, "so my mother and brother paid my way. They figured that if I didn't do well, I would get competitive golf out of my system."

He fooled them. He not only played well, but he won. "From that point on, they were behind me 100 per cent," Nick said.

He played on the South Africa and the European Tour as an amateur in 1975, and then went into the Rhodesian Air Force for the next two years. He was out in time to play on the South African Tour as a professional in the Fall of 1977. The next year, he was second in the Dutch Open.

In 1980, he said his game "took off." He won the Swiss Open and the South African Masters and finished second in four other South African events.

His greatest disappointment came at Royal Troon in Scotland in the 1982 British Open. He led by three strokes with six holes to play but dropped four shots on his way to the clubhouse, letting Tom Watson slip in with the victory.

Tom Purtzer will tell you that no matter what else he accomplishes in the game, it isn't likely to give the satisfaction he experienced when he won the 1984 Phoenix Open.

He has spent most of his life in the Phoenix area and through the final round at the Phoenix Country Club, there wasn't any doubt about who most of the thousands in the gallery wanted to win.

He won in rather spectacular fashion, too. On the par 5 18th hole, he put his second shot into a bunker on the right, but he played a brilliant explosion shot. The ball stopped about two feet from the cup. He made the putt for a birdie and a one-stroke victory over Corey Pavin.

It gave Tom a six-under par 65 for the sunny afternoon and a total of 16-under par 268.

It paved the way for his sixth straight $100,000-plus year, although he says 1984 basically was a rebuilding year. "I had developed some bad habits," he said, "such as sliding over the ball instead of turning. I spent most of the year working on it."

One of the longest drivers on TOUR, he has averaged well over 270 yards through each of the last four seasons. Over the years, some of his finest performances have been on the more difficult courses.

His first victory was at Riviera, for example, in the 1977 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open.

Tom got an early start in golf because his father, Horace, enjoyed the game.

"Dad was a good golfer," Purtzer said, in recalling his own background in the game. "I guess he was a two or a three handicapper when I was very young. He wanted both of his sons to play the game and Paul and I were given cut-down clubs. We started hitting the ball, I guess, when we were eight or nine.

"Meanwhile, I liked baseball and football and played both. When I got to high school I gave up baseball. I played high school football and then concentrated on golf."

Purtzer continued to play golf for Arizona State and became one of the better collegiate players. He also won both the Arizona State amateur title and the Southwest Open in 1972.

The next year, 1973, Tom won the Broadmoor Men's Invitational and also was named to the All-America Collegiate golf team. He turned pro not long after being graduated with a business degree.

Tom failed to earn his playing privileges at the PGA TOUR's Qualifying School twice. He recalls: "The first time was only by two shots but the second was by a bunch."

Sammy Rachels believes he has the greatest job in the world. "I don't think I could find an easier, more fun way to make a living," he will tell you.

He had reason to be happy after 1983. He pocketed $75,238, and that nearly equaled the total amount he won through his first eight years on the PGA TOUR.

With Sammy, it usually depends on the condition of his back. He has had four back operations, the last one in the Spring of 1982. With a smile, the good-natured Rachels says, "I always wanted to have some sort of TOUR record, and now I have one. I doubt if anyone will ever top me."

The problem is chronic. "It runs in the family," he said. "I even had a lot of trouble when I was in high school. It's a mystery back. Three times, I've had a ruptured disc.

"I've been resigned to the fact that I can't play on the TOUR because of it," he said, "but I keep coming back. I can get by for 15 weeks on a budget of $15,000 or less."

He travels in a camper-topped truck, mainly because he can sleep more comfortably in the back end of it than he can on a motel bed.

"I'm not what you would call a good, steady player," he says, "but when I have a good week, I feel I can play with anyone. I can compete well enough to satisfy myself."

In 1983, he tied for second twice, in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic and the Bank of Boston Classic. He finished sixth in the U.S. Open at Merion in 1981, and was third another year in the Houston Open.

Those were weeks when he might have won, but he doesn't look at it that way. "How can I be disappointed?", he added, "when they pay you close to $30,000 for finishing second."

This past year was an unusual one. He missed nearly four months of the mid-season schedule because of two freak accidents, neither concerning his back. In one, while hiking in the mountains, he was trying to ford a swift stream and was swept off his feet. The result was two cracked ribs. In another, he flipped on his motorcycle and skidded 153 feet down the road. The result, a couple of broken bones in his left hand — plus numerous scratches and bruises.

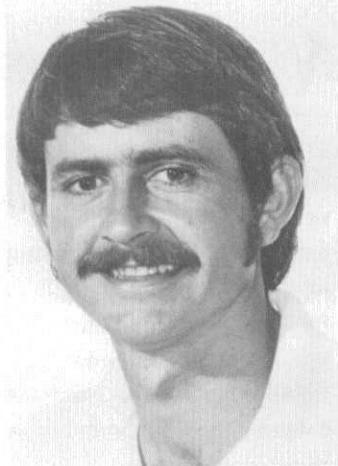

With a laugh, he said, "scratch out motorcycles as a special interest. I've had enough."

Sammy started to play golf at age 14 on the nine-hole course in DeFuniak Springs, FL. His mother was — and still is — a good player. He received his first set of clubs when he was 16-years old. He played through high school and then at Chipola Junior College. "In those days, I didn't know what professional golf was," he admits.

He moved on to Columbus (GA) College and it was there that he started to think about making a living in the game.

He entered the Qualifying School in 1973 but had to withdraw on the morning of the first round because of his back. The next year, he had to withdraw after nine holes. In 1975, he was able to play and he made it.

Now, he says, "I'm not the ball striker I used to be, but I'm a much better player."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner, 1970 Mexican Amateur, 1972 and 1978 Mexican PGA, 1973 Mexican Masters. Member 1968 and 1970 Mexican World Amateur Cup team, 1973, 1978, 1979, 1982 and 1983 Mexico World Cup team.

Victor Regalado continues to search for the secret that will permit him to play more consistent golf. He made a slight swing change late in 1982 and it helped in 1983, but last year, he said he developed problems with his putting.

"I've always had a tendency to swing too fast," he said, recalling the work he did late in 1982. "I worked to slow it down and it helped a lot the next year. I made more cuts than I had been making."

Last year, his consistency slipped again, but he said it was due mainly to his putting. "It really hurt me," he said. I've been hitting better shots the last couple of years, but I can't make anything when I get on the green. My problem has been a tendency to move my head, looking up too much."

His best effort in 1984 came in the PGA Championship at Shoal Creek, AL. He was only one stroke out of the lead after the first and second rounds, but a 73-70 finish dropped him into a tie for 10th place.

In the Seiko-Tucson Match Play, he won his first four matches before bowing to Tom Kite, one-up in the fifth round.

During the recent years, Victor has received considerable help from Phil Rodgers, the former TOUR winner who is highly-regarded for his ability to help others.

Victor grew up in Tijuana, Mexico, two blocks from the Tijuana Country Club and started in golf at age 11. The first tournament he entered was the Pan-American Juniors at his course and he won it at age 14.

The most impressive of his early titles throughout Central America were the Mexican Amateur in 1970, the Mexican PGA in 1972 and the Mexican Masters in 1972 and 1973. He represented Mexico in the World Amateur Team Championships of 1968 and 1970, the latter year winning the individual title in Spain. He also represented his country in the World Cup tournaments.

As a PGA TOUR rookie in 1973, Regalado played with negligible results, but in 1974 he won the Pleasant Valley Classic and it appeared he would join the handful of foreign superstars playing here. However, early in 1975, he injured his right thumb. "I couldn't practice for six months, but I kept trying to play," Victor recalled.

He added another victory in the 1978 Ed McMahon-Quad Cities Open. He nearly won there again in 1981, but lost in a playoff to Dave Barr.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 6—driving accuracy (.726).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1976 Western Athletic Conference champion. Winner, 1976 Pacific Coast Amateur Collegiate All-America 1974, 1975. Low Amateur, 1976 U.S. Open. 1980 Member, U.S. World Cup Team. Teamed with Bob Goalby to win 1983 Shootout at Jeremy Ranch in Park City, UT (Senior PGA TOUR event).

Mike Reid enjoyed a rare treat in August of 1983 when he teamed with Bob Goalby for the Shootout at Jeremy Ranch in Park City, UT. This was a Senior PGA TOUR event, and the elder statesmen of the links were to choose a player from the regular TOUR.

Well, Mike and Bob teamed perfectly and they won by a stroke over the Billy Casper-Jim Nelford combination. While Mike collected $99,135 in official money on the regular TOUR, he added another $25,000 from the Shootout.

It was a privilege, you see, because this soft-spoken young man has been considered one of the finest players in the game without an official victory. Like Calvin Peete, Mike's key to success is keeping the ball in play and hitting a lot of greens.

He believes he can play well on any type of course, and he tries to model his game after the likes of Billy Casper, and Gene Littler. "Week after week," he said, "when they were playing well, they always finished up high."

Even though victory eluded him again last year, it was a good one and twice he finished in a tie for third place. "I kind of re-established my consistency," he said. "When I was on the verge of winning, I would do some uncharacteristic thing, but when I look back at those tournaments, I know I hit a lot of fairways and greens. So, I know I'm on the right track."

Mike's father was a Colonel in the Air Force when he retired, but during his growing-up days, Mike was in many different cities. At an early age, he realized golf was a game he could play alone, and it was a game that gave him something in common with others no matter where they lived.

His older brother, Bill, is head professional at the Tournament Players Club at Plum Creek, south of Denver, CO, and has been Mike's biggest teacher. He also credits the John Geerstens, Senior and Junior, at Monterey Peninsula Country Club with assisting him.

Mike went to Brigham Young University, and was a teammate of Mike Brannan, Jim Nelford, John Fought and Pat McGowan. The first time he attempted to get his TOUR card, he made it, in the Fall of 1976. He progressed up the ladder the next three years, and his closest bout with victory was in the 1978 Pensacola Open. He lost in a playoff to Mac McLendon.

In December of 1979, he took a major step. He was married, and ever since, he has said that Randolyn has played an important role in his success. Since then two daughters have been added to the close-knit family.

Jack Renner has enjoyed success all through his golf career, and one of the reasons is because he always has set lofty goals, and then worked tirelessly to meet them.

In 1981, he was having what he considered his most consistent year on TOUR as he headed for the Pleasant Valley-Jimmy Fund Classic. "I told my Dad that unless I won, though, people would think I was having a mediocre year."

A few days later, he had his victory, the second of his six-year career as he edged Scott Simpson by two strokes.

In the 1983 Hawaiian Open, he thought he had won for the third time on TOUR. He was one-stroke ahead of Isao Aoki of Japan as he sat in the scoring tent, checking his card. Aoki was in the left rough on the par five 18th hole, some 128 yards from the flagstick.

Then Jack heard the tremendous roar. "At first, I thought he must have hit it close, and if he made the putt for a birdie, we would have a playoff." Instead, Aoki HOLED the pitching wedge shot for an eagle and the victory.

Last year, Jack had his reward in the Hawaiian Open. He birdied four of the last seven holes—including the 18th—at the Waialae Country Club to tie Wayne Levi, and then won the title in a playoff. The next week, he was second in the Los Angeles Open and went on to his best money year, earning $260,153.

He started on TOUR as a 20-year old and his first victory came in the 1977 Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Classic. His performances slipped slightly in 1980 after suffering mononucleosis early in the year. It was several months before he regained his full strength.

Jack is easily identified. Rail thin, he always wears a white cap, similar to the type Ben Hogan wore for years. However, Jack says he has always worn that style because it is lightweight, comfortable, and during his years of growing up around Palm Springs, "I needed something to protect my head from the sun."

As a youngster, he was the king of the junior tournaments in the San Diego area. He won such titles as the 1972 World Junior and the 1973 United States Junior. His short game always has been excellent, and he believes he refined it by playing so many par three courses as a youth.

During his school days, he chose not to play varsity golf because he felt he could progress more rapidly by working on his own game, rather than spending the time travelling to matches.

The Renners are an avid golf family. Sister Jane has been a part of the LPGA Tour and younger brother Jim is a professional. When one of them needs help, they seek out a member of the family.

Larry Rinker may have been the happiest runner-up on the PGA TOUR last year. He finished in that position to Bob Eastwood in the USF&G Classic in New Orleans.

"When the year started," he revealed, "I set a goal of winning at least $45,000 for the year and making the list of top 125 money winners for my exemption. I accomplished that here today."

He collected $43,200 in New Orleans, giving him more than $54,000 at that point of the season and went on to have a splendid year, winning well over $100,000.

He finished strong at the USF&G, shooting a final-round 68 and that was a little unusual for him. He had been playing well all year — until the last day when a high number would knock him down the list.

Going into the final 18 at the Lakewood Country Club, he told himself, "Laura (his sister on the LPGA Tour) has had a couple of second-place finishes, and if she can do it, so can I." Laura, incidentally, came on to win an event last year, an effort that delighted Larry.

The Rinkers have quite a golfing family. His brother Lee played on the TOJR last year. Kelli, who is the wife of his older brother Laine, also is on the LPGA Tour with Laura.

"We work with each other," Larry said. "We've all worked with Bob Toski and we all have a good knowledge of the game. We trade off ideas and pull for each other."

Larry started in the game at age six when his brother Laine started to take him to junior clinics. He played in his first Florida State junior tournament at age 12. He played through high school and at the University of Florida.

He then made an effort to obtain his PGA TOUR card, but didn't make it until his fourth try in the Spring of 1981. In the meantime, he played the mini-tours, and it was during the 1980 season, when he won six times, that he felt his game finally might be ready.

He admits he didn't play well during his first year on TOUR. His first national exposure came during the 1982 U. S. Open at Pebble Beach. "I didn't fall apart," he said. "I played well and the last day, I played the last four holes in two-under par to tie for 15th place. That got me into the 1983 Masters."

He had a reasonably good year in 1983, but he played the final six holes in the Walt Disney World Classic in three-over par and dropped out of the top 125. He went back to the Qualifying School in the fall to try and improve his position and he finished in a tie for 39th.

"I shot a 71 the last day at the Player's Club," he pointed out, "and made it by one stroke. That was a turning point."

It was a few weeks later when he set his goals for 1984.

After Loren Roberts put together four solid rounds in the Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic, and finally finished in a tie for 10th place, he was convinced he belonged on the PGA TOUR.

Two months later at the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic, after leading the tournament through the first three rounds, he not only knew he belonged, but was convinced winning was possible.

It wasn't his week to win, as a final-round 76 dropped him into a tie for fifth place. Nevertheless, his confidence level suddenly was moving onto a higher plateau.

When Loren first came out on the TOUR in 1981, he did so with little tournament experience. He has had to learn the hard way and it has been costly. He lost his playing privileges after the 1981 and 1983 seasons.

"I went to the Qualifying School six times, and I've succeeded at three of them," he said. "Now, I hope I never have to go through it again. It takes awhile on the TOUR to learn how to play your own game; to stay within yourself. There's also the intimidation factor, suddenly playing with and against all the players you've read about for years."

Loren didn't start to play the game seriously until he was about 16 years old. He played a lot of tennis and baseball in high school in San Luis Obispo, CA, but the golf coach convinced him to concentrate on golf.

He went on to Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo and played two years of varsity golf. Then, the school dropped the program.

"That's when I started to work as an assistant pro at the San Luis Obispo Country Club," he said. "I didn't really decide to become a golf professional; it just sort of happened."

In 1977 and 1978, he went to Australia for several weeks to play the tour down under and gained valuable experience.

With a grin, he said, "That's when I started knocking my head against the wall. I went to the first Qualifying School in the Spring of 1979, and I didn't make it. But, I kept going back."

Winner 1981 New South Wales Open, Australia, and 1981 Australian Open.

Through most of his golfing career, enthusiasm for the game has been one of the strong points for Bill Rogers. Not so, the last couple of years, he says, "but I'm going to have to get the old desire back if I want to start playing really well again."

He had it for a couple of weeks in 1983, and he tied for third in the Bay Hill Classic and went on to win the USF&G Classic in New Orleans the next. "I had a very positive attitude about everything those weeks," the popular Rogers said. "It was never the same after that."

Last year was his poorest since 1976, "I suffered from a case of the burn-outs," he said. "I needed some time off and I took it this past year."

Even in his fondest dreams, it would have been difficult for Bill to picture himself having a year such as 1981 and being named PGA Player-of-the-Year.

Winner of the World Series of Golf, the Heritage Classic and the Texas Open on TOUR, plus the British Open, Japan's Suntory Open and New South Wales Open in Australia; Rogers was dazzling once he got his act together starting with the Tournament Players Championship.

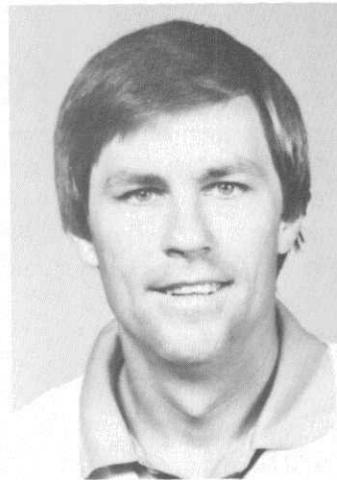

The year had a strange beginning. He was seventh in the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open and fourth in the Bob Hope Desert Classic. Then his game nearly fell apart. He missed cuts in five of his next six starts. He only tied for 51st in the TPC, but it was there, at Sawgrass, that he could see his game taking shape again. Indeed it did, because he won the Heritage Classic the next week.

Always an aggressive player, he never could figure out why he didn't win more. Through his first six years, his only triumph was in the 1978 Bob Hope Desert Classic.

Bill started to play the game at age nine in Montgomery, AL, and was playing competitively by the time he was 13 and the family was living in Texarkana, Texas. Although his father and brother started him, it was Jerry Robinson, professional at Northridge Country Club in Texarkana, who taught him the fine points of the game.

While attending the University of Houston, he was a roommate of Bruce Lietzke and the latter nicknamed him the "Panther." As Bill recalls, "I was the jumpy type. I never wanted to miss anything and I still don't, but I have slowed down some."

Bill's father was a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force and from age three to six, he lived in Germany; from age six through eight, he lived in Morocco, North Africa. "Dad retired as a colonel and he still is a good player. He played in a lot of major Air Force tournaments when he was in the service."

1984 STATISTIC: 29—driving distance (267.0).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1979 North Carolina Amateur, was quarter-finalist in U.S. Amateur in 1980, All-American in 1980.

Clarence Rose has been making steady progress since he joined the PGA TOUR in the Spring of 1981 and believes his higher level of patience has led to better course management.

The result is he has improved his money winnings each season. "I had a couple of chances to win," he said of 1984. "My game is becoming more consistent. I know I'm going in the right direction."

As an example, on the tough Glen Abbey course in the Canadian Open, he had the best finish of his blossoming career, a tie for fifth place. He shot rounds of 71, 70, 72 and 71.

He has shown an ability to play the more difficult courses well. Two years ago, he tied for sixth place in the Western Open on the rugged Butler National layout and that was after bogeys on each of the last two holes. "I guess I was thinking about the money," he said of the experience, "and I've learned you can't do that."

Regarding course management, he said, "I do try to go for birdies and I make a lot of them, but I'm also trying to cut back on my mistakes." He has had well over 300 birdies in each of the last two years.

He's also one of the longer drivers on TOUR. Two years ago in the Byron Nelson Classic, he had a wind-aided sock of 392 yards off the tee, and it was the longest-measured drive of the year.

Clarence's father was a "very good golfer," and he started him at about age 2. "I played baseball all the time, but once I started into golf, that ended my days in baseball," he said.

He won his first junior tournament at age 14, the North Carolina State Jaycees. He went on to win the North Carolina State Amateur, too.

He gained All-American status while at Clemson and in June of 1981, he tried the PGA TOUR School. He made it easily, gaining a tie for fourth at Walt Disney World. "My last year at Clemson," he said, "I started to think about the possibility of being on the TOUR. I knew that's what I wanted, so I left school and spent about eight months just getting ready for it."

Until he started on TOUR, he played from right to left, but he changed his game over and now favors the fade.

He constantly checks his weekly statistics, and through those numbers, he believes he is better able to diagnose his strengths and weaknesses.

Tony Sills

EXEMPT STATUS: 72nd on 1984 money list.

FULL NAME: Anthony Irvin Sills

BIRTH DATE: December 5, 1955 BIRTHPLACE: Los Angeles, CA

RESIDENCE: Los Angeles, CA

COLLEGE: University of Southern California

SPECIAL INTERESTS: Running, weightlifting, basketball.

TURNED PROFESSIONAL: 1980 Q SCHOOL: Fall, 1982

CAREER EARNINGS: $137,544

BEST-EVER FINISH: 3—1983 Texas Open.

MONEY & POSITION: 1983 — $47,488 — 104 1984 — $90,055 — 72

BEST 1984 FINISHES: T4—Colonial National Invitation; T7—LaJet Classic; T10—Doral-Eastern Open.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—33; in money—23; top ten finishes—3; stroke avg.—72.46.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 29—driving accuracy (.685).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1971 Los Angeles City Junior title; 1976 Southern California Amateur; 1981 Queen Mary Open; 1982 Coors (Kansas) Open.

If there ever was an award given for perseverance, surely Tony Sills would be a prime candidate.

He attempted to qualify for the PGA TOUR six times before he made it at the Tournament Players Club in the Fall of 1982. Twice, he remembers vividly, he missed in the finals by two shots. "That just told me I wasn't ready," he says.

"All through those years," he continued, "I was living on a dream. Playing on the TOUR was something I knew I was going to do. Now, I know dreams do come true."

Even his first year should serve as a lesson for those who are easily discouraged. Tony tied for 30th place in his first start, the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open. That was a great week because he is from Los Angeles, so many of his pals were there to see him perform.

In his next 10 tournaments, through the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic, he failed to survive the 36-hole cut. There he was, through the first of June and with only one paycheck to show for his efforts.

In his last 15 starts, though, he only missed three times and it was the third-place finish in the Texas Open that assured him of a position among the leading 125 money winners. He had rounds of 67, 64, 69 and 67.

Last year he was very successful. He doubled his earnings even though he says he was not 100% physically due to an operation in the Fall of 1983. "I have to get my body stronger," he says, "and that's why I put a $7,000 gym in my home."

What he has had to go through to reach this level, borders on the incredible.

His first exposure to the game was as a five-year old. "My father started to play for health reasons. The doctor encouraged him because of the exercise he needed, so I started to follow him around."

He entered junior competition at age 11, and then played through high school, junior college and finally at the University of Southern California.

During those years when he was attempting to get on the TOUR, he said, "I had a lot of different jobs. I stayed at home with my parents to keep expenses down, but I did everything from delivering pizzas to grinding clubs in Jerry Barber's golf factory.

"I even worked for a beer distributor, but my best job was at the Los Angeles Country Club. I worked part time on the driving range, so that I could have a half day to practice. During those years, I lived on practically nothing money-wise. I was determined to see this thing through."

He has had to overcome serious physical problems even to play the game, so serious, in fact, that many others would have turned and gone in another direction.

When he is playing well, he prefers a slight draw. "I'm not long off the tee," he said, "but I've always been pretty accurate. My putting needs to improve and it has improved."

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: 1971 Walker Cup team. 1971, 1972 Collegiate All-American. 1971, 1972, low amateur, U.S. Open. Player Director on PGA TOUR Policy Board, 1981-1983.

There are two sides to the Jim Simons story. While he has enjoyed fine success on the PGA TOUR, winning three times through the 1984 campaign, a new career continues to blossom.

He also is a second vice-president and financial consultant with Shearson/Lehman/American Express and since 1980, has been spending more and more time in the brokerage business. He has specialized in managed money, using the best people in a particular product area. The majority of his time now is spent studying equity fund managers and computerized managed commodity programs.

His two most productive years on the TOUR came in 1981 and 1982 when he earned more than $100,000 each year and one of his more important victories came in 1982 when he overtook Craig Stadler the last day of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am and won by two strokes.

It was there he revealed he is "legally blind" without proper corrective lenses. At the Crosby, he wore two contacts over the left eye — a soft lens against the eye and a hard lens over the soft one — to correct vision and astigmatism.

Jim's initial victory was in the 1977 First NBC-New Orleans Open and then he won the 1978 Memorial Tournament in a rather suspenseful style. Five times in the last seven holes, he saved par with one-putts; and, at the final hole, he made a 21-footer for par to win by one.

He has lost three tournaments in playoffs and one was last year to John Mahaffey in the Bob Hope Classic. A shoulder injury at the Los Angeles Open put him on the sidelines for nearly four months.

Jim Simons will be the first to say that his early years on the PGA TOUR were not up to expectations. He probably won't mention, however, that he was hampered with physical ailments. He had tendinitis in his left wrist, but more painful was his left shoulder which was diagnosed as a "looseness in the joint — a minor dislocation."

Simons was graduated from the Fall 1972 PGA TOUR Qualifying School and did not have an opportunity to compete in many events. During his first year he was in considerable pain, mainly, it developed, because his injury had not yet been diagnosed properly.

Jim's father started him in golf at Butler, Pa., Country Club at the age of nine. He started competition at the age of 13 and his progress was rapid. He first enrolled at the University of Houston but, after a year, transferred to Wake Forest. He was on the 1971 Walker Cup team and remained overseas for the 1971 British Amateur, reaching the final round where he lost to Steve Melnyk.

ner 1979, 1981 Hawaii State Open. Winner 1984 Chunichi Crowns (Japan), Dunlop Phoenix (Japan).

Scott Simpson is one of those players who quietly goes about his business and lets his golf game do the talking. And, when his game starts talking everyone notices.

Such was the case at the Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Classic in June of 1984. Scott stayed close to the lead through the first three rounds and then played one of the great rounds of his career. He shot a six-under par 65 in the heat and humidity and won by five strokes.

It was his only victory of the year, but he played very well for most of the season. "I started a little slow," he said, "and then decided to work on the mental part of the game. At that point, everything started to come together. I was more relaxed on the course."

He felt the breakthrough came in Japan in late April when he won the Chunichi Crowns title. He came back to the U.S. and proceeded to have his finest year by far.

He said his first victory on the TOUR came as something of a surprise. It was on the tough Butler National course in the 1980 Western Open. He took the lead after the second day and never was headed, as he posted four rounds of par or better.

"My game was improving," he recalls, "and I knew if I continued to improve, I eventually would win. All of a sudden, I made the big move and won. Yes, I was surprised."

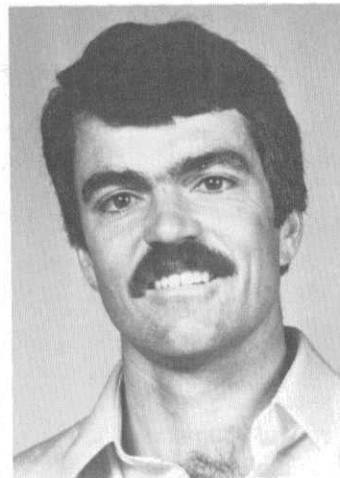

He played exceptionally well in the 1982 Tournament Players Championship, finishing in a tie for second with Brad Bryant, two strokes in back of Jerry Pate. He was one-stroke behind when the last round started, but seemed to fall out of contention with three first nine bogeys the last afternoon. However, he came on very strong to birdie each of the last three holes.

Scott had an excellent amateur record, winning the National Collegiate titles in 1976 and 1977 for the University of Southern California. "It was after I won it the first time that I thought I would make a career in golf, and someday turn professional. I felt if I could win over a field such as that, then maybe I had a chance."

He also won two PAC-8 titles for the Trojans and was a member of Uncle Sam's Walker Cup Team in 1977. He seemed to be a sure thing.

Yet, he met the disappointment that so many young players have had to face, twice failing to make it through the TOUR's tough Qualifying School. He finally made it the third time, in the Fall of 1978.

Scott started in the game as a caddy at age nine for his father, a scratch handicapper in the San Diego area in those days. He was 10 when he entered his first tournament and in the 10-and-under division, Jack Renner was the victor, but Scott tied his brother for fifth. He knew then that he liked the competition.

There is a good reason why Tim Simpson went to play golf for "them Dawgs" at the University of Georgia, because he has a little bit of the bulldog in himself. It is his tenacity, though, that continues to carry him to greater heights in the game.

Those who follow Tim closely will tell you that every part of his game gets better each year and it was evident in 1984 when he enjoyed his most profitable year. "I worked hard on my putting and it finally started to come around," he said of his improved play. "My life is more settled, too. Kathy has made a big difference, giving me new goals, and encouraging me."

He had his best-ever finish last year, a tie for second in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic and a pleasing tie for third in the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Classic before his hometown friends. He shot 68-67 the last two days at the Atlanta Country Club.

"I've been working more on the mental aspects of the game, too," he stated. "I have a more positive outlook and it has given me new confidence."

Tim's father, Jack, started him in the game as a seven-year old, and he went on to win the junior championships of Georgia and Atlanta. "I owe a lot to my father," Tim has said. "He worked hard so I could afford to play and he has always stood behind me. He has been the guiding force in my life. He has helped to give me a more positive outlook."

Another who has helped Tim mold his game in later years has been John Gerring, the head professional at Atlanta Country Club. Art Kraft, Jr., Gardner Dickinson, and Dave Pelz also have offered strong advice.

Tim went to the University of Georgia and earned All-Southeastern Conference and All-American honors. He won the 1976 Southern Amateur, too.

In the Spring of 1977, he earned his Player's card, but only collected $2,778 through the end of that year. He upped it to $38,714 for his first full year in 1978. Although his earnings dropped the next couple of years, it was a case of tendonitis in his left elbow that hindered his progress, but he bounced back with a fine year in 1981.

Still striving for a victory on the TOUR, he did receive a lift when he won the 1981 World Series-25 championship in France. He considers it one of his most satisfying accomplishments in the game.

"There is such a fine line, a very fine line, between being an average player and a great player on TOUR, it's incredible," he said.

Winner of 10 collegiate titles, including 1981 Big Ten championship by 12 strokes. Three-time All-American and named 1981 Ohio State Athlete-of-the-Year.

Joey Sindelar has completed only one year on the PGA TOUR, yet he has demonstrated that he is a special kind of player and young man.

He possesses a tremendous amount of talent. His progress through high school in Horseheads, NY, and through college at Ohio State University and finally his first campaign on the TOUR attest to that fact.

When he talks of his golf game and his goals, he always says, "we." He'll tell you, "We talked it over and decided . . ." The other party in the "we" is his father, the man who first put a club in Joey's hands when he was six-years old. He's still the man Joey goes to when he needs help on almost anything.

"My Dad always stressed that if anything is worth doing, it's worth doing right. He's always been behind everything I've done. When I was playing basketball in high school, and wanted some extra practice, he would make certain we could get in the gym at night."

Joe Sr., a postal employee in Horseheads for 33 years, was a scratch handicapper a few years ago, Joey proudly points out.

Through high school, Joey also knew that if he was going to go to college, it would have to be on a scholarship, so he worked extra hard on his golf game. There were offers, but he decided on Ohio State because "I had met a few of their players when I would go to amateur tournaments, and they were really nice to me. And, I wanted to go somewhere close to home where they played major college football and basketball and had other good programs."

"The fact that Jack Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf and Ed Sneed had played for Ohio State helped to influence me, too," he added with a smile.

He was devastating for the Buckeyes. He won 10 collegiate events and in 1981, he won the Big Ten championship by 12 strokes. He was named Ohio State's Athlete-of-the-Year in 1981.

Along the way, he managed to sweep the New York State titles — Junior, Amateur and Open championships.

The PGA TOUR was his goal, though, and he made it through the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1983, finishing in a tie for third.

He was successful right from the start of 1984 winning nearly $18,000 on the West Coast swing. His first start in Florida was the Honda Classic and he finished fifth, collecting another $20,000.

"What I did in the Honda gave me a big, big thrill," he said. "I had some television time, but it was satisfying to learn I could compete. We felt sure I could, but you never know until the time comes."

He was in position to win at the Bank of Boston Classic. He carried a one-stroke lead over George Archer and Calvin Peete into the last round at Pleasant Valley Country Club — thanks partially to a second-round 64.

He shot an even-par 72, but Archer had a superb 65 to win by six strokes over Joey and Frank Conner.

"It was another step for me and my golf swing," he said later. After a slight pause and with a smile, he added, "The atmosphere of playing in the last group the last afternoon with players such as George and Calvin, well, it was something I won't forget."

Mike Smith spent a few years traveling around the country on the mini-tours in Florida, Georgia, Arizona and other such places. Now, he believes he has found his home on the PGA TOUR—at last.

Using a tie for sixth place in the Byron Nelson Classic in 1984 as the impetus, he went on to finish 116th on the money list and thus earn his first true exemption status.

"I'll be able to start in January," he said, "and I'll feel like a member of the TOUR. I've been playing the TOUR for awhile, but it's been more like being on the outside looking in."

In the Byron Nelson, he opened with a 74 but bounced back with a 67 for a one-under par 141 and was only one-stroke behind the leader, Dave Barr.

Craig Stadler moved well in front the third day, but Mike held in there with a 68 and was alone in second place, four-strokes behind. He had a respectable 72 the last afternoon and pocketed $16,750 for his efforts.

"That tournament turned my whole year around," he said. "It let me know I could play out here." Later in the year, he tied for eighth place in the Bank of Boston Classic.

"I got rid of my duck hook," he said, and that's what led to his improved play. "I could play well for 15 holes but hit duck hooks on the other three and take double bogeys. Now, if anything, I fade the ball."

Mike started to play golf at age 12. "I was visiting my grandmother in the hospital in Selma (AL). When I was coming out, I saw a couple of friends of mine playing golf on the course across the street. So, I went over and asked if I could play along."

He was in his first competition as a 14-year old and went on to win the Alabama State Junior title twice. He also won the State Jaycee Junior title twice and also the Dixie Junior Championship.

Bud Burns, the head professional at Selma Country Club, has helped him the most through the years, but when he went to Brevard College in Florida for two years, Floyd Horgan, the coach there, and John Redman, worked on refining his game.

"After that, I went on the mini-tours," he said. "I tried to get my PGA TOUR card six-or-seven times, but didn't make it until the Spring of 1980."

He added, "I like every course we play on the TOUR, but I suppose Hattiesburg might be my favorite (site of the Magnolia Classic). I've lost twice there in playoffs (to Lance Ten Broeck last year and to Tom Jones in 1982)."

During his early not-so-successful years on the TOUR, he said he spent too much time sightseeing instead of paying attention to his game. Hopefully, he said, that part's behind him now.

J.C. Snead was looking for a fresh start when the 1984 PGA TOUR started to roll. He enjoyed a rather successful year in 1983, going over the century mark in earnings for the sixth time in his fine career, but in 1984, he suffered from low blood sugar, and his performance level dropped.

"I found out about it when we were in the Florida swing," he explained. "The clubs felt heavy in my hands. During the year, I lost 18 pounds."

It was discovered just after he finished third in the Honda Classic, only one stroke out of the Bruce Lietzke-Andy Bean playoff. It was to be his only top 10 finish of the campaign.

Certainly one of the game's more colorful people, J.C. has a reputation of occasionally shying away from interviews, but those who follow the game closely know that once they take a few minutes to chat with him, they will be rewarded with one of the better stories of the day.

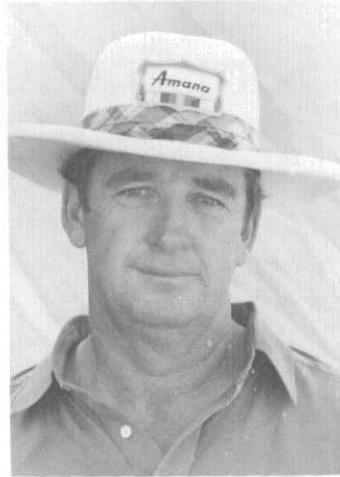

He has a wonderful sense of humor. Several years ago, he decided he wanted to go by his full name, Jesse Carlyle. After a few weeks of not playing well, he informed everyone he was going back to using J. C. because "Jesse Carlyle hasn't been playing worth a damn."

One of his strongest loves is hunting, and he will spend hours in search of game, especially around his home area of Hot Springs, Va. J. C. and his wife Sue also have a home at Sawgrass in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.

In 1978, when his earnings dipped to $63,561, he suffered a broken bone in his wrist in a farming accident in Hot Springs and was off the TOUR for seven weeks. It happened shortly after he tied for second in the U.S. Open.

Jesse Carlyle, although constantly mentioned as the nephew of the legendary Sam Snead, stands on his own performance record. He was a superb athlete in other sports while growing up in Hot Springs, and at one time, sought a career in baseball. He was in the Washington Senators' farm system before turning to golf as a career in 1964.

He worked for head pro Charlie Beverage at the Century Country Club in Westchester County, N.Y. while twice failing to pass the PGA TOUR Qualifying Test. It was a total of four years before he earned his card in 1968. Following three so-so years, J. C. burst into prominence in 1971 by winning twice in a three-week period, at Tucson and Doral, immediately before and after the PGA Championship at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla.

Whatever Craig Stadler accomplishes during the rest of his career, his followers will fondly remember 1982. It was the year he broke away from the field and went from being a good player to a superstar.

He won four times, starting the year by capturing the first event, the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open. He won two of the year's more significant events, the Masters Tournament in a playoff over Dan Pohl and the World Series of Golf in a playoff over Raymond Floyd. His other victory was in the Kemper Open by an impressive seven strokes.

He won the Arnold Palmer Award as the leading money winner, as he earned $446,462. Until this past year, only Tom Watson had won more in a single season. He said there were two keys to his improved play. First of all, he drove the ball better than ever, sacrificing some distance for accuracy and, secondly, he putted much better.

That combination was working for him through much of 1984, too, and especially in the Byron Nelson Classic. He used a brilliant seven-under par 64 the third day as the springboard to his victory. He also finished third three times—including the Tournament Players Championship—and went on to have his second-best money year.

Although he joined the TOUR in the Spring of 1976, he didn't get his first victory until the Bob Hope Desert Classic in January of 1980. Later in the year, he added the Greater Greensboro Open title to his laurels.

He knew, and so did his close followers, that he would win on the TOUR. It was a matter of being patient, learning to control his emotions and to work a little harder on his game.

Before turning professional in 1975, Craig compiled an excellent amateur record, highlighted by his victory in the 1973 U.S. Amateur Championship at the Inverness Club in Toledo. "I just made everything that week," he said.

He had given some thought to leaving the University of Southern California after that triumph, but changed his mind. He went on to be an All-America choice for the Trojans in 1974 and 1975 and was named to the 1975 Walker Cup team.

His first attempt at qualifying for the PGA TOUR came in the Fall of 1975 and he didn't make it. He did succeed in June of 1976.

Craig first played the game at age five with the assistance of his father and really became interested at age "eight or nine." Along the way, he won such titles as the World Junior Championship, the San Diego City Amateur and the Southern California Interscholastic.

Co-champion. 1979 Southwest Conference. 1979 All-America. 1979 Missouri Amateur champion. 1981 Indian and Indonesian Open winner on Asian tour; third in Asian Order of Merit, 1981. Winner, 1982 Tweed Head Classic in Australia. Third in Australian Order of Merit, 1982.

It was an amusing incident at the time. When Payne Stewart started to walk into the News Center at the 1983 Walt Disney World Classic, the security guard stopped him, informing him caddies were not permitted inside unless invited.

As usual, Payne was wearing his plus-fours and cap, which also happens to be the traditional garb of the Disney caddies. The situation quickly was smoothed over and Payne went in for an interview.

By Sunday night, the security people knew all about Payne Stewart. He was the victor by two strokes over Nick Faldo and Mark McCumber. It was the second victory of his career—the first being the 1982 Quad Cities Open.

In his pastel plus-fours, argyle socks and cap, Payne certainly has become the most colorful dresser on TOUR. It has reached the point where people now ask him what he is going to wear each day.

He enjoyed his best money year by far in 1984 and, although he did not win, he was a consistent challenger. His best opportunity came in the Colonial National Invitation where he lost in a playoff to Peter Jacobsen. Four solid rounds also gave him a second place in the Buick Open and he finished third twice.

His $288,795 for the year is the most money ever won by a player without a victory.

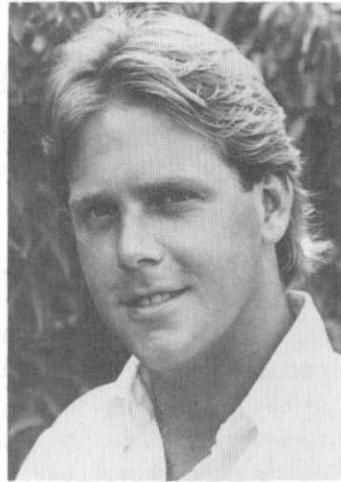

He always knew he wanted to make his living as a professional golfer. From the time his dad, Bill, introduced him to the game at age four, Payne showed an affinity for golf. An accomplished player himself, Bill twice won the Missouri State Amateur and the Missouri Seniors once... so it was natural that father and 4½-year-old son would win a 3-hole tournament in 1961, Payne's first "competitive victory".

Payne's golfing career progressed in an orderly fashion through junior programs, high school and finally to a golf scholarship at Southern Methodist University. While there, Payne won several collegiate events, including the 1979 Co-Championship of the Southwest Conference. Quite simply, he was on a roll when he finished school, and he felt confident he was ready to conquer the PGA TOUR.

As so many others before him, Payne failed at the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1979.

A two-year stint in Asia (1980-81) proved to be just what the doctor ordered.

With victories in the 1981 Indian and Indonesian Opens under his belt, plus his marriage to an Australian girl he met while in Malaysia, Payne returned to the U.S. to attend the '81 Spring Q School. This time he was successful, and it was off to the "main event".

For many years, Dave Stockton has been one of golf's finest good-will ambassadors. He is in constant demand for clinics and exhibitions because of his knowledge of the game and his smooth rapport with the golfing public.

During the late 1960s and through the 1970s, he also was one of the finest players in the world and the fact that he won two PGA Championships will attest to that. For nearly two decades, he has been regarded as one of the premier putters and short-game players in the game.

Dave is a descendant of a Declaration of Independence signer from New Jersey. He started to play golf seriously at age 17, following an injury to his back in a surfing accident. Dave, just as his father Gail, did, went to the University of Southern California and became captain of the golf team.

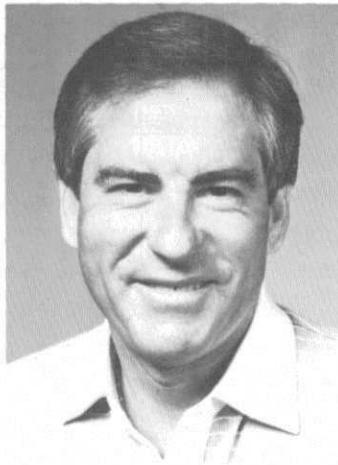

He turned professional after leaving school, but struggled for three years before winning the prestigious Colonial National Invitation in 1967. He was invited to the NIT as a Past Champions' choice.

While he has won a total of 11 times, his greatest triumphs have been in two PGAs. The first was in 1970 at Southern Hills in Tulsa, as he outdueled Arnold Palmer down the stretch. He won another in 1976 at the Congressional Country Club, holing a par-saving 13-footer on the final hole to edge Ray Floyd and Don January.

His most productive year was 1974 as he won three times. A brilliant 235-yard three wood shot on the difficult 18th hole at Riviera Country Club set up his one-stroke margin over Sam Snead and John Mahaffey at the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open. He also won the Quad Cities Open and the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open. After the latter, he received a phone call from then-President Gerald Ford. He was just leaving the press tent when the call came.

Last year, he tied for second-place in the Miller High Life-Quad Cities Open and later commented, "I feel more confident about my game these days and I plan to put more emphasis and effort into it. I know I'm playing better."

The last few years, he is receiving more enjoyment than ever watching his two sons, David and Ronald, competing in junior events.

Curtis Strange is one of the more determined and talented players in the game and it is his great desire to save every possible stroke that has made him one of the more successful men in the business. But, there's more to it. As he said, "I play well when I'm able to use patience and control my emotions."

He had everything working for him in his final event of the year, the LaJet Classic in Abilene, TX. He had a six-stroke lead after three rounds and finally won by two over Mark O'Meara.

He pointed out how quickly the game can turn around. "I played really, really well this week after not knowing where the ball was going last week in Las Vegas."

In 1982, Curtis set a TOUR record for the most money won in a calendar year without a victory. He earned $263,378, but Payne Stewart set a new standard last year. Curtis had 12 top 10 finishes that year and in one stretch late in the season, he finished fourth or better five straight weeks.

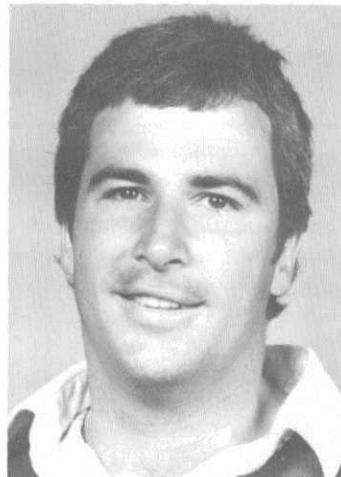

After winning twice in 1980, he couldn't find the right key to win again until the 1983 Sammy Davis, Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

Curtis has been a winner in the game for most of his life, starting back in his days as a junior golfer in Virginia. He started to play at age seven, "and by the time I was eight, I was playing every day." His father was a golf professional and owned the White Sands Country Club in Virginia Beach, Va.

His father passed away when Curtis was 14, and then, as Curtis explained, "Chandler Harper, the Hall of Famer, became my teacher."

His first taste of success came when he won the Virginia State Junior at age 15 and he won his first important title in 1973, the Southeastern Amateur. However, he said his biggest thrill came when he won the 1975 Eastern Amateur. "My father won the very first Eastern in 1957, so that had special meaning to me."

Curtis carried such titles as the Western Amateur and the National Collegiate with him when he first attempted to earn his PGA TOUR card in the Fall of 1976, but he missed. He came back in the Spring of 1977 and made it.

The holder of the all-time PGA TOUR record for the lowest two consecutive rounds ever shot is neither Nicklaus nor Hogan nor Snead nor Palmer nor Trevino. It's Ron Streck, and he did it in winning his first title, the 1978 San Antonio-Texas Open.

He was close to losing his card at the end of his second year on TOUR until he shot 63-62 for a 125. There were six times in the TOUR's glorious past when 126s were posted, twice by Sam Snead.

Ron has had one other 62 during his TOUR career, and that came in the third round of the 1981 Michelob-Houston Open at The Woodlands. That gave him a three-day total of 15-under par 198 and a two-stroke lead over Hale Irwin and Jerry Pate.

Then the rains came to stay, through Sunday and even Monday, so the tournament was made official after the 54 holes and Ron had his victory. He went on to complete a productive year, winning $114,895, by far his finest.

"I think I've gained a level of maturity over the past couple of years, something that just takes some time out here," he said. "I used to let people and my surroundings bother me too often, but I'm more in control now."

His two best finishes last year came on the sites where he was a victor. A first-round 65 in the Texas Open led to a fifth-place finish, and an opening 66 helped him to tie for sixth place in the Houston-Coca-Cola Open.

It was a difficult year physically for him in 1983. In December of 1982, he cracked two ribs skiing in Colorado, and missed the first month of the schedule. Then, just before the Masters Tournament, he suffered a torn cartilage in his knee in a pick-up basketball game and was off another month.

"I've gained a lot of experience in the six years I've been on TOUR," he said, "and I was able to salvage a decent year in 1983 because of that experience."

Streck's been involved in golf almost since he was old enough to walk. "My Dad was a member of a country club at home, and he started me out when I was four years old," he recalls.

"I liked the game and continued playing right through high school, but I've never had a golf lesson in my life . . . I guess you could say I taught myself."

Next came a golf scholarship at the University of Tulsa, and by the end of his freshman year, Ron knew he'd like to give the TOUR a try when he finished school.

He will tell you that the last round of his victory march in the San Antonio-Texas Open was the most exciting of his career. It also is interesting to note that he was a two-time all-state high school basketball player, and far more colleges wanted him for that sport than for golf.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1984 Shootout at Jeremy Ranch on PGA SENIOR TOUR with Don January as partner.

Mike Sullivan is one of those fellows with considerable potential, and when he has been physically ready to go, he has played some marvelous golf. He has had some problems with his back and that doesn't help his big, powerful swing.

His only TOUR victory came in the 1980 Southern Open at Columbus, GA. A second-round 63 gave him the lead he never relinquished and he won by five strokes. The next week, he nearly did it again, finally finishing in a tie for second at the Pensacola Open.

In 1981, he almost made it two Southern titles in a row, as a last-day 64 placed him in a tie with J. C. Snead, but Snead won it in a playoff on the second extra hole. He won nearly a quarter-of-a-million dollars in those two years.

Another victory came his way in 1984 when he teamed with Don January to win the Shootout at Jeremy Ranch in Utah on the Senior PGA TOUR. "I went to the University of Florida with Don's son Tim, and that's when I first met him."

Mike enjoyed his best money year since 1980 and said, "My game was better in a lot of areas. My attitude helped me to be more consistent."

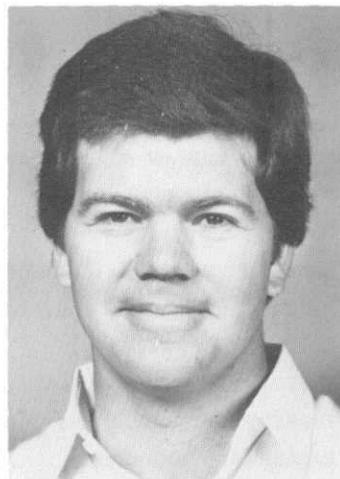

His biggest year was 1980 and he started like a superstar. He tied for second in the Bob Hope Desert Classic and finished third the next week in the Phoenix Open, earning $44,600 for those two splendid efforts. He had won, in those two outings, more than he had won in any full season prior to that. Three weeks later, Mike suffered severe back muscle spasms and was off the TOUR for five weeks.

Mike played a lot of golf with his father when he was a youngster. "He was a scratch amateur, and taught me everything in those days."

Living in Ocala, Fla., his father took him to see the Florida Citrus Open in Orlando, and the old Greater Jacksonville Open. He went to the University of Florida briefly—and had Andy Bean for a roommate—but he wanted to play golf, and not go to school.

He missed twice in attempting to qualify for the TOUR, but made it in the Fall of 1976. When he finished fourth in the 1977 Doral-Eastern Open, he felt he was on his way, but he started to press for success. He won $8,800 at Doral, and only $11,170 for the entire year.

He improved considerably in 1978. In the Buick Open, he lost in a playoff to Jack Newton of Australia. The next year was something of a disappointment for Mike, but it still was not too bad. Then came his great start in 1980.

Even though Hal Sutton enjoyed a good year in 1984, he learned how fine the line is between winning and challenging. He didn't win, but he had 11 top 10 finishes and only missed the cut three times. "The problem was," he explained, "I couldn't make the one putt at the right time."

He also had a tough act to follow, considering the great success he enjoyed as a rookie in 1982 and then the follow-up the next year. Early in 1983, when he was asked what he could do for an encore after his splendid efforts as a first-year player, he always replied:

"I would like to continue to improve my game, win a major championship and be the year's leading money winner."

He always said it so calmly and had such a confident tone to his voice, that you knew he truly believed he could reach those lofty goals. And, he did.

The handsome young man from Louisiana won two of the more prestigious tournaments in the game — the Tournament Players Championship and the PGA Championship. He was the No. 1 money winner for most of the year, and finally edged Fuzzy Zoeller for the honor with $426,668.

As a rookie in 1982, he had eight top 10 finishes en route to a $237,434 campaign, and his first victory as a professional came in the season's final event, the Walt Disney World Classic. He turned back the challenge of Bill Britton in that one, with a birdie on the fourth extra hole.

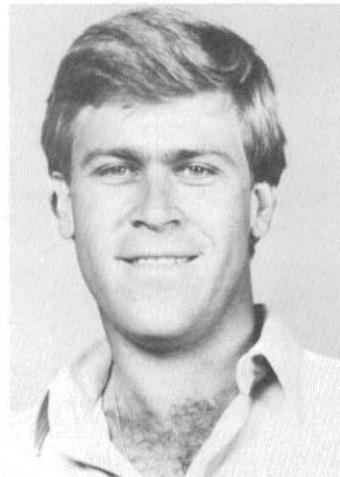

Although his father did not play the game, Hal said he always was the "moving force behind me." A friend of his father's sent him a set of clubs when he was 11, and that was the start. "I played some team sports, but it was discouraging because I never seemed to be on a good team. I decided I wanted to win or lose on my own ability and that's why I chose golf."

As a 12-and 13-year old, he would take his father's cart and "sometimes play 72 holes a day." He said he only had mediocre success until his junior year at Centenary College, although he did win the Louisiana State Junior title in 1974. In college, he became mentally stronger and learned what "course management" meant.

Hal won the 1980 U.S. Amateur at the Country Club of North Carolina and was named Golf Magazine College Player of the Year, also in 1980. At the time, there was talk that he might forever remain an amateur.

"I went to work for my Dad and would go as long as a month without playing at all," he said. "When I did try to play, I didn't have any feel. I had put so much into the game to that point, I felt it was senseless to give it all up. I could always go back into business, but in later years, I couldn't go back to the game at the level I wanted. So, I decided to turn professional and go on TOUR." He easily went through the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1981.

Now, the business back home will have to wait a long, long time.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner 1975 Southwest Conference, 1984 Magnolia Classic (TPS), 1975 Chicago District Amateur. Three-time winner Chicago District.

Thanks to the kind-hearted sponsors on the PGA TOUR, Lance Ten Broeck now is an exempt player. "I owe them a lot," Lance said at the end of last year, "and I hope they're pleased that I was able to take advantage of their sponsors' exemptions."

Playing in 17 tournaments in 1984 — most of them on special invitations from the sponsors — Lance collected $40,185 and finished 123rd on the money list.

With a laugh, he said, "I was sort of lost last fall. It was the first time in a long time that I didn't have to go to the Qualifying School."

As he thought about it, he went on, "My first one was at Brownsville, TX, in 1976, and I missed in my first six attempts. I made it through the School on my seventh and eighth tries, but missed again on my ninth and 10th."

Lance is a member of the South Florida PGA Section, and he qualified for the Doral-Eastern Open and Honda Classic through the Sectional qualifier. He won more than $11,000 in those two events. The rest of the way, he said, "I had to ask, and sometimes beg, for a sponsors exemption. They all were good to me."

He came through with two top 10 finishes, ties for ninth place in his hometown of Chicago at the Western Open and also in the Sammy Davis, Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

Lance spent all of his growing up years in Chicago. His father was a fine golfer and Lance happens to be the youngest of eight children. All of his brothers and sisters played, too. And, played well. "I grew up caddying for them," he said, but his first real competition was as a 14-year old in a Chicago District Junior tournament.

Lance won three district junior titles and in 1975, won the Chicago District Amateur. He headed for the University of Texas and played there for two years. As a freshman, he won the Southwest Conference title and as a sophomore won the Harvey Penick Invitational, plus a few others.

When the PGA TOUR Qualifying School was scheduled for Brownsville in the Fall of 1976, the temptation was too great. "It wasn't that far from Austin," he said, "and I had to give it a try."

It hasn't been easy for the big fellow, but he says, "I've heard you really have to be dedicated because the competition is so great. If you slip a little, a lot of people will go by you."

This last year, he enjoyed a $27,000 payday (unofficial) when he won the Magnolia Classic on the Tournament Players Series by defeating Mike Smith in a playoff. That was the shot of confidence he needed.

"Mike Donald has been helping me a lot," Lance said, "and my driving and putting improved considerably."

"I've learned it takes a lot of patience and a lot of hard work to succeed on the TOUR," he said. "Now, it's starting to pay off for me."

The Doug Tewell story is one of the more inspiring on the PGA TOUR. Early in 1979, he came within a putt or two of leaving the TOUR entirely. Today, he is one of the game's better players.

He knows it has taken a lot of hard work and mental discipline, but says it is difficult to pinpoint all the reasons for the drastic improvement. He became a $100,000 player for the third time last year.

He was a little disappointed because he felt 1984 should have been better. "I was off to my best start ever," he explained, "and for some reason I lost interest as the season went along. I need to work harder on my attitude."

He had five top 10 finishes including a tie for third in the USF&G Classic, but three of them came in January.

After the 1979 Bay Hill Classic in March, he was so discouraged with his progress in the game, that he was ready to pack it all in and look for another job. A friend of his encouraged him to "work as hard as you can for the rest of the year, and then see what happens."

He did just that, and won $84,500 for the year. Following the same advice into 1980, Doug played reasonably well early in the year. He missed the cut in the Tournament Players Championship and then went to the Sea Pines Heritage Classic at Harbour Town the next week. After two rounds of 69-66, he was tied for the lead with Jerry Pate. He still was tied after three, but now with John Mahaffey. The final day, Pate tied him at the end of regulation play, and Doug won his inaugural with a par on the first extra hole.

Buoyed by that success, he continued to play well, and broke through again in the IVB-Philadelphia Classic. He was 10-shots back after two rounds, but closed brilliantly with 65-67 to win by one over Tom Kite.

Doug started to play golf at about age 12 and his first teacher was Latron Harris, Sr. at the Lakeside club in Stillwater, Okla. The Tewell family had a membership there.

Doug and Mark Hayes were classmates and golf teammates through Stillwater High and Oklahoma State. "I was a steady player all through school, but I didn't think I was good enough to play on the TOUR, so I chose to be a club professional," he said. Incidentally, he was the runner-up three times in the Oklahoma State Amateur, losing once to Mark.

He worked as an assistant professional for two years and then moved on as head pro at the Pinetop Country Club in Pinetop, Ariz. During the off seasons, he worked at Camelback in Phoenix. In June, 1975, with his Class A PGA membership in hand, he joined the TOUR, but it was not easy. Winning $33,162 in 1977 helped to encourage him.

Jim Thorpe says he is learning more every year about how to play the game and how to handle the pressure when in a contending position. If you look at his record, you know it must be true.

One of the strongest men in the game, he has learned how to harness his power and put a touch of finesse in his game. He has done it well and the last two years, has earned well over $100,000 each season.

He has displayed an ability to play the more difficult courses well. In the 1981 U.S. Open at Merion, for example, he was the first-round leader with a 66, and finally finished tied for 11th. Last year in the Open at Winged Foot, he challenged most of the way and finished tied for fourth place. Two weeks earlier on the tough Congressional Country Club course, he tied for third in the Kemper Open.

"I'm not the type to make a lot of birdies and shoot a real low number," he said, "but I enjoy the courses where three-or-four under par is a good score. I enjoy that challenge."

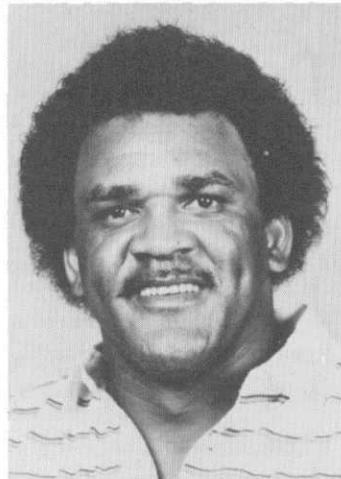

He is the ninth of 12 children. He grew up in a large home off the second fairway at the Roxboro (NC) Golf Club where his father, Elvert, was the greens superintendent. He says with a laugh, "We used to go out after dark and hit shots by the back-porch light."

Jim was quite a football player in high school and earned a scholarship to Morgan State. He was a running back, and a powerful one at that, but after a year, he abandoned the sport and then left school after two years to devote more time to golf.

"There were five boys in the family," Jim says, "and my father was the one who started me playing golf, but in those days, I would rather play football. My brother, Chuck, was the best golfer in the family."

Chuck was on the PGA TOUR in the early 1970s and it was Chuck who gave Jim some sound advice regarding the TOUR. "I couldn't hit my long irons very well, so one day Chuck said we should go to Pinehurst and he would help me with my game. We played and practiced and played some more. Finally, one day, Chuck said, 'You're ready.' "

Jim obtained his TOUR card in the Fall of 1975, but he only won $2,000, the next year, so he went home again. In the Fall of 1978, he was back in the School, this time better prepared, and was co-medalist with John Fought in the Q-School. Early the next year, he let everyone know he was indeed ready, as he tied with Tom Watson for second place in the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open, two strokes behind Bruce Lietzke.

Lee Trevino was delighted with the way he finished the 1983 season because he was certain there would be better-and-brighter days ahead. He was right.

He finished second in the 1983 LaJet Classic and made a very strong showing in the Texas Open to give his spirits a much-needed boost.

He rode the crest of the wave through his limited schedule in 1984, hitting the high note with a brilliant performance in the PGA Championship at Shoal Creek, AL. He shot all four rounds in the 60s. He was one-stroke out of the lead after day one, tied with Gary Player after day two, in the lead by one stroke after three and finally won by four over Lanny Wadkins and Player.

His last previous victory was in the 1981 MONY-Tournament of Champions. During the dry spell, he said, "I haven't won because I haven't been able to physically. It's not because I've lost my game."

His problem had been his back. He suffered with pain, sometimes severe, but never complained publicly. He always maintained his "Merry Mex" attitude. Some believe his problems originated when he was struck by lightning at the 1975 Western Open. In November of 1976, he underwent an operation for a herniated disc.

Lee's greatest year on TOUR was 1980 when he collected three titles, $385,814 and won his fifth Vardon Trophy with a scoring average of 69.73 for 82 rounds. His average was the lowest on TOUR since Sam Snead's 69.23 in 1950 and his money winnings totaled $150,000.

In September of 1981, he was inducted into the World Golf Hall of Fame at Pinehurst.

Trevino tied for 54th in the 1966 U.S. Open at Olympic Club in San Francisco, and he didn't try the TOUR again until a year later at Baltusrol. He placed sixth in that U.S. Open, and was on the TOUR to stay. Twelve months later, he was entertaining everyone at the margarita party at Oak Hill CC, Rochester, where he had just won the 1968 U.S. Open.

Lee won the U.S. Open again in 1971, defeating Jack Nicklaus in a playoff at Merion, and in a span of five weeks that summer he added the Canadian and British Open titles to his fast-growing collection. He was named "Player of the Year" practically by acclamation.

Howard Twitty likes to be optimistic about most things and says he knows his golf game is getting better, better than it has been since his big year of 1980. The birdies have been harder to come by, but through the last half of 1984, he believed he could see the light at the end of the tunnel again. He only missed the cut in one of his last nine tournaments of the year.

He also knows he may never again play the game as well as he did in a stretch of 3½ tournaments in mid-summer of 1980. He went through 14 rounds with 13 of them being in the 60's and was 57-under par.

One of those weeks ended in a victory, as he defeated Jim Simons on the sixth extra hole in the Sammy Davis, Jr.-Greater Hartford Open. In the others, he was second in the Greater Milwaukee Open, fifth in the Quad Cities Open, and, after the victory, he started 64-66 in the IVB-Philadelphia Classic but then the bubble burst.

"I worked on a couple of keys," he said of his sudden turn around, "but nothing major. I was getting set up and aligned easily."

Howard's first TOUR victory came the year before in the B.C. Open when he outplayed two close friends, Tom Purtzer and Doug Tewell on the 72nd hole. They were tied through 71, but Howard managed a par on the home hole and that gave him the victory.

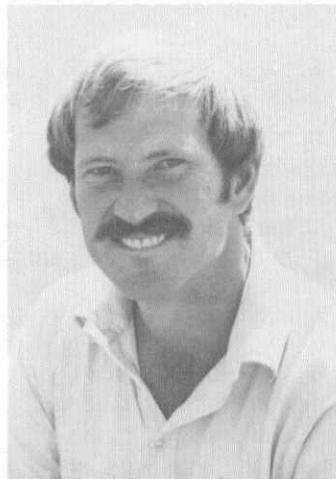

One of the biggest men on the TOUR at six-feet-five, 200 pounds, he once was asked why he didn't concentrate on football. With a grin, he replied, "I like to keep my blood in my body."

Twitty believes now that his ample physical proportions probably slowed his progress in golf at the start. He started to play at age 10 but it wasn't until he was a senior in high school in Phoenix that his game started to develop.

"I was about 6' 3" when I was a sophomore," he recalls, "and I was terrible. I guess I just needed time to catch up with my body. I didn't have the coordination that I needed."

As a sophomore and junior at Arizona State, Twitty really showed progress, however. He won the important Sunnehanna and Porter Cup amateur events and, when he was a senior, he finished right behind the co-champions of the NCAA championship, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite from the University of Texas.

Twitty turned pro in 1973 and twice failed in the PGA TOJR Qualifying School before meeting success in June, 1975. That was the same year he also won the Thailand Open during a second trip to the Far East circuit.

1984 SUMMARY: Tournaments entered—31; in money—15; top ten finishes—3; stroke average—72.91.

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 23—eagles (8).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner, 1978 Tri-State PGA Match Play; 1983 California State Open. Finished second in 1983 Qualifying School and shot record-equalling 65 at Tournament Players Club.

Brett Upper took a different route to the PGA TOUR but his performance in 1984 proved it was an effective one. Instead of going to college, he became an assistant professional right out of high school and worked in pro shops for the next several years.

With a smile, he said, "The golf shop and the mini-tours were my college."

He made it onto the PGA TOUR last year after finishing as the runner-up to Willie Wood in the Qualifying School in the Fall of 1983. His game improved as the year went along and he finally slipped into the 125th money position, thanks to a tie for 44th in the Pensacola Open.

Interestingly enough, if Leonard Thompson had taken one stroke less in the season's last event, he would have earned the 125th spot. It was that close.

"At the beginning of the year," he said, "it was a big adjustment, getting used to the travel and feeling comfortable with the atmosphere of the TOUR events. I knew I probably would not jump out and be an instant success such as Corey Pavin, because I didn't have the same type of experience."

"But, I was pleased with my progress, and the big boosts came in the Quad Cities Open (tie for eighth), and then the B. C. Open (also tie for eighth) and finally in the LaJet Classic (tie for seventh)."

"I've learned patience and concentration are the most important things you have to learn," he continued. "You have to go out and play your own game and learn how to eliminate the distractions."

Brett started in the game at age eight under the watchful eye of his father. He started to play junior golf at the St. Davids Golf Club in Wayne, PA, and through those years, Pete Trenham, the head pro at St. Davids, showed him the way.

"I liked the individual aspect of golf," he said, "and that's why I enjoyed the competition right from the start."

After high school, he went to work in the golf shop at the Lancaster (PA) Country Club in 1977. A couple of years later, he worked under Lew Worsham at Oakmont (PA) Country Club.

He demonstrated an ability to play as he won several PGA Sectional events around Pennsylvania. He started to play the mini-tours in Florida and then set his sights on the PGA TOUR.

The first two times he tried to obtain his card, he didn't make it. In the Fall of 1983, he was ready. A fourth-round 65 at the Tournament Players Club was the highlight of the week because it tied the course record. He finished with a 68 to move to within two strokes of medalist Willie Wood.

Even today, when Brett needs help with his game, he goes to his old friends and teachers, such as Trenham at St. Davids, plus Worsham and Bobby Ford, who is the head pro at Oakmont now.

Tommy Valentine was a very good football and basketball player for Gainesville High in Georgia and he admits that he was more into those sports in those days than golf.

He ventured on to the University of Georgia, but believed he was too small for football, so he turned his attention to golf. "I had been playing the game since I was 13," he said, "and I went to Georgia on a look-see basis."

He didn't play his first year, but the Bulldogs did like what they saw. He went on to win the 1970 Southeast Conference title and twice was named to the All-American team. Allen Miller, Bill Kratzert, Lyn Lott and Terry Diehl were teammates.

A natural athlete, he said technique was little more than "look for the flag and swing. That was fine when I was playing well, but when problems occurred, I didn't know how to cure them."

In the NCAA Championship at Ohio State, he won the long drive contest, and even today, Tommy is one of the longest hitters on TOUR preferring to play left to right.

He qualified for the TOUR in the Spring of 1977, but by the end of 1978, he lost his playing privileges. He regained them in the Fall of 1978.

In 1981, he was in position to win at least a couple of times. In the Atlanta Classic, he was tied with Tom Watson at the end of regulation play, but lost the playoff on the third extra hole.

In the inaugural LaJet Classic in Abilene, Tex., he led through the first two rounds, fell one stroke in back of Tom Weiskopf after a bad back nine the third day, and finished tied for third.

Just when it appeared as if he was about to become a consistent contender, he tore a rib cartilage playing racquetball in December of 1982. It forced him to change his swing and his game nosedived in 1983.

"I've always taken the club back with the left arm and shoulder," he explained, "but after the injury, I started to let the right side help. That's when I got the club going to the outside on the takeaway and laying off at the top of the swing."

He has been working with David Leadbetter of Grenelefe, FL, and Rina Ritson of Lake Buena Vista, FL, trying to get his own swing back.

"Sometimes good things come from the bad," he said, smiling. "My pitching and putting is better now."

Tommy's mother and father both are fine players. In fact, his Mother has won the Gainesville city and country club championships. They lived next door to Tommy Aaron, and Tommy's father was the head professional at the club where they played.

Although Bobby Wadkins has enjoyed periods of success during his years on the PGA TOUR, it remains something of a mystery why he has not won a tournament. He has been close numerous times, and his best effort was in the 1979 IVB-Philadelphia Classic. He was in command late in the final round, but Lou Graham came from six strokes back with a seven-under par 64 and caught him. In the playoff, Lou birdied the first extra hole and won it all.

Later that same year, he tied for second in the Anheuser-Busch Classic, just one-stroke behind John Fought. Nevertheless, the high finishes paved the way to his best money year, with earnings of $121,373.

It is interesting to note that he won the European Open in the Fall of 1978, and he won the Dunlop Phoenix tournament in Japan in the Fall of 1979.

Bobby returned to top form in 1984 when he had his best money year since 1979. "I went to see Dr. Bob Rotella (sports psychologist at the University of Virginia) and he had me thinking better. For the first time in 10 years, I developed a routine for each shot. It made quite a difference."

He had one of the finest rounds of his career in the 1983 Colonial National Invitation. He shot a second-round 64 and held the halfway lead at 132. "It probably was the best round I have played on TOUR," he said. "I made tons and tons of good iron shots." He finally finished in a tie for fifth place.

Bobby is approximately 20 months younger than his brother, Lanny, and while Lanny was more spectacular on the national amateur level and now during his years on the TOUR, they both were standouts in junior golf around their home territory of Richmond, Va.

They kept the city junior title in the family for six straight years, with Lanny winning four.

Today Bobby and Lanny often practice together, and when one needs help, he almost always goes to his brother.

After high school — where he also was a standout basketball player — Bobby headed for the University of Houston and his two closest friends there — and now — were Bill Rogers and Bruce Lietzke.

After one year, though, he transferred to East Tennessee State and earned All-American status in 1972 and 1973.

He earned his TOUR card in the Fall of 1974.

A highlight in 1977 came the first day of the Memorial Tournament. After going out in 39 on the very difficult course, he came back in seven-under 29, to tie for the lead. He also was in the lead after three rounds, but a bad last day dropped him to a tie for 11th.

Winner 1978 Canadian PGA and 1978 Garden State PGA (Australia). Winner 1979 Bridgestone Open. 1982 and 1983 USA team vs. Japan. Winner 1984 World Nissan Championship (Japan).

Lanny Wadkins' approach to the game of golf is quite simple, really. He attacks the course constantly.

"I get a big kick out of playing that way," he says. "You know, going for the green in two on a par five when the second shot is over water, but I never take a chance if it's a bad risk."

While others must look for the safe way home, Lanny can be bold because he has the shots, possibly more shots than anyone in the game. With a grin, he says, "Some people don't know I have those shots. They see me lashing away but don't understand what I'm doing. I'm always working the ball. Every shot is calculated."

"That's when you win," he adds.

And win he has over the years. When he is on his game—which is most of the time in recent years—there isn't a more feared competitor on the TOUR. That's why he has been able to win some big ones on the most demanding courses.

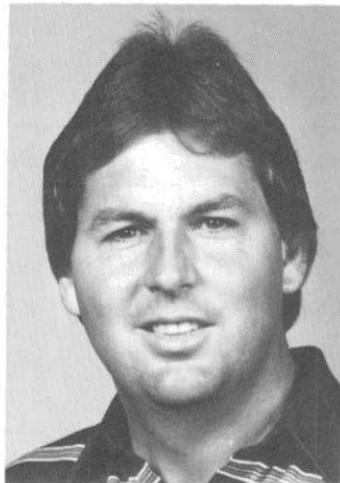

For example, he won the 1977 PGA Championship in a playoff over Gene Littler at Pebble Beach; and later that summer, won the World Series of Golf in a marvelous performance on the tough Firestone South course.

Two years later, when weather conditions bordered on the unplayable, with wind gusts up to 45 miles per hour, he won the Tournament Players Championship at Sawgrass with a five-under par total of 283—five better than runner-up Tom Watson.

He won three times in 1982 and came back with two more in 1983, winning the MONY—Tournament of Champions for a second straight year.

In addition to all of that, he was superb for the third straight time in the Ryder Cup matches against the European team.

Lanny enjoyed a brilliant amateur career, highlighted by his victory in the 1970 U.S. Amateur. It wasn't any surprise when he became an immediate success on the PGA TOUR. After earning his player's card in the Fall of 1971, he went on to win the 1972 Sahara Invitational.

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Runner-up 1980 and 1981 South African PGA Order of Merit. Named 1975 Rhodesian Sportsman of Year. Winner 1975 World Amateur Team title with George Harvey. Twice represented South Africa in World Series of Golf, 1980, 1982.

When Denis Watson was asked to give an assessment of his performance in 1984, he smiled and said, "It was an incredible result to a lot of hard work; a couple of years of hard work."

The South African joined Tom Watson as the only three-time winner on the PGA TOUR last year; came within a whisker of winning PGA Player-of-the-Year honors; and finished fourth on the money list with $408,562. Compare that, if you will, with his 1983 total of $59,284, which was his previous best.

Actually, his brilliant performance was centered on three tournaments in a seven-week span late in the summer. He broke through with a victory in the Buick Open, thanks to a 63-68 finish.

After he was 33rd in the PGA Championship, he won the NEC World Series of Golf at Firestone Country Club. He shot a course record eight-under par 62 the second day and stayed in front the rest of the way to collect a check for $126,000. He missed the cut in his next two outings, and then won the TOUR's richest payoff of $162,000 when he won the Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational.

There were several factors that boosted him into prominence. First of all, he has been working for several years with David Leadbetter at Grenelefe, FL, on his golf swing; and this past year, he worked on the mental aspects of the game with Dr. Bob Rotella of the University of Virginia. He gives them both considerable credit.

Denis earned his TOUR card in the Spring of 1981. The next year, his first start was the Bay Hill Classic, and he tied with Tom Kite and Jack Nicklaus, but Kite won the playoff. He experienced two other runner-up finishes before breaking through last year.

Denis established himself as one of South Africa's finest players and twice finished as the runner-up in its Order of Merit. His father started him in the game when they lived in Rhodesia. He was 14-years old at the time, and two years later, his handicap was down to a one. "That's when I started to think about turning professional."

He played all sports, including cricket, rugby, tennis and competed in track and field, but golf was his love, no doubt about it.

He turned pro when he was 19. Although he had a dream that someday he would play the United States TOUR, he said it was little more than a dream as long as he lived in Rhodesia. So, he moved to South Africa in 1976.

"Gary Player and Dale Hayes said I should give the TOUR a try," Watson said. "Then Gil Morgan told me he thought my game was well suited for the American courses and even Howard Twitty encouraged me to come over here. So, I did."

He now plays out of the Plantation Golf and Country Club in Venice, FL.

Tom Watson returned to his position as the leading player in the game when he swept two of the most coveted honors on the TOUR in 1984. He won the Arnold Palmer Award as the leading money winner as he finished in the top spot for the fifth time in his 13-year career; and he was named the PGA-Player-of-the-Year for a record sixth time.

He also won three tournaments and finished second in two of the more significant events, the Masters Tournament and the British Open. All-in-all, it was another great season.

As long as the game is played, Tom will be regarded as one of the great players of all time; but more than any other single feat, he will be remembered for the brilliantly-executed pitch shot he made from off the 17th green at Pebble Beach in the 1982 United States Open.

As you recall, his two iron off the tee on the par three hole bounced in heavy rough on the left side of the green. He was tied with Jack Nicklaus, who already had completed his round. Par seemed the absolute best Tom could do, but a bogey was far more likely.

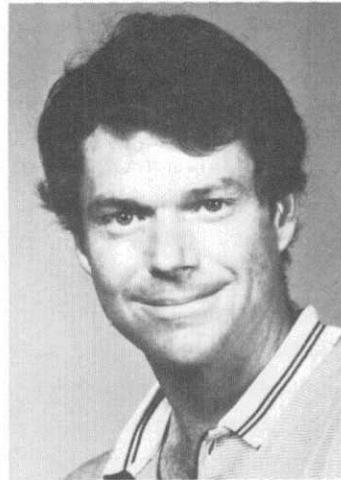

Instead, he hit the perfect shot, and holed it for a birdie two. He went on to birdie the last hole and win his first Open championship by two over Nicklaus.

In the Fall of 1983, he was paid a high compliment by his good friend and archrival, Nicklaus. It was prior to the Ryder Cup matches at Palm Beach Gardens, FL. Nicklaus was the team captain and he announced his plans to play Tom in every match because the "intimidating factor" would be worth a lot of points against the Europeans. Jack was right.

His biggest year was in 1980 when he won six times on TOUR, plus the British Open, and won a record $530,808. He is the only player ever to break the half-million dollar mark.

Since he won $1,065 for a tie for 28th in his first start on TOUR in the 1971 Kaiser International Open, this personable fellow has elevated himself to a position with the all-time greats.

Tom was only six years old when his father, a scratch golfer, exposed him to the game. He became a four-time winner of the Missouri State Amateur and played for three years at Stanford University before graduating in 1971 with a degree in psychology.

D. A. Weibring is one of the more popular players on the PGA TOUR, so it was a disappointment to his fans to see him suffer through 1983 with a serious left wrist injury.

He hurt it at the Phoenix Open, and said, "I never could get going, even though I tried to play with it." Finally, he had to take two months off in the early spring.

"I played well after I came back in early June, but I still wasn't 100%," he continued. "Originally, I broke a blood capsule on top of the wrist hitting balls on the practice tee and then I went on to suffer ligament damage. The only cure was rest and therapy."

He did his therapy with the Dallas Cowboys physical staff and adds, "They also helped me to get in the best shape of my life. When I did come back, I was a lot stronger in all ways. They taught me a lot about conditioning and it will pay off."

The setback was frustrating since he was coming off his best money year, winning $117,941 in 1982, and anticipated even greater returns in 1983.

He was in good shape for most of 1984 and the results were evident. He jumped back up with the $100,000 winners, consistently placing among the money winners.

He became a devotee on the lightweight clubs, and believed it helped his wrist problem early in the year. "From about April on, I played very steady," he said. In a stretch of 17 tournaments, he only missed two cuts, but at the LaJet Classic, he was forced to withdraw when the injury flared up again.

His lone victory came in the 1979 Quad Cities Open. He was tied with Calvin Peete through 14 holes the last day, but D. A. took charge at the par five 15th, registering an eagle and taking the lead to stay.

It was a popular victory for D. A. A graduate of Illinois State University, he had a number of his followers from his hometown of Quincy, IL, there to cheer him on. He said, "If I had to pick a place to win my first tournament, the Quad Cities would be it."

His next closest brush with victory came in the 1980 Andy Williams San Diego Open. He fired a final round 65 and found himself tied with Tom Watson, but Watson went on to win on the first extra hole.

D. A. joined the TOUR in June of 1977, earning his card on his third attempt at the qualifying school. In his first full year of 1978, he won $41,052, finishing 75th on the money list.

He explained how the use of his initials came about.

"My father's name also is Donald Albert, and when I was a youngster, Mom decided she didn't want me to be called 'Little Don,' or 'Junior,' so she started to call me D. A. It has been with me ever since."

During the last two decades, there have been few people playing the game who have commanded the same attention as Tom Weiskopf.

The possessor of one of the finest swings in the history of golf, Tom has compiled an enviable record since coming out of Ohio State University to join the TOUR in 1965. He has won 15 times and accumulated well over $2.2 million in earnings.

The game has never been all-consuming to him. He has taken time away from the TOUR to be with his family and also to trod through the bush country in search of wildlife trophies, especially sheep and elk. In more recent years, he has devoted more time to golf course architecture.

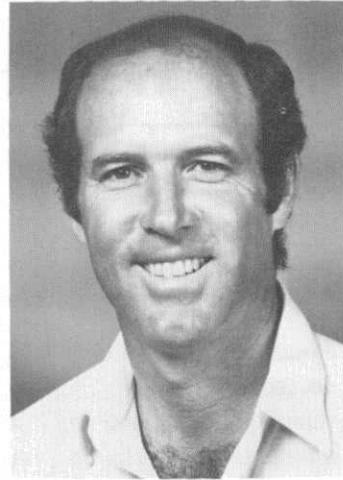

This past year, Tom played in only nine tournaments. He participated in a number of other events but in a different role. He was an analyst — and a very good one — for most CBS telecasts. "I always wanted to do more than just play the game," he said, "and now I believe I have done that, with the television work, the golf course architecture and my other interests."

During his more active years on TOUR, he always was able to respond to a challenge.

When winning became important enough, he won. For example, in 1973 when he set a personal goal, he compiled one of the great streaks in recent years. In an eight-week period, he won five times, including the British and Canadian Opens. Several groups named him the Player-of-the-Year.

Few victories have given him as much satisfaction as the 1981 LaJet Classic, because it ended a 3½-year winless spell; and the 1982 Western Open, because it was a tournament he always wanted to add to his collection. After winning the 1963 Western Amateur, he was invited to participate in the 1964 Western Open. That was his first start as a pro and he won $487.50. Ever since then, he has contributed a check in that amount each year to the Western's Evans Scholarship Fund.

Incidentally, when the top 60 money winners was the prime basis for exempt status, he finished in that group 17 straight years, through the 1982 season. No one on TOUR could match that figure.

BEST 1984 STATISTICS: 5—sand saves (.585); 9—putting (28.94).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Winner of five major junior titles, including 1977 USGA Junior, 1978 PGA National Junior and 1979 Western Junior. Winner 1979 Nevada State Open (as amateur) and 1984 Colorado State Open. Member of 1983 U. S. Walker Cup team. Winner of nine collegiate events and was two-time All-America choice at Oklahoma State. Awarded 1982 Fred Haskins Trophy as outstanding collegiate player of year. Medalist in 1983 PGA TOUR Qualifying School.

When Willie Wood came on the PGA TOUR in January of 1984, he carried with him an impressive list of credentials. After he played in five West Coast tournaments, his peers knew he was for real. He won more than $27,000 and his name seemed to be on the leader board every week.

With a smile, he said, "When I started last year, I was really fired up. I was excited to be on the TOUR and I was still playing well from the Qualifying School."

Willie West Wood went to the Q School at the Tournament Players Club in the Fall of 1983 with high expectations. He wasn't disappointed. He shot two rounds of 70, two of 71 and two of even par 72 to win medalist honors by two strokes.

Those who have followed Willie's career, know it was a typical performance.

Willie started in the game at age nine, and it was a natural sport for him. His father, Willard, was the head professional at the Shreveport (LA) Country Club at the time. "He's a teaching pro in Lake Charles now," Willie said, "and he still is my only teacher. And, my older sister Deanie has been playing on the LPGA tour."

Willie accepted the challenge of competition immediately, and he has been successful at every level of the game. He won numerous junior titles, the most impressive being the 1977 USGA Junior; the 1978 PGA National Junior and the 1979 Western Junior.

He went on to Oklahoma State University and proceeded to win nine collegiate events. In 1982, he was named the College Golfer-of-the-Year. In 1983, he was named to the U.S. Walker Cup team.

His performance early in his first year on TOUR shouldn't have been a surprise to anyone. He said, "I set one goal for myself when the year started. I wanted to play well enough to never have to go back to the qualifying school. You can't believe how tough that was."

His first round in a stroke play event was a six-under par 66 at LaQuinta in the Bob Hope Classic. He was tied for the lead, but finally finished with a respectable tie for 21st place.

"I was really nervous on the first tee," he says now with a smile. "I had a lot of low scores in college, but the circumstances were not the same. They were not in front of a lot of people."

His closest brush with victory came in the Anheuser-Busch Classic. He tied the Kingsmill Golf Club course record with a eight-under par 63 the first day and led by two strokes. He had a 68 the second day and still was leading by two. After a 66 in the third round for a 16-under par 197, he led by four shots.

The last afternoon, Ronnie Black came from seven strokes behind, shooting a 63 and won the tournament by a stroke over Willie. "I had an even par 71," he said, "and that wasn't too bad. Ronnie just played great the last day."

His all-time low score was a 61 at the 49ers Club in Tucson. He was a senior in high school at the time, and had two eagles, nine birdies and two bogeys.

Until the PGA Championship at Shoal Creek, AL, last August, few people really knew what Fuzzy Zoeller had to endure to play golf on the TOUR. Few people knew he constantly suffered with severe back pains because Fuzzy always was smiling and joking with those around him.

He arrived in Shoal Creek amid a torrent of publicity because of his magnificent performance in winning the United States Open Championship a few weeks earlier at Winged Foot. In the Open, he was tied with Greg Norman after 72 holes, and then the next day, Fuzzy was at his brilliant best, winning the 18-hole playoff by eight strokes, 67 to 75.

The morning he was to play his first round in the PGA, his back was so painful he barely could move. He was rushed to the hospital and remained there for nearly a week.

A month later, he was in Las Vegas to defend his title in the Panasonic Invitational, but his back condition worsened and he went to the Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City. The diagnosis was that a "couple of discs had ruptured" and surgery was necessary.

Because of boney-tissue growth, they had to chisel one disc out and could only do repair work on the other. His situation improved considerably but he wasn't expected back on TOUR until the Spring, at least.

"The back problem started when I was playing high school basketball," he explains. "I was submarine and the back has bothered me from time-to-time ever since."

There were times when he had to wear a corset; times when he could not bend over to pick the ball out of the cup; and times when he could not play at all.

Fuzzy blossomed as a superstar in 1979 when he won the Andy Williams San Diego Open and also the Masters Tournament. He was six strokes in back of Ed Sneed starting the last round at Augusta National, and when he finished, he was thinking second place. As he sat in the scorers' tent at the 18th green, with Tom Watson, he watched Sneed bogey the last hole to force a three-way playoff. Fuzzy defeated Ed and Tom on the second extra hole.

His victory did surprise the experts, because this was his first trip to the Masters.

Fuzzy first gained "fame" at the 1976 Quad Cities Open when he birdied the last eight holes of the first round to tie Bob Goalby's all-time TOUR record, set in the 1961 St. Petersburg Open.

Zoeller grew up alongside a fairway at the Valley View CC in New Albany, Ind., and it seemed natural when he started swinging a golf club at age three. He entered his first tournament two years later. He enjoyed all sports while growing up, but when he was eight his father said to him, "Son, all we're doing is running back and forth between the golf course and the baseball diamond. You had better choose one."

Fuzzy chose golf, but during his days in high school he played varsity basketball mainly, he said to "keep in shape for golf, and in Indiana in the winter you can't play golf."

BEST 1984 STATISTIC: 47—driving accuracy (.667).

OTHER ACHIEVEMENTS: Member 1980 Canada World Amateur Cup team. Winner 1980 International Champions (Morocco). Winner 1981 Canadian Amateur. Member 1981 Brigham Young University NCAA championship team. Winner 1982 British Columbia Open. 1984 Utah Open.

When Richard Zokol was working on his golf game during his teenage years in his native Canada, he always kept an eye on Jim Nelford.

"I didn't know him then," Richard said, even though they both were from the Vancouver area. "Jim was a couple of years ahead of me and he seemed to win everything. When he went on to Brigham Young University, I could see how much his game improved, so I wanted to follow in his footsteps."

When it was time for Richard to head for college, he wrote to Karl Tucker, the golf coach, to inquire about the possibilities of going there. "He told me that since I didn't have a good amateur record, they couldn't offer me a scholarship," he recalls.

Soon afterwards, Zokol and Nelford were competing against each other in the British Columbia Amateur and after three rounds, Zokol was leading. "We talked about it, and Jim said he would call the coach and recommend me. The next thing I know, Coach Tucker said I should come down to Provo.

"The day after the tournament, I drove 24 hours straight through, and entered the school without a scholarship, but I was there. I made the team and for three years, I roomed with Bobby Clampett."

During his senior year, Clampett left for the pro ranks, but Richard is proud of the fact that he captained the team that won the 1981 NCAA title for BYU. "It was their first, ever," he said.

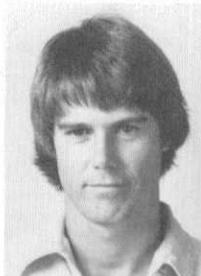

That fall, he qualified for the PGA TOUR on his first try, turning professional right after the U.S. Amateur Championship. He had one very good tournament that first year, as he was tied for the lead in the Greater Milwaukee Open after three rounds and finished tied for fifth.

He gained national attention in Milwaukee. He showed up the first day with a small portable tape player and headset. Between shots, he would listen to soothing music. "It helps me to relax," he explained, "and takes my mind off of a lot of other things." He continued to use it through his second year on TOUR, but now says, "It helped me get over the concentration block, but I don't need it now."

He enjoyed an especially proud moment at last year's Canadian Open. He tied for fifth place, and that represented the best finish by a Canadian in their national championship in 26 years. "It was very gratifying," he said.

Richard started in the game as a 12-year-old caddy. "We lived right across the street from a golf course, and I'd caddy every weekend and also do some work in the golf shop, cleaning clubs, etc. "When I was about 15, the club wanted me to play in some junior tournaments for them, and once I started, I was hooked on competition."

Although he can work the ball both ways, he normally hits it straight, and considers his strengths to be driving accuracy and ball-striking.

PALMER AWARD GOES TO TOM WATSON

Tom Watson, who has won nearly every conceivable golf honor, added the Arnold Palmer Award to his collection in 1984. Winner of three PGA TOUR events during the year, Watson piled up the second greatest money winning total in PGA TOUR history ($476,260). His $530,808 in 1980 stands as the all-time benchmark.

Fourth year pro Mark O'Meara, 76th on the 1983 money winning list, had an outstanding 1984 season and entered the final event at Pensacola with a chance of overtaking Watson for the Palmer Award. However, the Californian failed to make the cut and finished second for the year with $465,873, the third best total in TOUR history.

Watson will receive the Palmer Award at the PGA TOUR's National Awards Dinner. The trophy, a bronze casting of "Arnie", was created by sculptor Jack Worthington of Venice, FL, who presented the original to Palmer in 1980. The first three recipients were Tom Kite, Craig Stadler and Hal Sutton.

1984 PGA TOUR OFFICIAL STATISTICS

Introduced prior to the start of the 1980 season, the PGA TOUR's Official Statistics Program has brought a new dimension to the game. The nine major categories provide a valuable detailed look at the particular skills of TOUR players.

Had it not been for the Official Statistics, for example, only a handful of golf enthusiasts would have recognized Calvin Peete as the game's "most accurate player", prior to his emergence as a four-time winner in 1982. Peete has dominated the greens in regulation and driving accuracy categories the past four years.

Statistics are gathered at each PGA TOUR event by scorers who accompany each threesome. Official Statistician Byron "Fergie" Ferguson handles the job of compiling the raw data, but the tedious manual system he used in the past was replaced by a computer in 1983.

Thanks to the PGA TOUR's working agreement with CompuServe, a leading home computer information provider, Ferguson keys statistical data directly into CompuServe's Columbus, OH, computer center. From there, the information is fed to the TOUR's computer in Ponte Vedra, FL, where the weekly cumulative standings are tabulated.

All Official Statistics information, as well as other interesting data regarding the PGA TOUR, is immediately available to CompuServe home subscribers.

Listed below are the top 50 players in each of the nine performance categories for the 1984 season (minimum of 50 rounds required for listing):

RYDER CUP MATCHES

The Ryder Cup Matches developed from a match played between representatives of the American and British Professional Golfers' Association in England in 1926. That unofficial match, incidentally, was won by the British 13½ to 1½.

Following this highly successful exhibition, Samuel A. Ryder, a wealthy British seed merchant, offered to donate a solid gold trophy bearing his name to be competed for in a series of matches between professionals of the two nations.

From the start of the series through the 1959 Ryder Cup matches, the competition was comprised of four foursome matches one day and eight singles matches the other day, each at 36 holes.

In 1961, the format was changed to provide for four 18-hole foursomes the morning of the first day and four more that afternoon, then for eight 18-hole singles the morning of the second day and eight more that afternoon. As in the past, one point was at stake in each match, so the total number of points was doubled.

In 1963, for the first time, a day of four-ball matches augmented the program to add new interest to the overall competition. This brought the total number of points to 32.

In 1977, the format was altered once again. This time there were five foursomes on the opening day, five four-ball matches on the second day, and ten singles matches on the final day. This reduced the total number of points to 20.

For 1979, eligibility for the Great Britain-Ireland side was expanded to include all British PGA/European TPD members who are residents of European nations.

The 1985 Ryder Cup Matches will be played September 13-15 at The Belfry Golf Club, Sutton Coldfield, England.

THE RYDER CUP

The USA squad is selected based upon an accumulation of Ryder Cup points from the beginning of the calendar year through the PGA Championship. Points are awarded to the first 10 positions in each PGA TOUR event on the following basis:

PGA Championship, U.S. Open and Tournament Players Championship:
1st-115; 2nd-70; 3rd-45; 4th-35; 5th-30; 6th-25; 7th-20; 8th-15; 9th-10;
10th-10.

All other events: 1st-70; 2nd-42; 3rd-28; 4th-21; 5th-18; 6th-14; 7th-11;
8th-10; 9th-8; 10th-6.

If a player who is ineligible finishes in one of those positions, no points are awarded for that position. In order to be eligible, a player must be a U.S. citizen and a member or apprentice of the PGA of America. The PGA Champion and the U.S. Open Champion automatically make the team, provided they are a U.S. citizen.

MEDIA REGULATIONS

General Regulations

The following regulations are to be followed by all members of the Media:

1. Remain close up against gallery ropes in such a way as to appear to be a part of the gallery at all times. An ARM BAND is necessary.
2. Players are not to be distracted during play. DO NOT interview players or ask them to pose for photographs during their round.
3. DO NOT interview players or ask them to pose for photographs during their practice sessions prior to their round except by prior arrangement with the player.
4. Do not disturb players at their 18th green and/or scoring tent until after they have checked, signed and returned their scorecards.

Working Press Regulations

To avoid embarrassment to you and distraction to the contestants:

1. Do not walk or stand in playing areas.
2. Follow directions of marshals and other officials.
3. Do not interview during play. The leading players each day — and others requested — will be interviewed following their rounds in the Press Room interview area.

Tape Recorder Regulations

1. All tape recorder work should be done in the proximity of the Press Room and/or Clubhouse.
2. Tape recorders are NOT permitted in the locker room.
3. Tape recorders are NOT permitted within the playing area of the golf course.
4. If an interview is to be taped in the practice areas, either the range or the putting green, it must be done by prior arrangement with the player and up against the ropes and NOT in the middle of the areas where it could be distracting to other players.

PHOTOGRAPHY REGULATIONS

This Tournament is essentially for the players and spectators. Fair play requires that there be no noise or other distractions. The interests of all others must be subordinated to the players interests. The result of any one shot could decide the Tournament.

Only accredited photographers for RECOGNIZED NEWS MEDIA will be permitted to take pictures during the Tournament. Photography will be restricted to news use. Commercial and personal photography is prohibited (except that spectators may take pictures on practice days and during a Pro-Am).

The following regulations apply to accredited news and television photographers and motion picture cameramen as a condition of the privilege of taking pictures:

General — All Photographers

A photographer must not ask a player to pose during a round.

If a player or an official requests that no photographs be taken in a certain situation, the request must be honored immediately, without discussion.

A camera must not be pointed at a player about to make a stroke in any manner which might tend to distract him or distract his attention.

At the 9th and the 18th greens, photographers must not approach, delay or distract a player until he has checked, signed and returned his scorecard to the proper official. Under the Rules of Golf, a player turning in an incorrect scorecard in stroke play may be disqualified.

Cameras are not permitted in the locker room.

Still Photographers

Only still photographers to whom arm bands have been issued will be permitted inside gallery lines. They must station themselves immediately inside such lines, and not more than an ARM'S LENGTH FROM THE LINES, so as to blend into the gallery and appear to be part of the gallery. They must not take conspicuous positions in the open.

Any photographer who violates this regulation will forfeit the right to enter gallery lines and possibly to work at the tournament.

Close-up action shots are prohibited.

All pictures must be taken at appreciable distances, as far from the players as possible and from angles which are not acute to the line of play.

Pictures, even from a distance, may not be made until the player has completed his stroke. The photographer must not release his camera shutter until the shot is made.

Motion Picture/Videotape Photographers

Motion or videotape pictures may be taken only from areas designated by the PGA TOUR. Motion pictures or videotape may be taken from such locations during a stroke.

Only modern equipment which makes a minimum of noise can be used. Motion picture cameras must be equipped with noise-deadening blimps or hoods.

Use of golf carts by news or television photographers is not permitted during play.

A maximum of two working camera crew members will be permitted per camera.

* * *

Difficulties will be avoided if photographers are fair and will treat players as they themselves would wish to be treated in similar circumstances.

The cooperation of all photographers will be appreciated.
